LEANDER: "Yes, I know. But I have brought MY dog, who will eat him up. Come, get ready! Fly with me!"

2 LEANDER: "See, there he is at it now. Eat him up, Bruto! Come, hurry, Lulu. When he puts a quietus on him we will away."

LULU: "Oh, Leander, I dare not! Popper will hear the dogs fighting. Oh, I know something will happen. Oh, Leander, please go away!"

3 LEANDER: "Ye gods! The brutes have knocked over the ladder! Hold me, Lulu, hold me!"

LULU: "Oh, I knew something would happen!"

POPPER: "Ha, ha! I thought so! Now I'll settle you for keeps, you varlet!"

4. POPPER: "Take that, and that, and that, you night marauder, you kidnapper, you renegade! I'll give you enough elopement!"

LULU: "Oh, Leander, why did you do it"

LEANDER: "Oh, OH! W-E-O-W!"

5. LULU: "Oh, Leander, all is now lost forever!"

POPPER: "A Gatling gun for you the next time you come on these premises!"

LEANDER: "Ye gods! Can naught save me from my fate? NEVERMORE! NEVERMORE!"

Capt. Cupid's "Personally Conducted Tour."

Lo, and Behold! Five Pairs of the Happy Voyagers Who Went Along with Alice Roosevelt on the Romantic Expedition of Mr. Taft Are Married or Mated So Soon as This.

COPYRIGHT 1906 BY FRANCES BENJAMIN JOHNSTON

MRS NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

One couple sought the bow; another picked out the stern; other pairs sought the sides of the vessel, and above it all was the shine of the soft southern moon and Cupid aloft as captain.

MRS MABEL NAGLE.

CUPID sat aloft
As they sailed, as they sailed.

The marriage of United States Senator Winthrop Murray Crane and Miss Josephine Boardman points again to the fact that the famous Taft expedition, whatever its diplomatic object, was, in its results, a voyage into the honeyed land of romance. For out of the happy band of nine young maids and matrons who embarked on ship with Alice Roosevelt, five of them are, in this brief space of time, brides or fiancees.

Surely Cupid was a busy, although an unregistered, passenger on the Taft expedition to the Orient. Five successful campaigns he waged as the ship sailed the broad bosom of the placid Pacific. Five young women have plighted their troth because Cupid shipped with them on the voyage. In Washington they paraphrase the reply of the beautiful woman who, when asked whether she was in love, answered: "No, but I have never been in Venice." Washingtonians who are young and pretty, so worthy targets of Cupid's shafts, when asked whether they are engaged, reply: "No, but, then, you know, I was not on the Taft expedition."

A powerful ally had Cupid in the ponderous and benevolent Secretary himself. For the Secretary believes in marriage, in youth preferably, but at some time surely. He practised matrimony. He preached it. Guests of the Taft expedition say he almost compelled it.

At dinner one night, before their landing at Honolulu, under the guise of a toast, he gave an exhortation on love.

"Life is a landscape that is rosy or gray, according to whether a man is loved or not," he said. "The man who is not loved is a miserable atom in a teeming world. The man who is loved is a god among his fellows. Of course all women are goddesses, whether they are loved or not. But the woman who is, is a goddess that is crowned."

The Pleasure Ship of Captain Cupid.

Such reasoning as this, when persons are already under the spell of the Paradise of the Pacific, fanned by the warm and fragrant Hawaiian airs, under the tropical moon, with the mate calls of tropical birds in their ears, sinks into receptive minds.

Congressman Nicholas Longworth and Miss Alice Roosevelt, sitting side by side, as was already their habit, listened attentively and with assenting smiles. And as soon as coffee had been served they stole away to the stern of the vessel, and, in gazing at the path of the moon in the waters, agreed with the dictum of their host.

Almost at the same moment Miss Mignon Critten and Congressman Swager Sherley, anxious to continue the discussion of so momentous a question, sought the stern of the vessel, and finding it thus occupied, took instead seats in the shadow of an awning at the bow.

Singularly moved by the same impulse, Miss Josephine Boardman, attended by United States Senator Crane, sought the stern, then the bow, and at last the side of the vessel, where they leaned and talked until the path of the moon was no longer in the wake of the vessel.

Finding other quarters occupied for purposes of further consideration of Secretary Taft's proposed measure, Senator Warren guided Mrs. Mabel Nagle to the opposite side of the vessel, there to invite her opinion of Secretary Taft's views.

Bourke Cockran, the Congressman, whispered sweet nothings into the ears of Miss Annie Ide, amidships.

Cupid, poised aloft, smiled under his wing. He knew that, given the convincing words of an after-dinner orator on a subject of vital interest as a beginning, the propinquity of a long ocean voyage and the fragrant airs and soft skies of nights in the tropics as encouraging and fostering influences, and with leisure for other than thoughts of national measures, the gravest statesmen down below were targets worthy his sharpest shafts.

The Cargo of Sweet Young Girls.

There was the daughter of the President of the United States, twenty-two, self-reliant, not at all sentimental other wooers had thought, the girl more prominently in the eye of the public than any other young woman in the world. There was her friend, Mignon Critten, pretty, vivacious, just coquettish enough to be charming, a favorite only second to the President's daughter on board. There was her other friend, Josephine Boardman, intellectual, magnetic, attractive, and yet who had weathered many storms of impending matrimony, whom Cupid had successively designed for the wife of two diplomats, M. Padelia, of the Chilian legation, and Baron Rubido-Zichy, of the Austrian Embassy.

Cupid knitted his brows as he looked at her as she turned a laughing face up in the moonlight while she listened to the words of the grave Senator from Massachusetts. She had laughed at Cupid so often. Would she ever cease laughing? Could it be that she was one of that strange new race of women who were said not to want to marry? Josephine Boardman puzzled Cupid, but he swore in the language of love that she had not baffled him. An admirer who had sworn that he would do anything for her, she had laughingly bidden ride his horse into a banquet hall, and that he had done, but Miss Boardman only laughed and Cupid swore that one day she should laugh no longer.

Miss Annie Ide was the high-hearted laughter-loving daughter of the present Governor-General of the Philippines. Bourke Cockran's tongue for sweetness knows no rival.

Mrs. Mabel Nagle was beautiful and rich. She was half a millionairess. She had married George Nagle, a mining operator, and when they decided that marriage, for them at least, was a failure, he gave to the girl who had been poor when she married him five hundred thousand dollars. There were romances of the mountains clustering about Mrs. Nagle. She was the first white child born in Cheyenne, and the Indians had gathered about her cradle and named her the lily papoose.

All these traditions were pleasing to the man who represented the mountain State in the Senate, Cupid reflected. Certainly the Senator was speaking warmly at that instant, whatever the bill of his advocacy.

MRS SWAGER SHERLEY. (MISS MIGNON CRITTEN)

MRS. WINTHROP MURRAY-CRANE (MISS JOSEPHINE BOARDMAN)

At Honolulu there were some interruptions in the progress of Cupid's affairs. For instance, there were other tourists of the globe who welcomed the beautiful and distinguished young women of the Taft expedition. They danced with them at the hotel hops by moonlight and swam with them in the early morning sunshine on the beach, and rode with them on the long horseback excursions to the mountains and groves in the heart of the island.

So assiduous were these tourists in their attentions that two Congressmen, one from Ohio and one from Kentucky, and the Senators from Massachusetts and Wyoming, were openly glad when the ship swung about, and followed by the garlands and the "Alohas" of the natives, set forth to Japan. Up aloft, as he sailed, Cupid was also glad. He had seen so many auricular complications smoothed out on so long a voyage, particularly a voyage on the peaceful Pacific.

Secretary Taft, in shameless collusion with the little winged god, continued to give toasts that would require after-elucidation on deck. And when the party reached Japan the elements seemed to conspire with the sly god. Japan has been called the garden of romance. The guides, as they take the traveller about among the palaces and gardens, tell stories of love. They recite poems and sing songs of the grand passion. Gradually these five young women, who when they sailed talked of athletics, began to translate amorous Japanese verse into English. From the clear-eyed, singularly unsentimental gaze of the average American girl, they developed some of the side glances and veiled coquetry of Japan. What the voyage, aided by Secretary Taft, had begun, the sojourn in Japan fostered, the homeward voyage completed. On that homeward journey five questions were put by five grave statesmen, and four replies, after some consideration and debate, were: "If papa is willing."

Love Sat at the Helm.

Fortunately, each papa was willing. Hence the marriage of Miss Alice Roosevelt, the first girl in the land, in February. In April there followed, on Staten Island, the marriage of Congressman Swager Sherley to Miss Mignon Critten. In May was rumored the engagement of Senator Warren, of Wyoming, and Mrs. Mabel Nagle. This month occurred the marriage of Miss Josephine Boardman, she who had puzzled Cupid most, to Senator Winthrop Murray Crane, whom no one had believed would ever marry again, since for so long he had mourned the death of his young wife twenty-two years before.

And as the latest of Cupid's triumphs comes the news of still another betrothal growing out of this amorous expedition to the Philippines. From Manila comes the announcement of the engagement of Bourke Cockran, who has been called the golden-tongued orator of the Democratic party, and Representative from New York in Congress, to Miss Annie Ide.

While on the Oriental journey Mr. Cockran was exceedingly attentive to the young woman, but [illegible] answered that the Representative from New York was an admirer of the entire sex. From the general to the particular is the natural trend of human thought, however, and a man cannot be content with mere abstractions while Cupid is up aloft as he sails.

The other young women who were on the trip Cupid keeps a watchful eye upon. Miss Mabel Boardman has more than one suitor. The most devoted is one who accompanied the Taft expedition. Miss Amy MacMillan had two admirers aboard. She spends, it is said, all her leisure in trying to decide between them. Miss Cornelia Harriman, the daughter of E. H. Harriman, although not engaged, is in that process known as the stage of contemplation. Miss Carol Harriman is too young to be engaged. She is still in the thralldom of school and short skirts. But the force of example is tremendous.

Hints for Keeping Cool in Summer and Warm in Winter.

IN their ability to maintain the proper temperature of their bodies, irrespective of external conditions, animals have the better of us. When we wear heavier clothing in cold weather and put on lighter garments in the Spring and Summer, we are still far from enjoying the natural advantages our four-footed friends have in that respect.

It is true that most animals have a heavier coat provided for them in Winter, which becomes thinner as warm weather again approaches, but the result is very different from that in our own case. There is a double advantage in the heavier coat which the animal wears in cold weather. It is solely the product of the animal's own body, its growth being stimulated by the body's own necessities, and its function is therefore as perfect as possible.

The animal really, by this process, manufactures its own weather—which is what we should strive to do for ourselves. The character of our bodily covering is of importance, but not of the greatest importance. It is of chief importance that we give intelligent attention to the simple means by which life is maintained—diet, fresh air and exercise.

That abundance of clothing is not the best protection against cold and changes in the weather is demonstrated in the case of the neck. It is well known that those who muffle the neck in order not to take cold are the very ones that suffer from colds and throat affections; while those who go with the throat nearly or quite bare in all kinds of weather suffer the least. Moreover, anybody who fancies that he is obliged to wrap up the throat because he is delicate, and that those who allow it to be exposed are naturally hardier, can easily demonstrate for himself that he is in error.

Let him apply cold to his throat and neck, always when washing taking particular care to give the back of the neck a thorough drenching with cold water, and he will soon find that exposure of his neck to the weather causes him no more inconvenience than exposure of his face.

Much of the sensitiveness of the body to changes in outside temperature comes from disordered digestion. Inward congestion, due to clogged, torpid bowels, produces a sense of chilliness; and the same condition causes one more readily to succumb to the heat of Summer. Simple diet and active exercise, keeping all the vital organs free to perform their functions, will enable one to enjoy the cold of winter and to be fresh and hearty in midsummer's fiercest heat.

One thing ought especially to be noted, and that is that there is no surer way to have continually cold feet than to practise warming them by the fire. This is very important to keep in mind, since all know that if the feet be warm it is not difficult to keep the rest of the body comfortable. Invalids, who cannot exercise, are compelled to have artificial warmth applied to the feet; but every one who is in a condition to care for himself should invariably warm his feet by walking, running, jumping, striking the feet together, beating the soles or rubbing them vigorously, dipping them alternately in hot and in cold water, or in cold water alone, and then briskly rubbing them, or in some similar way.

As to keeping cool in Summer, it has been proved by many, some of whom live in tropical climates, that a simple, non-stimulating diet, eaten in such quantities and in such a manner that the digestive organs are never overloaded, and the system is kept free from poisons, will make it possible for one to walk or run as far and as swiftly, without discomfort, in the hottest days of Summer as in the coldest days of Winter.

ONE AND ONE HALF TIMES 'ROUND THE EARTH IN A CHASE AFTER HIS IDEAL.

THE FIRST VISION OF HIS IDEAL AT THE TOMB OF NAPOLEON

"'It was in Paris. I stood before the tomb of Napoleon three years ago, and I saw her. She was divine—at least to me. I knew at once that it was the ideal woman that stood before me. She was American. She was a golden girl, golden of hair, golden of skin, flecks of gold in her eyes. I loved her at once, but even as I stood and gazed she vanished.'"

How Just One Glimpse of a Golden-Haired Girl of America Ravished the Heart of the High-Born Julien Dupree of Paris and Sent Him Hurrying and Scurrying Over the Globe to Feel Just Once More the Rapturous Transport of Seeing Her Face Again.

SOMEWHERE in America there is wandering about loose an ideal—dear reader, as they used to say in the old books. Imagine this word written in at least three league high letters and in type as black as night. Only so can its greatness be realized.

Pursuing it is Julien Dupree, of Paris artist, wealthy, handsome, of noble family and very determined, who has caught sight of it only three times, snapped it once and with its photograph resting over his heart and his heart not resting ever, has circled the globe one and one half times in the chase. He is seriously, most in dead earnest.

Automobiles, railroad trains, diligences, camels, jaunting carts, droskys, palanquins and the encyclopedia only know what else M. Dupree has impressed into service in the quest. Detectives he spurns with as much contempt as knightly Launcelot would have shown had Queen Gwen suggested that he hire a substitute to do his grailing.

"Detectives! Police! Hirelings! Bah!" says M. Dupree. "Shall I soil my search with such. It is I myself who must seek and find."

He is the Knight of the Snap-shot and his quest has carried him through France, through Germany, over Egypt, through England and across to Canada and thence back to France again, into Russia twice, into Mexico once, into Spain, away down from bootstring to heel of Italy, and M. Dupree only knows what other corners of the globe.

Three years ago the ideal flashed into his ken. He was gazing on the tomb of Napoleon. Just before him appeared the vision.

It had wavy golden brown hair that gleamed dull aureate in the shadow and shone like living sunbeams in the transfiguration of the amber light of the great stained glass windows behind the altar.

Not to interrupt, but the adjectives, by the way, are all M. Dupree's—as are more to come.

It had eyes that were deep pools of velvety brown flecked with fascinating bits of gold—like stars reflected in an Autumn pool.

It had a skin in which cream and roses blended with golden olive, forming a perfect passe-partout for a ravishing pair of lips.

It's nose was adorably tip tilted.

Its form was all Venuses rolled into one, sublimated, condensed and moulded into one co-ordinate whole.

It was gowned most modishly.

It was American.

It can be said right here that this inventory was compiled by M. Dupree soon after the first shock of revelation. He cannot even now add anything essential to it save metaphors, similes, hyperboles and adjectives. That's all he knew then and that's all he knows now.

The Vision That Haunts M. Dupree.

But to return to the vision. Alas—it is too late, for it has disappeared.

For a week M. Dupree forsook friends and clubs and wandered about the boulevards. One day he was ambling about a suburb, camera under arm. In the middle distance loomed a drinking fountain of ancient and eccentric design. M. Dupree leveled the lens at it and peered into the finder. As he looked an automobile swung into the little circle of the mirror. It stopped and out of it sprang a girl. Straight toward the camera and the fountain and M. Dupree she tripped.

M. Dupree stood transfixed—for it was the vision. Then he pressed the button and prayed that the camera would do the rest.

To the best of its ability it did. But alack, M. Dupree was an amateur, and even he, looking at his snap shot with eyes of faith and adoration, was forced to admit that it was very far from being truthful to the ideal. There was a bad light, said his photographer, and that is what made a smudge on the nose. Oh, there were a lot of defects, but it was the best he could do, and at least it proved a working basis.

To his close friend, Julian Story, the artist, Dupree carried his snapshot. He studied it from all sides but couldn't recognize it. Neither could Madame Emma Eames, his wife. None of the artistic or diplomatic colony knew the original. Some thought there was too much smile and that there were defects in the face. M. Dupree grew indignant at such comment. M. Dupree tried to round out his lack of skill as a photographer by his art training. He drew heads as he remembered it. No one but M. Dupree could see the least resemblance between the snapshot and the sketches.

Mme. Eames Thinks and Thinks.

M. Dupree almost despaired when came the third meeting. In most Parisian outfit he attended a reception at the American Ambassador's. Even as he entered the vision swept past him. She was amplified by two old ladies and an aged gentleman. They entered a carriage and rolled away. M. Dupree dived into another and ordered the coachman to follow. But the carriage had disappeared. M. Dupree rushed back to the Ambassador's and put the servants through the third degree. No result. He quizzed the Ambassador. Alas, alas! no help. Mme. Eames thought and thought.

M. Dupree gritted his teeth, called his valet, wound up his affairs and started on the quest.

Since then a thousand girls seen from the back have made his heart go pit-a-pat; a thousand girls when sighted from the front have made his heart go thump.

Now he has reached America, and, sitting in his suite at the St. James, the really exclusive apartment hotel of Philadelphia, he told his tale thus:

Julian Dupree

Countess Boni de Castellane, who innocently sent M. Dupree on a wild goose chase to Canada; Mme. Emma Eames-Story, who has aided and abetted in the chase, and the face of the Ideal, rough-sketched from his memory by the romantic M. Dupree himself.

The Frenchman's Version of the Chase for the Vision.

"AS Laura was to Petrarch, or as Beatrice to Dante, so is my unknown ideal to me. Alas! they knew their beloved ones' names. I know not mine. I can only seek.

"I seek the girl I have seen but three times. My quest is hard and filled with disappointments and disillusionments. How will it end, I ask myself. Ah, that is the tragedy. I woo a sphinx. Suppose it is that I find her and my ideal falls. She may have a discordant voice, some other flaw—there are a hundred things that could shatter the dream. I may find her too late, she may be another's. She may not care for me when I do find her, and finally—I may never find her. Ah! it is the quest perilous. But still I seek and will seek on.

"I hesitate so to sew my heart upon my sleeve, as the English say, but I feel that it is necessary if I am to stay in your country. I am deluged with the letters and the photographs ever since an indiscreet news man first told the story. They come to me each day, scores of these letters. They wait for me when I go from the hotel—these sleuths, you call them—and women with and without missions, and the impecunious and what you call the crank. And these letters here come from a woman in Norristown, who encloses her photograph with the hope that she looks enough like the ideal to do.

"Therefore, I think it best to say, there is but this one girl. Decidedly none other will do. When I see her I will know her. I intend to carry on my seach myself. I want no help from police, from detectives or any one else. All I want is that I be allowed to seek in peace. Therefore, I show the world what my ideal is like and tell my story. And then let every one know that no other will do.

"I am rich and an artist by choice. I am of the best blood of France. I am not what you call crank nor adventurer. I have simply seen that which I want best in the world, and intend to claim it if I can do so honorably. I search for it.

"I believe in the ideal—in the one woman in the world for the one man. I have been so fortunate as to see and know.

"It was in Paris. I stood before the tomb of Napoleon three years ago, and I saw her. She was divine—at least to me. I knew at once that it was the ideal woman that stood before me. She was American. She was a golden girl, golden of hair, golden of skin, flecks of gold in her eyes. I loved her at once, but even as I stood and gazed she vanished.

"I returned to my studio a new man in a new world. I haunted the boulevards. I separated myself from my friends. They said of me, 'he contemplates some masterpiece.' So I did, but not what they meant.

"I haunted the boulevards. I went one day to Auteuil with my camera, with which sometimes I amuse myself. There is an old fountain there and I levelled at it the camera. Then as I watched in the little finder I felt a strange sweet influence come over me. I stood as though the hypnotism had found me. In the little finder I saw an automobile. Still I did not look up. Only my soul said to me, 'She is near.' Ah it was true. She stepped from the automobile and advanced toward me. Mechanically almost, but with a prayer, I touched the button. She had been coming toward me smiling, her veil flying in the wind. She saw me snap her and fled back to the automobile.

"Quickly I took the film to the developer. It was not a good picture. Regretfully do I confess it. But at least it was something. I took it to my dearest friends among the Americans—to Julian Story, to his charming wife, Madame Eames, to one and all. None knew her. But I had made up my mind to find. I haunted the boulevards again.

All Over the World in Quest of Her.

"Then I attended a reception at the American Ambassador's. There I saw her again, but once again she escaped me. I bribed, I cajoled, I pleaded. None knew her.

"Then there was one, an American, who, looking at the snap shot, said he thought he had seen such a girl at Cairo. Immediately with my valet to Egypt I went. I sought there at Cairo, at Karnak, at Thebes. No success. I returned to Cairo and there—no matter how—I was told something that made me determine to go to England. I went bearing letters of introduction to the American colony of London. There some there were who thought they knew her. She had gone to Mexico with her parents, they said. I went then quickly to Mexico, I and my valet. I found in Mexico City the young American they had meant. She was charming, indeed yes. But she was not the girl I had seen at the tomb.

"Back to Paris and, sad, so very sad, went I. Again I looked and searched and dreamed. There was a friend at the American Embassy to whom I showed my precious picture. 'Ha,' said he. 'It is the easy mark, mon cher. She is Mademoiselle So-and-So'—you understand I give no names. 'She is now at St. Petersburg. Cheer you up, mon cher, I know her well,' said he. I was encouraged. He was so what the English call cock sure. To Petersburg went I. I also found the demoiselle. She looked no more like my vision than do I myself.

"It was with rage, bitter rage, my friend, that I returned to Paris. I sought out the American. Almost I challenged him to the duel. I was bitter, but he was so contrite I forgave. Said he to me, 'You know the Castellane. Go to the wife of Boni and ask her. Perhaps she will know.'

"Said the Countess, 'It is familiar. It is not the good picture. There is a smudge on the nose. But I seem to recognize it.' She thought and rubbed her pretty brow. Said I, 'I am in readiness to go anywhere.' On what she told me I went to Canada. Alas, it was but another disappointment. But I crossed Canada and sailed again to the Orient. I went over the beaten route and mixed always with the Americans. I asked discreetly. But, alas! Nothing did I find. Not even on Atlantic City's boardwalk, tramped by tens of thousands.

"What shall I do when I find her? Ah, if I find her. I shall tell her all, of my quest, of my travail. I shall show that poor little photograph that is but a shadow of her. I shall tell how I have sketched and painted and thought of only her. I shall offer her my life, my soul.

"I think it will touch her, this devotion, this story. Then I shall make her my wife and carry her back with me to France.

"If it touches her not—ah, why think of that. Why should a man who seeks heaven think of hades. And at least I shall have my memories.

"But until I find—I seek."

Julien Dupree.

JOHN NICHOLAS BROWN AND HIS MOTHER

If You Were 6-Year-Old John Nicholas Brown of Newport, "the Ten-Million-Dollar Baby," and Your Worrying Mother Wouldn't Let You Have Any Firecrackers, or Even Torpedoes, on Fourth of July, for Fear You Would Get Hurt; and You Were Kept in the Yard All Day Guarded by Nurses and Governesses and Servants, and, in Spite of All, You Fell Down on the Lawn and Broke Your Arm---

WOULDN'T YOU WISH THEY WOULD LET YOU HAVE A GOOD TIME LIKE OTHER CHILDREN?

"Master Brown had cast his eye upon a low trellis affair which offered a footing from which he was sure he could gain the top of the wall and an uninterrupted view of the spot where the Eagle was screaming its loudest.

"Before you could say Jack Robinson the little millionaire had scrambled up and thrown himself on his stomach on the wall's flat top, his short legs kicking in the atmosphere of his hated millions and his hands almost withing reach of the shaggy topnots of a bunch of town boys in the very act of setting off a Grand Combination Impromptu Piece composed of three cannon crackers, four whole packs of smaller ones, a regardless extravagance of nigger chasers, while cap pistols and pocketfuls of torpedoes were ready to bring up the reserves of glorious uproar. * * *

"Then he felt a firm hand on one of his legs."

SUPPOSING you were the richest little boy in all the world, with a big house at Newport, and no end of servants to wait on you, and the finest toys money can buy to play with, and money enough in your bank to buy a million dollars' worth of firecrackers for the glorious Fourth, and your mamma wouldn't let you have any fireworks at all for fear you'd get hurt, and you were kept in the house or the yard all day while the street boys were shooting crackers, pistols and torpedoes, and having the most glorious time imaginable——

And then supposing that while you were being carefully kept out of all share in celebrating the holiday which all boys love best, for fear you might get a splinter in your finger, you fell down and broke your arm—WOULDN'T THAT JAR YOU?

And this is exactly what happened on this last Fourth to little John Nicholas Brown, who, as everybody knows, is so rich that when he comes of age he will be master of at least $50,000,000.

"I didn't have a single firecracker," said Master Brown when the surgeons had set the bones of his broken arm and encased the injured member in a stiff jacket of plaster of paris. "I didn't have a torpedo—my, I wish I had!"

It was plain that Master Brown did not consider that his wounds were honorable ones. He had no pride at all in that broken arm. It was true that he got it on the Fourth of July, but not in celebration of the great day. He would rather have been half torn to pieces by cannon crackers—that would have been in glory's cause. Besides, he indignantly spurned the assertion that he was too young to be trusted with fireworks.

Glory Just Over the Wall.

"People call me 'Baby Brown,'" he complained, with indignation. "I'm not a baby. I'm six years old, I am. I could shoot off firecrackers just as well as those boys on the other side of that old wall."

It will be a long time before Master Brown can gaze with equanimity at that rear wall which marks the boundary of his splendid Newport estate. Just over that wall, all day and far into the evening of the Fourth, ragged little boys of the town, with hardly a penny to their names, blackened themselves gloriously with burnt powder.

They were tattered and dirty, often hungry, perhaps, but they were freeborn Americans. On the great day of Independence they were free to beg or buy every conceivable thing that would make a noise—free to blow themselves to kingdom come; and not one of them, even the raggedest and dirtiest, with whom Millionaire Master Brown would not gladly have changed places.

On his side of the wall was the great house which celebrated architects had planned for his special use. It was overrun with servants hired to wait upon him. His playroom occupied almost the entire third floor and was crammed with costly toys.

How He Envied the Town Boys.

On his side of the wall, too, were the stables where his pony and his carriage horses were kept; and the thoroughbred cow that gave milk for his personal use grazing in a Newport pasture worth a hundred thousand dollars; and a private park for him to play in, with a little lake with ducks and geese swimming in it, where Master Brown could be rowed in a swan boat merely by issuing his orders to one of the footmen.

But on his side of the wall there was no Fourth of July—no crackers, no torpedoes, no cap pistols, no "nigger chasers." All these glories were over the wall, where bare-legged, tattered, supremely happy little town boys were free in the dusty road.

On his side of the wall everything was painfully neat and clean and orderly. All the clothing was fumigated at frequent intervals, and all the food that Master Brown ate and whatever he drank were sterilized so that no disease microbe might menace the health of the sole heir to all the Brown millions. Even the milk that he drank fresh from his cow was sterilized, and the cow herself drank only sterilized water.

Who can blame Master Brown if he reflected cynically on all this splendor on the Fourth of July as he hovered near that cruel wall and heard the town boys banging away with their fireworks and shrieking from pure patriotic happiness?

He was not too young to remember, as he had often been told, that his continued healthful existence was of the utmost importance; that he was the last direct male survivor of the immensely rich and distinguished Brown family of Rhode Island; that his grandfather, Nicholas Brown, had built ships at his own expense to fight against Great Britain in the war of the Revolution; that his father was also the parent of Brown University, and that his own first public act had been to hold in his baby hands the trowel with which the cornerstone was laid, amid the cheers of six hundred students.

Master Brown could remember that day and how he answered the students' cheers with shouts of "'Rah; 'rah! 'rah!"

But how unimportant all this seemed now to Master Brown as he stood there on the wrong side of that wall and heard the bang of cannon crackers and the "zip-z-z-z-ip z-z-s-z-zip!" of "nigger chasers."

Oh, yes, indeed, a million dollars for just one of those cannon crackers! Wouldn't he just love to set it off under the coattails of the footman who was watching him now out of the tail of his eye?

Would Master Brown like to go rowing in his swan boat?

Master Brown would NOT like to go rowing in his swan boat!

Wouldn't Master Brown like to go riding about the grounds on his little pony?

Watched by Nurse and Footman.

Master Brown's pony might go eat himself to death!

How would Master Brown like to go driving with mamma on the avenue?

Master Brown would NOT like to go driving with mamma! If Master Brown could not have firecrackers Master Brown would thank them kindly to let him alone!

The particular domestic of the Brown household who was most particularly charged with the duty of seeing that Master Brown did not for a single instant get beyond reach of the arm of authority almost rebelled from pure sympathy. The wall that shut out the glorious Fourth was high. He would let Master Brown get what consolation he might out of the cold stones of the unpatriotic wrong side of it.

Was there ever in this world a more pathetic situation? Think of this poor boy, American boy to the core, with a long line of patriotic ancestors to fill his blood with rich germs of red, white and blue loyalty, who, just because he is heir to millions and the last male of his race, must renounce his most precious birthright—fireworks on the Fourth of July!

With the Wisdom of the Serpent.

It takes critical occasions to bring out unsuspected traits of character. As the bang banging over the wall increased in rapidity and intensity of the discharges Master Brown felt developing rapidly in his brain the wisdom of the serpent.

He rose from the grass, walked resolutely away from the wall to a space of close-cropped turf and began tossing his favorite rubber ball, all in such seeming content that the very particular nurse and the most particular footman on guard were completely deceived. With a crafty smile in his sleeve Master Brown saw them take themselves out of his sight. Then, while tossing his ball, he gradually approached the wall, listening intently for premonitions of great things about to happen on the other side.

He could hear the happy, excited voices. Now it was coming!

Master Brown had cast his eye upon a low trellis affair which offered a footing from which he was sure he could gain the top of the wall and an uninterrupted view of the spot where the Eagle was screaming its loudest. Before you could say Jack Robinson the little millionaire had scrambled up and thrown himself on his stomach on the wall's flat top, his short legs kicking in the atmosphere of his hated millions and his hands almost within reach of the shaggy topknots of a bunch of town boys in the very act of setting off a Grand Combination Impromptu Piece composed of three cannon crackers, four whole packs of smaller ones, a regardless extravagance of nigger chasers, while cap pistols and pocketfuls of torpedoes were ready to bring up the reserves of glorious uproar.

"Hi, fellers, it's Brownie!" exclaimed one of the bunch, the one whose face was most patriotically black.

"Let her go! Let her go!" said Master Brown in great excitement.

"That's right," echoed half a dozen tattered little boys. "Let her go! 'Rah fer de Fourt'!"

"Here goes," said the bigger boy, who appeared to be master of ceremonies, and he touched off a bunch of nigger chasers.

How they s-s-z-s-z-d in the dust of the road! How Master Brown kicked up his heels on the wall and yelled: "'Rah! 'rah!"

Then the small crackers began popping, to the accompaniment of cracking pistols and torpedoes.

"'Rah! 'rah! 'Rah for the Fourth!" yelled Master Brown, sniffing the odorous smoke, to his mind the rarest perfume ever distilled.

Bang! It was a cannon cracker, almost under Master Brown's nose, filling his nose and ears with burnt powder. But he never winced.

Bang! Bang! More cannon crackers. Master Brown, being nearest to the firing line, had a face as black as a coal heaver's. But, oh, he was happy. None of the town boys yelled with the pure joy of the little millionaire. This was worth all his millions. He would throw discretion to the winds—he would get down with the boys on the right side of that wall.

Then he felt a firm hand on one of his legs. He kicked out with all his might—kicked his own most particular nurse right in the face. She screamed, but took a firmer grip.

Master Brown looked around, determined to plant his kicks to better purpose. To his chagrin and righteous indignation he saw the very particular footman running to the rescue at full speed. Master Brown knew it was all over. Sullenly he slid down into the nurse's arms, who gave one look at his blackened face and fell back on the grass in a dead faint.

It was the very particular footman who led Master Brown to his horrified mamma while the most particular nurse was being brought to.

"John Nicholas Brown!" exclaimed his mamma. But Mamma Brown didn't faint. She personally superintended a general cleaning and especial inspection of Master Brown's person. To her great relief, there wasn't a scratch on him. This, however, did not save Master Brown from a lecture on the dangers of lockjaw and several other terrible things he might have got at that vulgar celebration over the wall.

Toward evening Master Brown was permitted to take a little run on the sterilized grass of the lawn. At the sixth step he stubbed his toe on a sterilized cobble stone, which rolled just far enough so he could fall on it and break his arm.

Wouldn't that jar you? Did ever such irony of fate pursue a genuine American boy on the Fourth of July? Can you beat it?

How Disease Germs in Railroad Sleeping Cars Are to Be Abolished.

IT has remained for the State of Texas to take radical measures against the long complained-of unsanitary methods of the Pullman sleeping-car officials. No human power, of course, can say how much disease is spread by sleeping cars, whose heavy carpets, curtains, draperies and thick cushions are most admirably conceived to collect and hold the germs of tuberculosis, pneumonia, grip, measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. Such people are constantly travelling and infecting the unsanitary draperies, and the Pullman car is the secret of the source of many a disease which develops a few days after a railroad trip.

Here are the new rules for sleeping cars just put in force in Texas by State Health Officer George R. Tabor:

1. Each sleeping car used for passengers must be provided with at least one cuspidor for each section or compartment; cuspidors to be emptied and cleansed thoroughly at the end of each trip, or every twenty four hours.

2. The floors of all cars may be swept in transit, provided that they are first thoroughly sprinkled with water, to prevent raising dust. If it be desired to remove rubbish or trash with broom and dust pan from portions of the car while in transit, sprinkling will not be necessary. Dusting of cars with a brush is prohibited, but it may be removed from walls and seats with a cloth.

3. Containers of water for drinking in cars must be emptied and thoroughly cleansed at the end of each trip.

4. Ice which is used in water coolers in cars must not be dumped on floors, sidewalks or car platforms, where people have to tread and expectorate. It should be handled with ice tongs to place it in the coolers.

5. All persons are prohibited from spitting upon the floors of cars.

6. All sleeping cars must be disinfected in a manner approved by this department at the end of each third round trip, where the cars do not leave the State of Texas.

Sleeping cars leaving the State are to be fumigated every second trip, where the trips are of not more than four days' duration, and every trip if of longer than four days' duration, and every third trip if only one night run.

Sleeping cars crossing the State are to be fumigated each round trip of six to eight days' duration, and at the end of each single trip where round trip is of more than eight days' duration.

All carpets, curtains, blankets and bedding, except linen, to be disinfected with cars.

Provided, that when any sleeping car is known to carry a case of infectious or communicable disease, it must be fumigated at the end of that trip, or it may be disconnected from train and fumigated at any station if required by this department.

7. All sleeping cars must be thoroughly cleansed at the end of each trip.

8. In the event that sleeping cars passing through the State are not fumigated at the terminals outside of the State, as required in rule six, then they will be required to stop at some point inside of the State of Texas, approved by this department, for fumigation.

9. All persons must be prohibited from washing their teeth over or expectorating in the basins which are used for bathing face and hands in sleeping cars. Large cuspidors should be provided for such purposes.

The following sanitary rules for day coaches have been put in force:

1. Each day coach used for passengers must be provided with at least six cuspidors; cuspidors to be emptied and cleansed thoroughly at the end of each trip, or every twenty-four hours.

This rule shall not apply to parlor cars, except that cuspidors must be provided for the smoking compartment.

2. The floors of all cars may be swept in transit, provided that they are first thoroughly sprinkled with water to prevent raising dust. If it be desired to remove rubbish or trash with broom and dust pan from portions of the car while in transit sprinkling will not be necessary. Dusting of cars with a brush is prohibited, but it may be removed from walls and seats with a cloth.

3. Containers of water for drinking in cars must be emptied and thoroughly cleansed at the end of each trip.

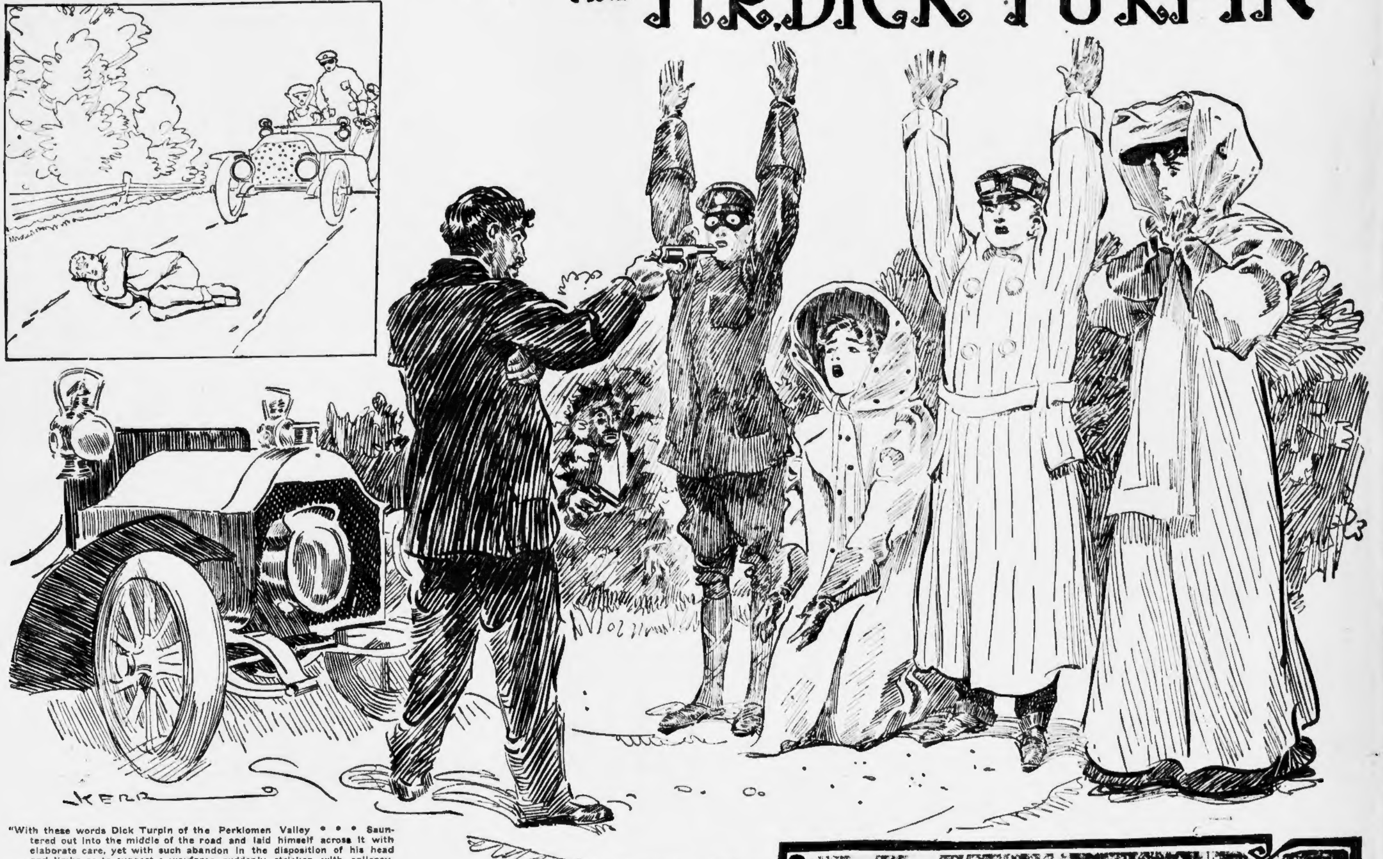
4. Ice which is used in water coolers in cars must not be dumped on floors, sidewalks, or car platforms where people have trod and expectorated. It should be handled with ice tongs to place it in the coolers.

5. All persons are prohibited from spitting upon the floors of cars.

6. Day-coaches used for passengers must be fumigated whenever the necessity exists, at some point in this State acceptable to this department.

If a car becomes infected by being occupied by a person having a contagious disease, it must be disinfected immediately at end of run.

THE FIRST MEETING OF THE MOTORCAR AND MR. DICK TURPIN



"With these words Dick Turpin of the Perkiomen Valley * * * Sauntered out into the middle of the road and laid himself across it with elaborate care, yet with such abandon in the disposition of his head and limbs as to suggest a wayfarer suddenly stricken with epilepsy. There he lay while Jim's anxious eyes, peering out from among the bushes, watched for the coming of the swift-moving prey."

"MEEKLY THE TOURISTS GOT OUT OF THE MACHINE THAT HAD NEVER STOPPED AT SUMMMONS OF A CONSTABLE, AND LINED UP AT THE SIDE OF THE ROAD."

"Why, Its Some Poor, Helpless Unfortunate," Cried the Soft-Hearted Ladies; BUT the "'Possum" Sprang Up, a Live Man with a Gun, and Proceeded to "Hold up" the Whole Motor Car Party.

WHO will be the literary chronicler of the daring, dashing deeds of the new Dick Turpin? Where is the Bulwer who will do justice to the intellectual highwayman of these scientific, electric-lighted, ninety-miles-an-hour automobile days, to the witty and resourceful Paul Clifford, of the Perkiomen Valley thicket-fringed roads, almost at the front door of Philadelphia?

Who will write the songs of the people telling in imperishable rhyme of the genius who had made "Other times, other manners," his motto, and finds a means to hold up swift touring cars, which no policeman can catch, as easily as Dick Turpin took possession of a travelling gentleman's coach and four in the good old days?

"Oh, sweeter than honey
Is other men's money."

That's the powerful sentiment that has now redeemed the noble art of the highwayman from desuetude. Dick o' the Road sang it. So did Paul Clifford. Now it is set to a new tune that is up to date in the Perkiomen Valley. But, alas! the bold singer is nameless, being still at large. In all the plodding world his face is known only to these still dazed auto tourists:

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred C. Costello, Miss Sybil Grayman, and Mr. M. C. Stanhope. Hats off to these names, so picturesquely distinguished.

The shades of night were falling fast in the Perkiomen Valley as Mr. Costello's touring party whizzed over the thicket-bordered road. A man with a tin star on his breast jumped into the middle of the road and waved his arms.

The Constable Was Discreet.

"My dear," said Mrs. Costello, "is it possible that we're exceeding the speed limit?"

"Not yet, but soon," grinned her husband, and he let out another notch.

The rural constable was more agile than steadfast in duty, and thus was saved.

"Sic semper tyrannis," applauded Mr. Stanhope.

"You are right," said Miss Grayman, who is no prettier than she is spirited in her defense of the rights of automobilists. "There is no such tyrant as the country constable."

"That reminds me," observed Mr. Costello; "up to date the touring car has proved too much for the honest highwayman too."

"Oh," shuddered Mrs. Costello, whose taper fingers were decked with gems of price. "Oh, dear, are there highwaymen nowadays?"

"What do we care?" said Mr. Costello, letting out another link of speed.

"But these roadside thickets afford splendid shelter for outlaws," said the lady. "Couldn't they"——

"How on earth could they stop us?" broke in her husband, touching the lever again.

"Other times, other manners." The lady did well to shudder and think of her diamonds. Did her woman's intuition bring to her a vague premonition of what was occurring in one of these roadside thickets a mile further on? Hours afterward when the party had pulled their shaken nerves together they pictured it to themselves thus:

Two ill-clad figures were huddled among the bushes close by the road. Rough but resolute faces, thrust now and then through a curtain of leaves, scanned the roadway up and down.

Highwaymen Extraordinary.

"Nuthin' doin', Bill," growled one.

"Two rattling old buggies and three farm wagons in an hour," grumbled Bill. "What's become of all the whiz carts, I wonder. Put your ear to the ground, Jim. I think I hear something."

"Right you are, Jim. She's tootin' for the turn half a mile back. It'll soon be too dark—we must take this one."

"Will you do the trick, Jim, or will I? Gee! if the driver should lift his eyes off the track at the wrong time!" And Jim shivered.

"I'll do it," said Bill, gruffly. "Have your gun ready and don't you go to sleep!"

With these words Dick Turpin, of the Perkiomen Valley, did an extraordinary thing in the most nonchalant manner conceivable. He sauntered out into the middle of the road and laid himself across it with elaborate care, yet with such abandon in the disposition of his head and limbs as to suggest a wayfarer suddenly stricken with epilepsy. There he lay while Jim's anxious eyes, peering out from among the bushes, watched for the coming of their swift-moving prey.

"Surely," Mrs. Costello was going on anxiously, "an ingenious highwayman ought to be able to find some means of stopping an automobile. Can't you see that that would be all he would have to do to have us at his mercy? Travellers don't go about in automobiles armed to the teeth as they did in the old coaching days. I remember that it was about here that my great-grandfather was held up and robbed in spite of his sword and a double-loaded blunderbuss. I don't suppose we have more than a couple of penknives to defend ourselves with."

"Oh, I have a hatpin," laughed Miss Grayman.

"And I know a few jiu jitsu dodges," said Mr. Stanhope, putting up his muscle for Miss Grayman to feel.

"Quit your kiddin'," said Mr. Costello between puffs at his cigar.

A Dying Man in the Road.

Then he tooted his horn and rounded the curve. There was a long, clear stretch of road ahead. But soon Mrs. Costello exclaimed:

"Look, dear—is that a shadow across the road where the tall trees are, or a dangerous obstacle?"

Prudently Mr. Costello reduced his speed.

"It is a man, dear—a man lying in the road."

Mr. Costello sounded a volley of warnings. The man did not move.

"By Jove, he's dead—or dead drunk," said Mr. Stanhope. "You can never get around him, Costello."

Mr. Costello jammed on the brakes. It was barely in time. As the big machine slid up to within a foot of the prostrate figure Mrs. Costello shrieked:

"Look! There's a man hiding in the bushes. I just now saw his ugly face."

The car was at a dead stop. The man in the road leaped lightly to his feet and the man in the bushes was by his side in three jumps. Mr. Costello and Mr. Stanhope discovered that they were looking into the barrels of two revolvers. They were too astonished to do anything but look.

"Hands up!" commanded the man who had lain in the road.

Mr. Costello's hand sought a lever, while his teeth snapped; but Mrs. Costello, with a little scream, brushed it off. Thinking better of it, Mr. Costello lifted both his hands, but his teeth still gritted.

"Mr. Stanhope," said Miss Grayman, calmly, "you'd better put up your hands—there's nothing in them."

Mr. Stanhope put up his hands, looking very sheepish.

"Get out all of you," said Dick o' the Road.

Meekly the tourists got out of the machine that had never stopped at summons of a constable, and lined up at the side of the road.

Watchful, but Courteous.

"Take this, Jim, and use 'em both if anybody makes a move," said the master of ceremonies, as he thrust his weapon into his comrade's other hand.

"I'm on, Bill," said the other, covering the party quite comprehensively with both revolvers.

"Gentlemen," said Mrs. Costello, "I've nothing of value but these rings. If you please, I'd like to keep the gold one."

"I certainly respects a lady's weddin' ring," said Bill, pocketing the others—"hey, Jim, keep your eye on the gent with the goggles, 'cause he's nervous and seems to have reckless notions."

Mr. Costello subsided.

"Really I'm sorry, gentlemen, but I left my rings at home," said Miss Grayman in her politest manner.

"Any lady's word goes with me," said Bill, gallantly, as he began going through Mr. Costello's pockets.

Bill manifested considerable pleasure over the cash contributions of the gentlemen of the party.

"Stow your guns, Jim," he said, having completed his task. "These gents is unarmed, and you're makin' the ladies nervous."

Jim, smiling agreeably, lowered the two revolvers.

"I suppose," said Miss Grayman to the highwaymen, "that you have now no objection to our proceeding on our journey?"

"Not at all, mum," said Bill. "The walkin's fine, an' it's only five miles to Philadelphia."

"The walking?" stammered Mr. Costello, getting red in the face.

"Yes," said Bill. "My pardner an me has an important engagement with the President in Washington, and we're reluctantly obliged to borry your whiz cart. Get in, Jim."

Bill was already in the chauffeur's seat. The spectacle so enraged Mr. Costello that he lost his presence of mind—but Jim promptly restored it to him with a smart rap with the butt of one of his revolvers. And the next instant there was only a cloud of dust to indicate the whereabouts of the rapidly vanishing automobile. Miss Grayman was first to find her voice.

"It is quite true, the walking is good," and she picked up her skirts.

Mr. Costello began to use strong language, but his wife soothed him, and the party set out silently on their five-mile walk to the City of Brotherly Love, but with no brotherly loving sentiments toward the highwaymen.

Half an hour brought them to the crossing of Perkiomen Creek, in the bottom of which, wheels up, lay Mr. Costello's joy and pride, his fast touring car.

"Oh, the poor men!" exclaimed Mrs. Costello. "Their lives have been the forfeit for their crime."

"Nonsense," said her husband. "They knew they couldn't take the car far without betraying themselves. They've got away in the best kind of shape, and by sending the car into the creek they've given themselves another hour before we can set the police on to them. I take off my hat to 'Bill' and to 'Jim.' Dick Turpin was a fool to that pair."

Probably Mr. Costello's hat is still off, for the police have not yet found the slightest clew to the identity of the two geniuses first to thus humble the proud automobile, which may still defy the law, but not the lawless.

How to Be Photographed at Your Best.

ACTRESSES' photographs always do them justice and often flatter the original, while photographs of many women in private life are apt to be stiff and unnatural, ignoring good points and accentuating bad ones. That is because the average actress is past-mistress of the art of posing to the camera, which is part of her business. For other women these hints will prove valuable:

It is unwise to wear a new dress. It always falls in awkward folds.

Whenever possible, it is money well spent to drive to the photographer's.

A feather boa or a lace fichu has a wonderfully softening effect on the features.

Above all, if you want your picture to have a natural expression, you must forget where you are.

Generally speaking, the head and shoulders make a far prettier picture than a full length portrait.

Posing a Model in the Studio of a Great New York

THE tragedy of the shooting of Stanford White by Harry Thaw, the young husband goaded to madness by the treatment of his girl wife, has revealed a peril that threatens the innocence and happiness of American girls of the poorer classes in a truly appalling degree.

The tragedy has revealed this peril, but it has not as yet called attention strongly to it, because the dramatic features of the case, the prominence of the actors concerned and the legal questions involved are as yet too acutely interesting to permit the public to consider the great moral and social evil that lies beneath it.

This peril is the temptation offered under the guise of artistic employment by the boundless wealth of New York to every girl with a pretty face. It is a peril infinitely more dangerous than any direct temptation to sin can be, for it appeals to those who are young, pure and absolutely innocent both in fact and intention, and has been the means of ruining and destroying the lives of countless thousands of them.

Needless to say this country is filled with pretty girls who are beginning life with no means, no training and no definite prospect of earning any better living than the $6 or $7 a week paid for hard, dull work in store or factory. They learn that they can make a good living—amounting to as much as five or ten dollars a day—without labor, merely by exhibiting their faces. Is it to be expected that the poor little girls will refuse such offers?

There are two principal ways in which a pretty girl may make a living as a model—one is as an artists' model, the other as a photographers' model. It is difficult to say in which of these two ways she runs the greatest risk of ruin. As an artists' model, apart from the dangers that necessarily attach to such an occupation, however honestly conducted, she will come under the observation of a vast number of men of the Stanford White type, bogus artists and hangers-on of artists who spend their lives and their fortunes hunting down youthful innocence. As a photographers' model she will be equally subject to the attentions of these men, and her charms will be scattered from one end of the country to the other, where they will excite the interest of unscrupulous men, who would not otherwise know of them, and who will seek to find the owner with the help of the photographer.

There are many kinds of studios in New York, some of which are illustrated on this page. There are studios like that of Mr. Richard Hall, the portrait painter, shown here, and like that of Mr. Augustus St. Gaudens, the great sculptor, where the true service of art is the only concern of those who frequent them. There are other studios, legitimate in a sense, but where the artists have not the high principles, pure artistic aims and sense of self-control that would make them fitting employers of youthful models.

A startling illustration of the perverted use of a legitimate studio was furnished by the famous "Girl in the Pie Dinner." It was given at the Carbon Studio of James Lawrence Breese, No. 5 West Sixteenth street, who is noted for his artistic carbon photographs, and is prominent in fashionable society. This affair, ingeniously planned to amuse a party of New York men-about-town, wrecked the life of an innocent sixteen-year-old girl. The following well known men were present at this entertainment, among whom one should note the ominous name of Stanford White:

John Elliot Cowdin, Robert Reid, J. Alden Weir, Cooper Hewitt, Henry W. McVickar, Augustus St. Gaudens, Stanford White, Charles F. McKim, Charles Dana Gibson, John D. Cheever, William Astor Chanler, W. Rutherford Mead, Robert Bacon, J. Kennedy Tod, George E. Perkins, William T. Lawson, John H. Twacatman, Rene La Montagne, Whitney Warren, Thomas L. Manson, Jr., James Barnes, Henry C. Mortimer, R. Suydam Grant, Alfred L. Collins, Edward Simmons, Willard Metcalf, John Greenough and John Ames Mitchell.

The guests had consumed most of the five bottles of champagne provided for each. The coffee was brought in and cigars lighted. The diners were feeling a trifle somnolent. Something really unusual was needed to stir up their interest in life.

Suddenly there was a knocking at the door.

"Come in," was the response. The doors opened and six waiters entered, bearing what appeared to be a gigantic pie. The pie-bearers advanced solemnly down the centre of the room, and after much shuffling of chairs deposited their burden in the centre of the table.

It was apparently a beautiful pie of mammoth size, but not of the ordinary shape, for it was in the form of a sphere. The crust was brown and flaky, and the aroma was delicious.

Tragedy of "the Girl in the Pie."

The head waiter, with a solemnity and importance born of the possession of a stupendous secret, advanced to the table and with a quick movement cut the crust of the pie with a silver knife. The pie divided as if by magic, and, falling apart, disclosed Susie Johnson, the sixteen-year-old model. A great bevy of canaries, which had been enclosed with her, flew into the room and perched on the easels, on the pictures anywhere they could find refuge.

Then there was a great shout—a tribute of applause to the man who had planned the surprise—and the young model was lifted from the table to the floor.

She was dressed in filmy black gauze. Perched on her head was a blackbird. Quick as a flash "Sing a Song of Sixpence" was struck up and sung and resung.

And this was Susie Johnson's first introduction to fashionable Bohemia. A banker led her to a chair. An artist held a glass of champagne to her lips.

Two days after the studio dinner Susie Johnson disappeared from home. Her mother made the rounds of the studios, but without finding her. The Gerry Society interested itself in looking for the missing model, and the police made a search for her, but without any result. After a few months of a model's life and many cruel experiences Susie Johnson became disgusted with it. She was afraid to return home, and so she went for help to Mrs. G. S. Perhacs, of No. 210 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, the wife of an artist who had treated her kindly. For two years she lived happily as a companion in the Perhacs home. Then she married a young member of a theatrical firm.

Anxious to bury the wretched past, the poor girl had foolishly omitted to tell her husband about the pie episode and its sequences. He learned the facts himself and angrily cast her off.

"We only lived together a few months," said Susie Johnson in a statement to a newspaper reporter. "He left me when he heard of the pie affair. I do not blame him, only I loved him too well to have ever treated him so.

"Before I became a model I was earning $2.50 in a braid factory. As a model I found I could make all I pleased for a short time; but any girl who gives up honest work, however poorly paid, for a model's life is likely to repent it as I do."

And now Susie Johnson lies in Potter's Field.

One of the guests at "the pie dinner" was an artist named Robert Reid, who, strange to say, has won considerable success as a church decorator. His studio at the Gibson Studios, in East Thirty-third street, has become noted for what are euphemistically described as "unique artistic entertainments." Mr. Reid gave a dinner to fifteen girls and fifteen men, including Stanford White. The girls were arrayed in diaphanous costumes, representing, it was said, characters in Mr. Reid's paintings. The festivities began with a grand march, followed by dancing of the flowing and artistic kind known as the "Cachuca." The men guests applauded so wildly and the expressmen made so much noise carrying in the champagne that a neighbor complained to the police. Captain "Mike" Naughton, of the East Thirty-fifth street police station, sent detectives on the run to raid the place.

The names of the girls present on that occasion were: Indiola Arnold, Elba Kenny, Gertrude Grant, Claire Pitt, Venus Arnold, Elizabeth Young, Daisy Carson, Veda Whitmore, Ocia Thompson, Edith Lilja, Edna Birch, Eleanor Mansfield, Minnie Whitmore, Fanny Dupre and Ivy Williams.

These entertainments are typical of a great many that take place in studios that are undoubtedly occupied by genuine artists, often men of some talent. They are obviously not places where young and innocent girls should be permitted to go. There are plenty of models of mature years abundantly able to take care of themselves who would answer nearly all the purposes of these artists, and even if childish models seem desirable at times, it would be better to pinch artistic effort than wreck human lives.

But in addition to these dubious studios there are scores of others—probably a hundred in New York—where not a stroke of painting, drawing or sculpture is ever done. Many of the them are beautifully decorated and fitted with objects of art, and with such luxuries as miniature bars, but the performances that take place in them cannot properly be called artistic. These studios are maintained simply as traps for beautiful and innocent girlhood. The bogus artist always has artist friends, through whom he can keep in touch with the newest models. He can always ask a girl to pose in his studio, when he would not dare to invite her to his house. Perhaps he makes a pretence of sketching her, or takes snapshot photographs of her, or asks her to pose in tableaux with some of her young friends, all wearing gauzy drapery like the girl in the pie. The details do not matter. The result is usually the same—misery for the girl.

Why did Stanford White need the finest studio in New York in the Madison Square Tower? He did not paint or make sculpture. He was an architect, whose work consisted principally in getting orders from rich men and in copying European buildings and in buying European antiquities. If he ever needed to draw an architectural plan he had unlimited room in a big office, and he had also a great house of his own only three blocks away from Madison Square Garden. He needed the studio for the purposes that have been so abundantly revealed in the disclosures following his tragic end.

"Studios" Merely an Excuse for Orgies.

Four "studios" which were maintained by the bosom friends of White have been discovered. One was at the top of the F. A. O. Schwarz building in West Twenty-fourth street, one at No. 17 West Thirty-fourth street, one at No. 10 West Twenty-eighth street and one at the Mansfield Apartments, No. 12 West Forty-fourth street. Anybody familiar with the seamy side of metropolitan life could mention dozens of others.

These men were leaders of the class of New Yorkers who maintain studios not for the pursuit of art but for the pursuit of sin and the ruin of human souls. Since the tragedy that ended their boon companion's life on the Madison Square Roof they have left for Europe in larger numbers than in any previous Summer. It is to be hoped they will be driven permanently from their ancient haunts. Serious artists, who wish to save their profession from falling under a general ban of public detestation, will ostracize and oppose them and endeavor to prevent them from entrapping young girls into their studios on the baseless pretext that they are artists.

And now we come to the photographic studio. The photographer is in various ways the means of leading a vast number of girls into a miserable way of life. There is an absolutely insatiable demand for pretty girls as photographers' models. Their pictures may be sold just as pretty girls, or they may serve to advertise corsets, underwear, stockings and other clothes, or they may be used as incidental attractions to heighten the effect of an advertisement of any conceivable object under the sun. The truth is that a large part of the American people is wallowing in a form of woman idolatry infinitely more debasing, because more hypocritical, than the shameless worship of Aphrodite among the ancient Greeks. These people are interested in no article and in no business proposition that is not accompanied by a picture of a pretty girl in a more or less alluring pose. They have no interest in life higher than that of drooling over the details of the female figure.

It is an extremely unfortunate fact that the photographer always needs very young girls for this work. Like the Medicis of old, he needs the blood of the lambs. After a girl has reached eighteen years of age she begins to lose her usefulness before the camera. At twenty-one she is impossible. The tiniest lines of age and intelligence, lines invisible to the naked eye, beginning to form at the corners of her mouth and on her brow, show up through the merciless camera like the wrinkles of age. In a photograph every face looks older than it really is, and since no girl in a picture is supposed to be over twenty, the average photographers' model is at the height of her usefulness at sixteen or seventeen years of age. There are certain agencies in the city who, knowing this, advertise for school girls to pose during their holidays. Dozens of school girls, in need of pin money, answer these advertisements, and on applying to the agent are given a list of photographers who need models. They make a round of the studios in all innocence, and if they are available they are engaged in all good faith. But this is only the beginning of the end.

The young girl goes to pose. She is shown into a cozy little dressing room and tricked out by the photographer's lady assistant or by the photographer himself in some picturesque gown, or more often in some flowing bit of drapery. At first she is a little shocked at the way her neck and shoulders are to be exposed; but the studio assistant pats her on the back, tells her not to be silly, and assures her that it is all business and that the operator will not even observe her. She goes up to the gallery; her hair is powdered, her lips are rouged; she is posed a few times, and comes downstairs to receive from three to five dollars for her trouble. And it has all been just fun. She catches a glimpse of her excited face under the powder and lip rouge in the mirror. She discovers that she is really pretty—awfully pretty. She had never dreamed she was so beautiful.

The next time she is sent for it is a hurry call. An advertising agent for an underwear firm wants her to pose for stockings? What? She does not want to pose in short skirts? How foolish. The agent is willing to pay five dollars, or even ten for a single pose. The photographer's assistant assures her that lots of "nice girls" do it. And so she passes from stockings to corsets, and finally to mere drapery, gradually losing that most precious of feminine attractions—her girlish modesty.

And she is making money so easily. The photographers are fighting for her. How beautiful she must be. She sees her face here, there and everywhere, on the billboards, on the elevated stations, in the cars, in the trains—always the smiling reflection of her face, at its prettiest angles. She is quite sure by this time that life is going to be one long path of roses for one so attractive as herself. As a matter of fact, however, she may or may not be beautiful; for it is not always the most beautiful women who make the best camera models. Evelyn Nesbit herself is not a perfectly beautiful woman. Her features are by no means regular, and her mouth is too full. Her beautiful hair, exquisite teeth, aptitude for posing and piquant nose, however, made her a good model—or did make her a good model, for were Mrs. Thaw to return to posing now, she would find it difficult to get a position. She is twenty-one.

Perils of Photographers' Models.

And now come the temptations. Men who glance over the advertisements they read and receive—all sorts and conditions of men, men scrupulous and unscrupulous, men vain, men designing, men silly, men in search of prey and men in search of fun—catch sight of the new and pretty face.

The camera model's audience is far wider than that of the chorus girl or artist's model. It extends over the whole country, the whole world. While the chorus girl is singing to a thousand or two and the artist's model is posing to a few devotees of the palette and brush, the camera [illegible] is smiling at millions. And not [illegible] a dozen tim's, does she smile at this same ast audience. Men who might merely exclaim admiringly at the first glance of her f... coming day after day upon that same e in a dozen different poses, graced by a ure in a bathing suit, a kimono, a decollete gown, a new corset, a new "peek-a-boo" waist, are gradually interested and cinated. They pin the picture up over ir desks. They joke about it with their ends. And last, as a perfectly natural equence, they seek an introduction to the girl whose smile has caught their fancy. If the photographer is scrupulous he will use to give the girl's name and address thout her own consent. But if the girl's ality does not smooth the path to her acquaintance there are other ways.

For instance, a certain New York photographer received a letter from one of his gest Western customers, requesting the me and address of a popular model. The otographer unhesitatingly wrote in reply at he was not at liberty to divulge these. e answer was brief and to the point. It ad: "If you cannot favor our house ith this information, we shall be obliged cancel the thousand dollar order placed ith you," etc. The photographer went the girl and laid the matter before her. was made quite plain to her that if she ould refuse to meet this man she would e cut from the photographer's pay-roll. nd so the little game worked itself out—d the Western customer gained his int.

But it is not always necessary to urge roductions upon the models in this way. little life in the studios relaxes a girl's cruples and feeds her vanity sufficiently make her acquaintance easy of attainent. She is flattered, charmed, carried way by her own popularity. In short, er head is turned. Money and admiration ome to her so easily that she pities those ho [illegible] at desks or in stores for heir living. Attentions from men she uld never have got in her own [illegible] ith [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] she accepts these, and her existence is a round of gayety, and midnight suppers.

Then, suddenly, without warning, without a sign—the girl finds that she is not wanted at the studios. Her butterfly life, her late hours and her folly have made the wrinkles that Time had not yet begun. The photographer has done with her! He casts her off like an old shoe. The story of the Prince's little sweetheart who was his sweetheart for a day only, and who woke next morning to find herself in rags and condemned to sweep cobwebs for the rest of her life, is the story of many a little camera model. That is the tragedy of it! The butterfly of the galleries has such "a little way to flutter." Her wings are bruised so soon. And even if by her own care and tact they escape the bruises, Time is sure to crush them before she is aware that life has begun. The charm of the camera model is so elusive that it has passed before you are quite sure that it is there.

Yet, if it were possible for a camera model to drink of the fountain of eternal youth, her fate would be merely delayed not averted. For the fickle public soon become weary of looking at the same face. Fashion papers cry out for new figures upon which to drape their gowns. Advertisers reject the familiar head and pose that is so well known to the public that their attention is no longer caught by it. It is a constant cry for new lambs for the slaughter.

The Day of Disillusionment.

At first the little model will not believe that her day of usefulness is done. She accepts in perfect good faith the photographer's excuses, "Dull season" and "Overstocked." She goes the rounds of the studios hopefully, her little store of money fading like magic. When at last she is convinced by the kindly but constant refusals of her former employers that she is not wanted, she seeks the artists. But she is not their kind. Her ephemeral, piquant and irregular beauty does not appeal to them. They try her for a while, and again she is turned adrift. You would think that she would be satisfied by this time to go back home, or to get some honest position in a shop or an office. But, no, not she! Life has been too easy, too beautiful for that. This is only a little cloud. It will pass over, and she will emerge dancing again in the sunshine. She is like the consumptive—never willing to acknowledge that the end has come.

Here is the parting of the ways. Many photographers' models at this juncture think about going on the stage. And this, in spite of ancient prejudice, is probably the safest way in which a girl whose position depends upon her beauty can earn a living. She is surrounded by girls who as a rule are kind and well meaning, and under the care of managers who as a rule do not wish any harm to happen to their charges. But this occupation requires industry and intelligence. The model is seldom endowed with much intelligence, and, as she has become accustomed to earning her money without thinking or working, she is unwilling or unable to think or work now. Seldom has a photographer's model risen above the lower ranks of the stage.

There are dozens of ex camera models in the chorus to-day, who have been dancing in their choruses and pirouetting and smiling mechanically from the back row for several years. Mabel Carrier, the well-known show girl, was a popular camera model at one time. She has never risen above the chorus, although her beauty of face and figure might have entitled her to succes had she made the slightest effort. But she was quite contented to look pretty and take life easily. In the "Happyland" chorus all last season were three ex camera models, and the "Social Whirl" abounds in faces that have been popular in print, but they give no indication of ability to interest the public permanently. When their youth and beauty are gone, they will merely sink out of sight again.

A great many of the models who do not go upon the stage flutter down the easy descent to the abyss, unless perchance they happen to be among the lucky few who marry before it is too late. There have, of course, been cases where photographers' models have made brilliant matches at the very start of their careers. One young woman, an exceedingly popular fashion model, married a well-known newspaper editor. He happened one day, while looking over a batch of fashion photographs in the hands of one of his assistants, to see her picture. Then and there he determined to make her acquaintance, and as a result they were married, and they have lived happily ever since. Another very popular photographic model became engaged not long ago to a Pittsburg millionaire, not Harry Thaw. This young woman, however, had been closely chaperoned by her mother, who followed her into the gallery on all occasions. Her name was not even known among those who bought her pictures.

There are of course a great number of models, like those shown on this page, who are good sensible girls and thoroughly realize the dangers and great uncertainty of the occupation. But how many girls of sixteen and seventeen are likely to realize these things? They do not, and the consequence is a great and growing [illegible] [illegible] of pitiful tragedies.

Such a tragedy was that of the beautiful girl known as Vivian de Lemos. One morning a young girl of the people—barely seventeen—appeared in a shabby thin coat, and a battered hat at the door of a photographer's studio. The photographer recognized the girl's beauty and at once engaged her. She was employed for sitting after sitting, her face became popular and her clothes became neater and prettier. One morning the photographer waited for her impatiently. He had some important sittings to make, and he wanted to get them done in good time. He fumed and fretted and paced the studio floor, but the model never came. Three months later the photographer was sitting at his desk, when an elegantly gowned woman rustled into the room and smilingly greeted him. It was the former model, now gowned in Paris fashion and glittering with diamonds. She had sailed for Europe on the day that she broke her engagement with her employer. A millionaire had "befriended" her and had taken charge of her "education." A young Cuban, who was infatuated with her and wished to marry her, had committed suicide in the restaurant most prominently mentioned in connection with the shooting of Stanford White, in despair because she would not accept him. She told the photographer of the beautiful style in which she was living, of how she was being educated and life made one long dream for her. A year later, haggard and wretchedly poor looking, she entered the photographer's studio again and begged for work.

"But you are no longer a good model," said the photographer, mercilessly. "There are crow's-feet about your eyes, and your cheeks are hollow, and you have forgotten how to smile." Then he was touched by the girl's appearance, and added, "I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll recommend you for the first chorus job that is offered." For it is a custom of some managers to apply to the art photographers for pretty girls for their choruses. The girl did get a position in the chorus, but, having no voice and not being very bright, she soon lost it. Now the photographer who first employed her turns his face the other way when he meets her on the street. That is the end of the camera model in hundreds of cases.

A Mystery of a Famous Studio.

There are many famous romances of artist's models, both in fact and in fiction, and it is very significant that nearly all of them are tragedies. Perhaps the most famous case of recent years involving the studio of a celebrated artist was that of Miss Helen Vanderbilt Wackerman. She belonged to a well-known and wealthy family of Buffalo, N. Y., and is related to the great Vanderbilt family.

She was not a professional model, but her beauty was so great that some of the most celebrated artists in Europe urged her to pose and she consented. Miss Vanderbilt Wackerman went to Europe in 1900 and met these artists at social affairs. When Sir Edward Poynter, the President of the Royal Academy, saw her he exclaimed:

"She is God's masterpiece."

Ellis Roberts, the most fashionable painter of aristocratic women in England begged her to pose for him and painted her as a Greek goddess. Frederick Pomeroy, the sculptor, made arrangements to represent her in marble as a madonna.

Carolus Duran, the famous French portrait painter, said:

"She is America's claim to beauty. She is perfect to look upon."

Among the artists who admired her most profoundly was Hubert von Herkomer, who is not only a distinguished painter, but conducts the principal art school in England. After meeting her he sent this letter to her mother:

"Dear Mrs. Vanderbilt-Wackerman: I have never forgotten your daughter's face, and have harbored the pleasure it will be to paint her. I have an inner conviction that I can make something striking of her. My object in writing is to remind you of your kind promise to let your daughter sit to me. I shall return by the Deutschland on the 6th of October.

"With tenderest regards to you and her,

"Yours sincerely,

"Hubert Herkomer."

It was probably the desire of seeing Professor Herkomer's famous and beautiful place called Lululaund, in Hertfordshire, that led her to accept his invitation. She began to pose for a picture that was destined to be one of the great successes of the following Royal Academy. The Professor used to speak of it frequently as "The portrait of the most beautiful woman in the world."

Then Mrs. Vanderbilt-Wackerman had to return to America, and as the portrait was not completed her daughter agreed to stay at Lululaund as the guest of the Professor and his wife until it was done.

The Professor's enthusiasm over Miss Vanderbilt-Wackerman's beauty continued to grow in enthusiasm for three weeks. Then one day he asked her to come down to his studio to pose, as she supposed, but to her horror he told her that he had heard things about her that compelled him to ask her to leave the house.

"You must get out of this house immediately," he said.

The poor girl, who was not twenty years old, went up to London and took a room at the Hotel Cecil. She was then really out of her mind with shock and horror at the artist's conduct.

In the middle of the cold London winter's night she got up from her room in the hotel and wandered down to the Thames Embankment, which lies at the back of the hotel. Her vast masses of golden hair were flying in disorder and she was only partially dressed. A porter and a maid hurried out after her and found her looking wildly at the black river and crying: "Get out of this house!" "Get out of this house!"

When she found that she was followed she ran away from the servants, and went as far as Fleet street, where she entered a newspaper office and talked in a delirium about her wrongs. Finally the hotel people carried her back in a cab.

For a time her reason and life were despaired of. Mrs. Vanderbilt-Wackerman hurried to London to nurse her daughter and demand reparation from Herkomer. He refused to listen to her or communicate with her. The Bishop of London and Ambassador Choate interested themselves in her case. The Bishop wrote to Professor Herkomer that he should either make reparation to the girl or show proof of the aspersions which he had cast upon her. The Professor refused to give any explanations and insolently referred the [illegible] to his lawyer.

Strange to say, Professor Herkomer completed the picture for which Miss Vanderbilt-Wackerman posed as a favor in return for which she received such cruel treatment. It was exhibited in the Royal Academy and was the sensation of the year. It was an interesting picture, but the episode that was associated with it largely contributed to its success. The willingness of the Professor to profit by this episode called forth many expressions of disgust. The picture was entitled, "Seeing, I Saw Not; Hearing Not, I Heard." It was little more than a portrait of Miss Vanderbilt-Wackerman. The title was rather mysterious, but not more so than the conduct of the artist.

Miss Vanderbilt-Wackerman was brought to America, a complete wreck, suffering agonies in mind and nerves. Her condition continued to be serious long afterward.

This case is a strange one, but it is closely related to the subject of this page, because it shows how many and various are the dangers that may threaten any girl, however fortunately placed, who permits herself to become an idol of the studios.

The Romance of Two Fencing Foils.

How a Pair of Gentian Blue Eyes So Confused Mr. Champion Barretto, of Manila, That the Dark-Eyed Spaniard Lost Not Only His Head but His Heart in the Tilt---and She Won Both the Heart and the Bout.

IN Cupid's salle d'armes a whole new series of problems have arisen through that most excellent and famous fencing tournament at Drexel Institute of Philadelphia, in which pretty Katherine Chambers, daughter of the church militant, worsted one Carlos Barretto, of the Philippine Islands, and a son of the Conquistadors, thus gaining the title of champion after each had technically killed off all of his and her highly competent opponents.

They run something like this:

How many times must [illegible] pink the plastron on a gallant Don's jacket to touch the real heart underneath?

For the benefit of the uninitiated let it be remarked in passing that the plastron is the little scarlet flannel or velvet or whatever else heart that the fencers wear upon their left breasts. If the sword of the rival touches it, the touched one dies at once—technically, of course.

But the problems—

Problem number two is: How many times must [illegible] maiden to pink the plastron on [illegible] to touch her real heart?

And then there is a third.

Give the exact ratio between the power of a pair of very fresh [illegible] and very beautiful eyes and [illegible] in the hand of a [illegible] complished [illegible]

These [illegible] arated the [illegible] the last [illegible] of Drexel [illegible] the men are [illegible] the girls [illegible]

"Three times," [illegible] first question. The stalwart fencers say nothing.

Not a word will the fair or the stalwart fencers say on the second [illegible] only look very [illegible]

As to the third question the [illegible] contingent [illegible]

"The eyes had [illegible]

But then they [illegible] because in Miss Chambers' [illegible] them is vicariously [illegible] Miss Chambers [illegible] nically, after Barretto [illegible] men technically, and didn't she afterward slaughter the Don, and so defeat vicariously all the men, and doesn't that prove that all the fair fencers were better than all the stalwart ones?

The First Attack and Defence.

"The eyes had all to do with it," say the fencers who are male. But they are prejudiced just as badly for the same reason as the girls—only turned upside down.

And one can't get any help from the two who really know.

"Nonsense," says Miss Chambers to all three problems.

Senor Barretto wont say a word to any.

Now the things leading up to and all around and directly concerning this famous encounter, which was a real duel of sex and the affaire celebre in every salle d'armes today in the East, are about as follows:

In the fencing world the school at Drexel Institute, under the direct tutelage of J. Peterson Ryder, himself world known, stands for championship. Every year there is a tournament at the Institute in which the pick of the fencers are pitted against each other. They fight until but one survivor waves his deadly blade. This fencer is hailed as champion of Drexel and a potential champion at the same time of all [illegible]

Society flocks to the tournaments; fencers from many States applaud or disapprove. It is no faded crown of bay leaves that adorns the victor's head.

To the fencing school two years ago came Katherine Chambers, daughter of a very learned and very powerful travelling missionary, a man to whom the mysterious corners of China are as familiar as are the streets of New York, who has carried the cross in many a perilous pilgrimage, [illegible] to the great missionaries of olden days. Miss Chambers was qualifying for exclusive Bryn Mawr College, which she enters this coming term. Perhaps the romance and restlessness that are a part of the missionary life were given her by her father and found vent in her desire to learn [illegible] and noble science of the sword.

The Day of the Tournament

At any rate the fencing master at Drexel [illegible] had so apt and eager a pupil [illegible] the missionary's daughter thrust herself [illegible] through the [illegible] tempered steel an eye of the surest and quickest, an attack and a defence that sometimes gave even Ryder some anxious moments.

[illegible] entered the salle d'armes at about the [illegible] Carlos Barretto, straight from Manila, a descendant of the old Spanish [illegible] untainted blood and [illegible] and a love of the sword [illegible] him by a hundred [illegible]

Barretto took to the rapier like a railroad to coal stock—and it has been [illegible] nowhere such aptitude as this. He had been given some training in [illegible], but heredity girded up its loins and started out to show its real power.

Between the missionary's daughter and [illegible] of the Conquistadors, Fencing Master Ryder began to live a perilous and most active life. Miss Chambers and Barretto curiously enough would never cross blades.

For months the school parried and lunged and attacked and paraded and for months the mills that are run by the little gods of the blade ground and ground until finally just before the tournament of this year they had ground so fine that of all the grist there were only four girls and four men qualified to battle for the gage. But this octette was fit to lead any forlorn hope in the times before gunpowder and science changed war from an art to an abattoir.

Among the girls was Katherine Chambers. On the side of the men was Senor Barretto.

Finally came the day of the tournament, when the little gods were to give the wheel a last twist and grind from the eight the one paramount.

Out to Drexel flocked society. Flocked there, too, the fencers from many States. J. Peterson Ryder nervously pulled his mustache and made a mental book on possibilities.

Out on the floor of the salle d'armes marched from one side the daughters of the sword, all in coquettish garb and armed with charms of which their rapiers were by far the least dangerous. From the other side marched the sons of the sword, really quite coquettishly gotten up, too. Society vociferously applauded the picturesque part of it. The fencers applauded the business.

On Miss Katherine's jacket was sewed a crimson heart of silk. On Barretto's a crimson heart also.

Salute—and the fray was on.

Circling, lunging in carte, in tierce, in all the positions, attacking desperately and playing for awhile the game of [illegible] all the fencers, girls and men, fought. There was a roll of applause. Some one had beaten all the fencers in skirts. Who was it? Why, Katherine Chambers, that tall, beautiful girl, you know, who is studying for Bryn Mawr. Another roll of applause. Some one has beaten all the fencers in knickerbockers. Who is he? Why, that's Carlos Barretto. He comes from Manila. Has an estate over there as big as a county, they say, and whole armies of Filipinos who call him [illegible]. But what are they going to do now?

Master J. Peterson Ryder advances.

"And now," he says, "the championship encounter. Mr. Barretto, of Manila, and Miss Chambers, of Nowhere in Particular."

For the first time the missionary's daughter and the Spaniard are to cross blades. Great is the honor they each covet. The fencer's crown is as dear to the son of the Conquistadors as to the daughter of the churchman. And he must fight a woman for it. And the woman, too, that—

But she is waiting, and the hall is very silent. They salute. Straight into the eyes of the Spaniard look the blue eyes of Miss Chambers. They are very beautiful eyes, says something in the heart of Barretto. But stop. That was almost a touch. Decidedly this is a fencing match, says Barretto to himself, not a study in eyes. Miss Katherine suddenly gives a straight thrust. Barretto parries. Miss Katherine parades in tierce, makes a curious little feint. Barretto says to himself: "But they are beautiful." There is a hit upon his little red heart and then—

"Touched!" cried Miss Katherine gayly.

"Once," says J. Peterson Ryder.

Barretto smiles and bows.

The Havoc of a Pair of Blue Eyes.

"Decidedly," he says still to himself, "I must forget the eyes. But how, when she never takes them from me?"

Salute and once again the rapiers meet. The son of the Conquistadors changes to the old Spanish method. Miss Katherine meets it superbly. She feints, cut and one two. Barretto parries in quarte. Miss Katherine tries the flanconnade. Barretto looking always in her eyes, feels defeat near and makes a desperate parry.

"Now, do I really care to win?" he asks himself.

Even as he wonders there is a touch upon the red heart.

"Touched again!" cries Miss Katherine, joyfully.

"Twice," echoes Ryder.

Society applauds. Barretto makes up his mind to win the last bout at any rate. Miss Katherine makes up her mind that she wont let him.

Salute again and for the last time the two stand ready. They are a very picturesque pair—the slender, tall American girl and the lithe, dark youth from Manila.

Rapiers writhe and flash and the spirit of no quarter seems to be really in the air. The men Barretto has beaten pick up courage and look cheerful. The girls Miss Katherine has technically slain look correspondingly depressed.

Miss Katherine never takes her eyes from those of the Spaniard.

Fast and furious writhe and clash the rapiers. Parade and attack, feint and thrust and deceive follow close. Almost is Miss Katherine's little silk heart touched, and then——

"They're as blue as the sky and as deep," says Barretto. "Deep enough to hold Heaven."

"Touched!" cries Miss Katherine, triumphantly.

"I win," she laughs and throws aside her mask.

"Thrice and the champion," says Ryder.

Barretto hands her his sword, bows low.

"It was the eyes," the men say.

"It was her sword," say the girls.

Now, which was it?

And what's the answer to the other two questions?

Cupid awaits the reply expectantly.

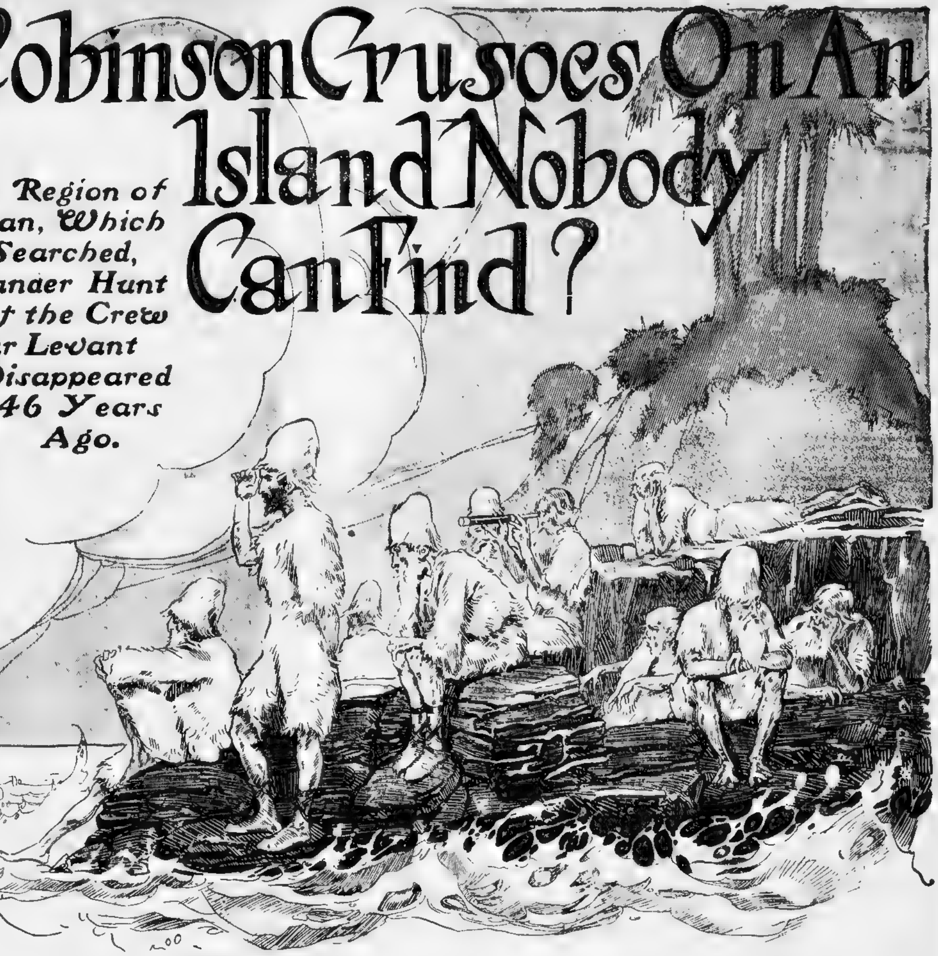
96 Poor Robinson Crusoes On An Island Nobody Can Find?

Somewhere, in the Vast Region of the North Pacific Ocean, Which Explorers Have Never Searched, May Be Sitting Commander Hunt and the 95 Members of the Crew of the U. S. Man-of-War Levant That Mysteriously Disappeared 46 Years Ago.



"A Group of White-Bearded Septuagenarians, Half Naked, Huddled On the Highest Part of the Beach, Forever On the Lookout for the Rescuing Ship That Never Comes."

HARDLY a year passes that the President of the United States is not importuned to send forth a naval expedition to solve the most fascinating sea mystery that ever existed and this one has baffled all inquiry for nearly half a century.

If "Robinson Crusoe" is the most absorbing piece of sea fiction ever written, how much more interesting would be the authentic record of the adventures of no less than ninety-six Robinson Crusoes all cast away on the same uncharted island in the North Pacific forty-six years ago.

Wherever seafaring veterans congregate to exchange experiences and reminiscences the probable fate of this whole ship's crew of Crusoes is a favorite subject for speculation.

"Aye, aye, Captain," says a grizzled old second officer of a tramp steamer. "I remember the Levant as well as if I'd seen her comin' up the Bay only yesterday. In those days she was a man o' war to be proud of. The United States had few stauncher. The whole crew lost, you say, Bill? Not a bit of it. Pitcairn's not the only uncharted island to show up just in time to save a shipwrecked crew."

"Right you are, Mate," says the Captain, "and there's still a patch out in the Pacific south of 20 north latitude and east of longitude 140 as big as the State of Maine that nobody knows any more about than they do of the North Pole. You all know that's about where the Levant got caught by the typhoon back in '60."

"That's the idee, Captain. If there's no island in that patch, says I, why has nobody ever run across the wooden hull of the old Levant, or any of her floatin' junk?"

The Tell-Tale Mainmast.

"Except for mainmast that stranded on [illegible] in the Hawaiians," says Bill, making a historical correction.

"That stranded spar goes to prove what I'm tellin' ye," says the old tramp second officer. "Why was nothin' but the mainmast of the Levant ever seen afterwards? Well, I'll tell ye. The mainmast went overboard when the typhoon first struck her, an' laid a clear course for Hawaii. But the officers managed to keep the Levant's nose pinted you sou'east for Panama till this here undiscovered island bobbed up, caught her fast on a coral reef an' made Robinson Crusoes of everybody aboard."

"Bless my maintop, Mate, but think of the whiskers they've had time to grow by this time!"

Such, in a nutshell, are the possibilities—perhaps, even, the probabilities—regarding the fate of the officers and crew of the Levant.

The picture is one of marvellous interest. If the average age of the members of that crew was only thirty years, the mind's eye now sees on that mysterious atoll, coral rimmed, like all the small islands in the tropical Pacific, a group of white-bearded septuagenarians, half naked, huddled on the highest part of the beach, forever on the lookout for the rescuing ship that never comes.

Commander William E. Hunt, with ninety-five officers and men, started with the sloop-of-war Levant from Hilo, Hawaiian Islands, on September 18, 1860, bound for Panama via the California coast. These were the officers under Commander Hunt:

Lieutenants—M. B. S. Porter, F. C. Stout, Colville Jerrett and R. T. Bowen; Surgeons, J. S. Gilliam and William Bradley; …er, Andrew J. Watson, Master, James …sely; First Lieutenant of Marines, … Browning; Acting Boatswain, Har…monston; Gunner, Robert S. King; …r, John Jarvis; Sailmaker, Charles …

Official early records of the Levant's disappearance are brief, but interesting and significant. Commander Hunt was to report to Commander J. B. Montgomery, United States Flagship Lancaster at Panama. The following are from Montgomery's reports to Washington from his flagship waiting in the Bay of Panama:

"Nov. 20, 1860—I have recently received letters from William E. Hunt that the Levant is now ready and on its way to this port.

"January 31, 1861—The Saranac and Wyoming will proceed in search of the Levant to Hilo and Honolulu. The unusual length of time since sailing produces serious apprehension for her safety.

"February 13, 1861—No word yet. Hurricane last September dismasted an American clipper, and H. B. M. line of battleship Ganges had her sails blown from the yards.

"A letter from Commander Hunt, dated September 3, 1860, stated he would start from Hilo in ten or twelve days. It is now known that he sailed from Hilo September 18, without change of purpose to return to this port."

"February 14, 1861—Commander J. K. Mitchell, of the Wyoming, at Hilo, reports his cruise from Panama. No word, except that Hunt intended to take the usual Northern route to Panama, via the coast to California, to get the record of his work before Congress."

"June 8, 1861—Thomas Miller, U. S. Consul at Hilo, reports a mast washed ashore seventy-five miles from there, supposed to be the mainmast of the Levant. Charles Spencer, Isaac Nichols and Christopher Baker examined this mast of yellow pine and pronounced it to be that of the Levant. Part of a lower yard five feet in circumference at the slings was found near the mast. Consul Miller and W. C. Parks, Marshal at Hilo, confirm this opinion. Baker was the pilot who piloted the Levant in and out of Hilo harbor, and he had the dimensions of her masts and spars."

Act of Congress July 24, 1861.

"June 30, 1861, shall be deemed and taken to be the day on which the sloop of war Levant foundered at sea."

This act of Congress, implying that the Levant, having "foundered," was irreparably lost with all her crew, failed to draw any curtain of oblivion over the incident. The mystery took too deep a hold on the imagination for it to be allowed to sleep, forgotten. Every nation whose flag floated over the highways of the North Pacific saw its ships menaced by the unknown. Here was a vast area of ocean into which their ships were liable to be blown by storms which was absolutely unknown, lying well off the beaten track of navigation, and possibly made hazardous by the presence of characteristic coral reefs and islands which in the Pacific are generally so low as not to be visible until a ship is almost upon them.

The greater part of this unknown area still exists. It is to the south and east of the route from San Francisco to Australia, and to the south of all the routes from the Hawaiian Islands to Panama and to Callao. Whalers had explored it only tentatively, noting certain islands, some of which remain mythical to expeditions which made systematic search for them.

The almost absolute silence and mystery about the disappearance of the Levant, especially, as the years rolled on, the fact that no trace of the wreck appeared, beyond the stranded mainmast and yard, inspired every sailing master traversing those waters with a firm belief that the Levant had cast her crew upon some land, herself clinging fast upon the rocks which caught her.

Between 1827 and 1839 this unknown region had been somewhat narrowed by cruises of three British and one American expeditions. All of these expeditions reported indications of shoal water and urged the need of further investigations. During sixty years, however, no further progress was made. In 1899 the Fish Commission steamship Albatross traversed part of the doubtful region and reported seeing several low lying islands, evidently the same that exist in whaling annals.

One year before the loss of the Levant Captain John de Greaves, sailing from Honolulu to Callao, reported the discovery of an island at longitude 136 and north latitude 17, which was about fifty feet high and two miles long. This island was so near the route of the Levant that if she had reached that neighborhood in the night she might easily have been wrecked upon it.

The latest effort of the United States Government to dispel the mystery of the Levant was made in 1903, when President Roosevelt dispatched the Tacoma out on an expedition of discovery. All that the Tacoma did was to narrow the unknown region down to an area of about the extent of the State of Maine. It discovered no island where there were visible signs of a wreck, or which were inhabited. The Tacoma negatively disposed of several island theories, but not of the possibility of the existence of one upon which the aged Robinson Crusoes of the Levant may now be living.

One of the great characters of fiction is popularly supposed to be among these castaways—Philip Nolan, the pathetic hero of Edward Everett Hale's "Man Without a Country," whom the author disposed of aboard the Levant. Captain Lawless, in writing of his cruise, mentioned receiving a letter from the aged author of that masterpiece in which he said:

"If you have found dear Phil Nolan, bring him at once to this house. I will adopt him as my grandfather."

The great historical analogy for the theory that members of the crew of the Levant are still alive on some unknown island is the existence of the colony on Pitcairn Island in the South Pacific, these people being descendants of the crew of the Bounty, which mutinied more than a century ago and were wrecked on that island, there to exist for eighteen years before their fate was discovered and made known to the world.

These Bounty mutineers for nearly a score of years were genuine Robinson Crusoes, subsisting wholly upon fish and the other sea food, the birds and animals and the fruits which the island afforded.

The Levanters were, perhaps, able to save part of the wreck of their ship from which to build huts, and some of the stores, including clothing. But these could not have lasted more than a few years of practically the half century that has elapsed since they were cast away.

If these old men are now clothed at all it must be with the skins and feathers of birds, or woven grasses, or perhaps the woven fibre of the outer husk of the cocoanut. It is possible that there were seeds aboard the Levant and that this colony of Crusoes has been able to cultivate the soil as a means of varying their supply of fish, birds, eggs, turtles and so on. Possibly the salvage of the ship's chronometer may still give them the time of day. As at least a score of them must have been men of education, doubtless they have kept diaries which contain records of their strange experiences from day to day.

But the mystery of the lost Levant and her crew, and also of the great unexplored region, is too fascinating for attempts to solve it to cease until every square mile of those latitudes has been scrutinized. Even ten years from now, if the fatal island is found, it is within the possibilities that some broken, half savage old man may be rescued to tell civilization the true story of the loss of the Levant and of their long and wonderful exile.

THIS SEASON'S FASHIONABLE BATHING SUITS

By Mrs. Osborn
Creator of Fashions for the Fashionable Women of America

Smart Bathing Suits Are Made of Satin and Silk.

Braid and Embroidery Used as Trimmings.

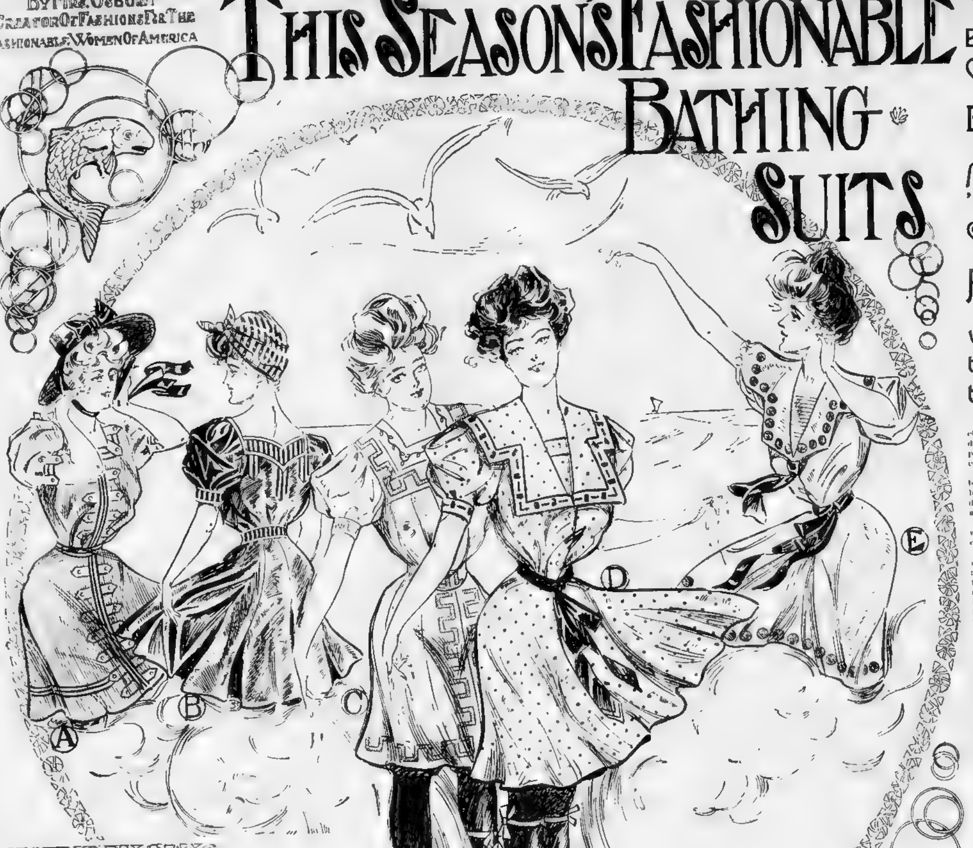
Pleated Skirts Best for Practical Costumes.

The Princess Bathing Suit the Latest Fancy.

Long, Full Cloaks a Requisite of Every Water Costume.

Bright Colored Neckerchiefs Match the Head 'Kerchief in Color.

High-Heeled Shoes Worn with Bathing Costumes to the Water's Edge.



This is the season when every woman who can swim and most of those who cannot disport themselves at the seaside in as becoming bathing costume as they are able to afford. For [illegible] the costumes vary but little from those of last season, the princess bathing dress being the only really new [illegible] other styles of bathing dress are given a different appearance by means of trimming, belts, girdles and arrangements at the neck.

The smart bathing costume of this season is made of [illegible] Heavy corded silks and taffetas are [illegible] preferred, [illegible] soft silks are [illegible] for the purpose. [illegible] however make up into charming bathing [illegible] and caps.

Plain colors [illegible] although stripes of an [illegible] character and some styles of checks and dots are worn. It is a pretty style [illegible] plain silks with bands and applied [illegible] in plaid and stripes. These bands give a [illegible] touch to an otherwise somber costume, since it goes without saying [illegible] gowns are not light in color, although the hues are sometimes striking.

One of the new methods of introducing color into a black or dark costume is to have the silk head handkerchief and neck kerchief of a bright color, such as orange, blue and the like.

The [illegible] kerchief about the neck is a feature of new bathing dresses since women take more care of their necks than formerly. [illegible] as a protection [illegible] and also as an ornament [illegible] with especial [illegible] to the wearer and [illegible] it adds a very smart [illegible] to the costume.

The Picturesque Long Bathing Cloak.

A [illegible] for [illegible] this season's bathing dress is the long bathing cloak. It is [illegible] as different [illegible] the old bath robe [illegible] now. The [illegible] and the new plain [illegible] have been discarded [illegible] dainty draperies of silk which fall in loose, full folds almost [illegible] of an evening wrap.

[illegible] bathing cloak [illegible] soft silks drape well [illegible] whose charm lies entirely in the graceful arrangement of its draperies. No woman who makes pretensions of [illegible] goes down to [illegible] a pretty cloak which she hands [illegible] at the water's edge.

The [illegible] is made without a hood [illegible] intention of being as light [illegible] as possible.

Another fashion [illegible] is to wear pretty [illegible] high-heeled shoes upon the beach. [illegible] as attractive as art and [illegible] can make them and are taken off and left in charge of the maid when their wearer wishes to [illegible] the surf.

[illegible] bathing [illegible] are no longer [illegible] to the lines of [illegible] and girdles [illegible] wide [illegible] by every woman [illegible] the beach.

[illegible] how comfortable [illegible] in the water. Now she [illegible] to the greatest [illegible] even keep [illegible] pretty and [illegible] the surf.

The Jaunty Bathing Kerchief

[illegible] jaunty [illegible] woman [illegible] wearer [illegible] kerchief [illegible] high heels [illegible]

Inexpensive [illegible] in exactly [illegible] shown upon [illegible] smart [illegible] anything [illegible] satin.

Figure A shows [illegible] bathing suit made of [illegible] silk. Down the center of the waist [illegible] bands of plain silk [illegible] with lines of braid. [illegible] tabs of plain silk with a covered button in each tab. [illegible] permit pretty [illegible] plain and plaid [illegible] upon a dark silk [illegible] or grenadine with [illegible]

Tabs of silk are stitched upon the [illegible] and [illegible] at the square [illegible] bands around the short puffed sleeves. It is not necessary to trim with tabs, and [illegible] of braid or silk folds would [illegible] The knickers [illegible] part of the blouse [illegible] gathered [illegible] waistband under the skirt. They [illegible] the knee in a band and may be either puffed or ruffled below. [illegible] reach to the edge of the [illegible], but there is a growing disposition [illegible] let the knickers extend below the [illegible] as in many foreign bathing costumes. [illegible] Figure B the fullness of the short [illegible] laid in wide box pleats to the [illegible] and the pleats [illegible] stitched along their edges to below the hip line. The bands of trimming upon the suit, the belt, sleeve bands, and border about the neck, are of fancy silk. This silk is matched by the kerchief tied about the head bandana wise, and its color should also be matched by the neck kerchief, if one is worn. The knickers of this costume are a trifle shorter than the skirt and are quite full.

Plain colored satin is the material employed in making up the suit shown in Figure C. Medium-sized box pleats [illegible] the fullness of the skirt about its upper portion and from the point of release the skirt hangs full over knickers which show below its hem. The top of the bodice is made with the same box pleated effect and the bottom of it is gathered to the waistband.

The square neck is bordered by an embroidered band in a color contrasting with that which forms the [illegible] trimmed [illegible] Greek design. This Greek [illegible] is repeated in the belt and [illegible] worn with the dress are trimmed [illegible] as well.

[illegible] are extremely [illegible] with braid [illegible] They are easily [illegible] woman can make them [illegible] square of cardboard [illegible] pattern even.

[illegible] in front, and so does [illegible] line of the seam with [illegible] middle of most circulars.

[illegible] the sailor collar is shown [illegible] this collar is cut in square [illegible] the decorative feature of [illegible] is trimmed around its border [illegible] embroidered dots which [illegible] and rest of the costume [illegible] chemisette is worn in [illegible] made of tucked silk [illegible] of any suitable material [illegible] the fancy and world [illegible] This suit is in brown [illegible] orange embroidery.

[illegible] to wear the necks of bathing [illegible] V shaped points, without [illegible] but where the opening in [illegible] low as in the case of [illegible] the chemisette becomes [illegible]

Many bathing costumes are made entirely [illegible] neck to prevent the skin from [illegible] by the sun and from being [illegible] Delicate skins cannot stand exposure to the glare of sunlight upon water without injury, and women who wear [illegible] have to keep this fact in [illegible] to take care of one's [illegible] remedy the ravages of wind [illegible]

An exceptionally smart long bathing [illegible] shown in Figure F. It is of soft silk [illegible] very full to a shallow fitted [illegible] bigger than a round collar. This [illegible] is braided to suit the fancy, or [illegible] embroidered or trimmed with [illegible] folds in a design. The gathers of the silk are arranged to fall in very graceful folds and these continue over the arms, which slip through the openings in draped Grecian sleeves. The make of this cloak is of the simplest and its beauty lies in the effective arrangement of its gathered folds. [illegible] upon the collar yoke. It is so easy to make a cloak of this kind that no woman need be without one for the want of a [illegible] any woman who can handle a needle at all can make a bathing cloak in this pattern. It may have a border of trimming or may be made perfectly plain, except for some decoration upon the collar.

Quiet colors are preferable for smart bathing costumes, their hosiery and shoes, but touches of vivid color may be introduced in kerchiefs, sailor ties at the neck and even sashes.

Taffeta is the most buoyant material of which to make a bathing suit, although corded silk will wear longer, as a rule. Trimmed silks do not make much difference, since they are applied to the garment and their selection depends upon their pattern and coloring. Soft silks, it must be remembered, will not do for bathing dresses that are to be worn in the water. We all know, of course, that many a dainty bathing suit costume is made for use upon the beach and, in this case, the materials may be, to some extent, a matter of taste.

Long gloves protect a bather's arms and she has opportunities for protecting her neck from sunburn, so that the well gowned bather is as carefully dressed as she would be for an automobile ride.

The Lovely Effect of Sashes.

Notwithstanding the increased price of well made bathing dresses aquatic sports are decidedly on the increase. Every woman now learns to swim and has her children taught swimming, so that it is rather an exceptional thing to find a woman who does not swim. A very few years ago women bathed, but never entrusted themselves to the deep without a rope or an arm to cling to or a good foothold upon the sand. Now women are ashamed to confess that they cannot swim, and even the most timid swimmer will make a few strokes in the water just to show that she really knows how.

Those elaborately dressed women who wear their bathing suits to be admired upon the beach will not confess that they cannot swim, so fashionable is this exercise. They merely say that sand baths are healthy and that they are tired of the water.

Combination slippers and stockings, such as are sold with cheap bathing suits, are as little to be desired as they are unpractical. No reasonable or well dressed woman would wear them. In the first place, they simply fill up with water and sand and drag the stockings down in ugly sags and in the second place, they are considered the height of bad taste, which is sufficient argument against their use.

In making up bathing skirts it will be found that the pleated skirt is most serviceable, since it may be stitched to look flat and slender about the hips and yet allow perfect freedom of movement because of their breadth around the bottom.

Knickers should always be long enough to puff above the knee, as absolute freedom of movement is necessary in swimming.

Some New Facts Regarding Finger Prints.

It has taken some time to convince the police of this country, and especially the police of New York city, that the simplest, surest and most convincing method of ascertaining and proving the identity of criminals or suspected criminals is by prints of their own finger tips. It seems that this truth, however, is daily making itself more manifest, and that it will soon be so generally recognized that it will in America, as in England, entirely supersede the Bertillon System of anthropometric measurements.

The finger print method of identification has been known and practiced in the Far East in all ages of which there exist any records, but, like much of Eastern wisdom, the West has been slow to recognize its practical value.

Two claims are made for the finger-print system of identification, and both claims can be sustained by proof.

One is that of the millions of human beings inhabiting this world no two have finger tips of exactly the same pattern, and the second is that these patterns never change, the patterns of impressions taken from the fingers of a newborn babe being traceable on the fingers of the same person in old age, and apparently effaceable only when, after death, decomposition sets in.

As compared with the Bertillon system, the finger print system has many advantages. In the former there are required costly instruments, and the measurers who use them must be especially trained in their use. In the latter there are only required a piece of tin and some ink, and any person, after half an hour's practice, can do the work. There is less time required in taking the finger impressions, in filing them away and in referring to them when needed. There is no possibility of error as in making or recording measurements. The finger impressions of women can be taken as readily as those of men.

And further, the finger print system is often valuable in detecting the person who has committed a crime and in fastening the proof of his guilt upon him.

An instance of this was shown in Bengal, where the manager of a tea garden, in the district of Julpaiguri, was found in bed with his throat cut, his despatch box and safe box having been rifled and several hundred rupees carried away.

There were a number of persons suspected of the crime and among them was an ex-servant whom he had sent to jail for theft. It was learned that this man had been released from jail some weeks before, but no one had seen him in the district.

Among the papers in the despatch box was found a calendar, on the light blue paper cover of which there were noticed two faint brown smudges.

Under the magnifying glass one smudge was seen to be the impression of a finger and the stain was found to be blood.

In the Central Office of the Bengal police the finger impressions of all persons convicted of crime are registered, and the impression on the calendar was found to correspond exactly with the right thumb impression of Kangali Charan, the servant who had been released from jail a short time before. He was found and arrested and subsequently convicted of robbing his master, although the assessors held it would not be safe to convict him of the murder, as no one had seen him commit the deed.

On August 17, 1904, a thief entered a house at No. 30 St. Peter's Square, Hammersmith, London, and before leaving with the booty he obtained there he helped himself to a glass of wine. On the tumbler he used he left the two finger prints. These were photographed and upon search of the record at Scotland Yard were found to be identical with two of the finger prints of George Gaze, a notorious criminal. He pleaded guilty and is now undergoing his term of penal servitude.

In January, 1903, the dismembered bodies of a man named Darby and of his wife and child, were found buried in sacks in a garden at Leyton, England.

A man calling himself Edgar Edwards, tenant of the house at Leyton, was suspected of having killed the Darby family at Camberwell and of having removed the bodies to Leyton, where he buried them.

Impressions of his fingers were taken and they were found to be identical with those of a man who had already served a term in prison.

His identity was established, the murders were brought home to him and he was hanged.

There are numerous instances on record where the photographing of finger marks left by criminals on plated goods, window panes, drinking glasses, bottles, painted wood, cash boxes, [illegible] etc., have supplied the clue that has led to their arrest.

On the ridges of the finger bulbs are the numerous mouths of the ducts which conduct to the surface the perspiration from the sweat glands which lie below the true skin, and through these there is a continuous flow, although generally imperceptible to the naked eye. In consequence of this moisture when a finger comes in contact with a [illegible], smooth surface the pattern of the ridges is left more or less distinct on the article touched and can be readily photographed.

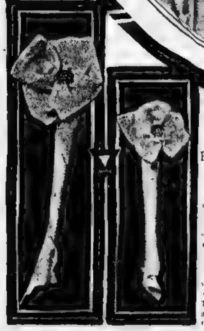
IDSUMMER OF FROU-FROU AND MANY RIBBONS.

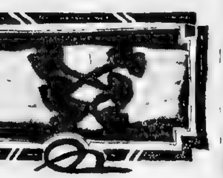
And Here's a Timely Photographic Lesson for Women, Telling Them Just What Are the Smartest and Most Charming Ribbon Effects in Vogue and Just How They May Be Made at Home by Nimble Fingers.



Figs. 1—2—Showing Photographically How Ribbon Roses are Made.

A.—One of the Favorite Styles of Ribbon Sashes.

C.—Ribbon Girdle Decorated with Little Bowknots.



E.—Wide Ribbon Girdle to Be Worn with Empire or Princess Blouse.

F.—A Fichu Decoration of Two Widths of Wide Flowered Ribbon.

RIBBONS are among the most evident dress decorations of the season, and never before have they been employed in such an infinite variety of ways and with such bewitching effects.

Most useful of all things made of ribbon are the white satin or taffeta [illegible] stock collars with a succession of loose [illegible] in front [illegible] two short ends [illegible] in some manner. Over such a stock is worn a high embroidered [illegible] collar.

Ribbon belts appear in every [illegible] the [illegible] They [illegible] while the [illegible] often are mounted upon a [illegible] These belts match the [illegible] and also the color of hosiery and dress [illegible] tons.

To make a wide ribbon girdle that can be worn with an Empire or Princess blouse, or with almost any style of thin gown, bone a lining to fit the figure in a perfect round that comes up just a trifle in the back. Over this lay folds of satin ribbon, or lay the ribbon on flat with a seam down the middle of the front to insure a perfect fit. Have a row of hooks and eyes along the boned edge of the back, where the girdle fastens, and finish off the girdle in the very latest and smartest manner possible.

This is to make a narrow oblong frame from a piece of hat wire and wrap this around with ribbon, tying tiny bows of ribbon here and there along the frame. This must extend from the top to the bottom of the girdle with one or [illegible] ends hanging from the [illegible] with a day gown, the ends [illegible] be wide and short. With a dressy [illegible] the ends would be long and [illegible] trimmed.

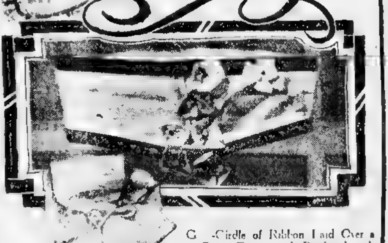
In figure G is shown a very pretty girdle made of ribbon laid over a boned frame and bordered with black velvet ribbon. This touch of velvet may be omitted if velvet is not used anywhere else upon the dress. The front of the girdle is decorated with ribbon roses, the long-stemmed ones of which are wired. These are merely made by gathering loops of ribbon to a common centre, and adding a bit of green or yellow in the centre.

Another fetching girdle is shown in figure C, in which the front is decorated with a double row of smartly shaped little bowknots. Slightly twisted ribbon is laced back and forth between these bowknots, and the ends may be arranged in all manner of pretty dangling [illegible], or be neatly turned under the last [illegible]. This arrangement is also used in the back of a [illegible].

With ribbon belts the buckle is usually of a size to fit the whole width of the belt. Frame buckles in simple patterns are smartest, and for dressy occasions jeweled ones are evident. Smart little twists and ends of ribbon often finish a belt over hooks that fasten it. The simpler the costume with which a ribbon belt is worn the more necessary a buckle is to the belt. Figure B illustrates a good model of a belt with a large frame buckle.

The most fascinating fichu effects in bodice decorations are made of wide, soft ribbons. In figure F, for instance, is shown a fichu decoration of two widths of wide flowered ribbon, tacked lightly around the back of a bodice and coming down the front in a deep point. The ribbons cross just below the bust, and are finished with knots and bows that are tacked upon the upper edge of the ribbon girdle, which matches the bodice decoration. Such a surplice and girdle will convert the plainest waist into one of the dressiest.

In figure A is shown one of the favorite styles of ribbon sashes. Wide flowered ribbon is tied in two upstanding loops in the back and hangs to the train of a gown.



G.—Girdle of Ribbon Laid Over a Bone Frame and Bordered with Black Velvet Ribbon.

It is [illegible] with ruffles of lace [illegible] [illegible] edge [illegible] the sash [illegible] of this sort are finished at [illegible] with [illegible], rosettes, upstanding loops [illegible] ribbon, but not with the old [illegible] loops [illegible] some quaintness in the gown demands such a finish.

Figures 1 and 2 show how ribbon roses are made. These are employed in making corsage, hair and dress ornaments and it is quite important to know how to make them. Figure 1 shows how a rose with curved petals is formed, and figure 2 illustrates the simple gathered loops with a centre.

To make curved rose petals fold an end of ribbon the length of the petal you wish to form. Turn over the outside corners and catch them on the under side with a few stitches. This makes the petals curve.

The petals are then gathered to a common centre to form a rose. Bunches of these roses are very effective at the back and in front of girdles, on sleeves, bodices, in the hair, upon lace flounces and wherever ribbon decorations may be effectively used upon a gown.

In figure D is shown a good way to tie a short sash. The same style of bow, in smaller sizes, are effective upon the corsage.

One of the prettiest methods of trimming serviceable straw hats is to cover them with large flowers made of long loops of ribbon. To make these loops take wide, soft silk ribbon and gather the loops to a centre and fill up the centre with tight little knots or puffs of ribbon. Draw each petal to sharp point, like the petal of a dahlia, and pull out the ribbon across the middle of the petal.

Big flat sunflowers or dahlias are thus formed with sharply pointed petals. It is usual to make these in several shades of orange and brown, [illegible] mauve and purple, and so [illegible] of several shades of one color. Sometimes the brim of the hat is faced with these large flowers, and in any case they are exceedingly decorative and handsome. As dress decorations these big flat flowers are also [illegible]. CHAPTER XIX.

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY of BUSTER BROWN

by R. F. Outcault.

Copyrighted, 1906, by the American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved

ONE day ma packed up and took Tige and me down to Bayshore, away down on Long Island, on Great South Bay. The bay is about thirty miles long and seven miles wide at its widest part, which is at Bayshore. Directly across the bay at Bayshore there is a slender strip of land that divides it from the Atlantic Ocean, and on this strip of land, which is called Fire Island, there is a lighthouse. This lighthouse is known as Fire Island Light, and is the last thing that passengers on steamships bound for Europe see of America.

The first day we arrived there (at Bayshore, I mean,) there was a circus. A pretty poor circus it was, but then people who are away on their Summer vacations don't mind that. They go to everything that comes along. Tige and I wandered down to the field where the circus tents were pitched, and hung around watching the men fixing up everything for the parade they were going to have. After they got the tents up and ate their breakfasts they put on a lot of funny red and yellow clothes and got into band wagons or chariots, or on top of animal cages; clowns came out and mounted donkeys, and everything was ready for the great parade.

While we were standing there watching all this an old man came strolling by who was so much funnier than the circus that there was no comparison. He began talking to me. He said he was a "athelet onct" himself. I took a long look at him, and then Tige and I couldn't help but burst into a roar of laughter. He was so bow-legged that he looked like a horseshoe with whiskers. While we were looking at him he spit at a butterfly and hit it.

"Did you see me git that feller?" he asked. "Wal. I uster be able to hit a bumble bee in the left eye at a distance of thirty foot."

"So you were an athlete once?" I asked. "Yep," he went on, "I was a circus performer; uster do fancy stunts on the trapeze. Why, bub, I was one of the greatest ever was."

"Why did you give it up?" asked Tige.

The old man spit at a horsefly about twenty feet away and hit him.

"Wal," said the old man, "I fell out of a trapeze about forty-five year ago and broke my neck."

Tige asked him if it killed him. "Nope," he replied, "it didn't."

Tige said he didn't believe him. "Fact," said the old man. So I told him I would be willing to bet him a dinner for all three of us that it did kill him. He said he would take the bet, so we all went back to the village to get some one to settle it.

As we came down Main street there was a crowd of old men standing on the corner, and we put it up to them, after telling them what the bet was. They said it DID kill him. One said he had been dead so long that hardly any one could remember him.

Of course the old man tried to prove it wasn't true, but they all stuck together on it and he had to give in. It was a lovely dinner of clams he gave us—raw clams, clam chowder, steamed clams, clam broth, hot corn and watermelon. We shall never forget that dinner and some of the fish stories he told us, for he was an old fisherman, as all the natives are down there.

Some day I shall tell you some of the wonderful tales he related to us that day. And I will tell you how he won a bet from Tige. It makes my mouth water to think of that clam dinner.

(To be continued next Sunday.)

He Said He "Uster Be a Athelct Onct" Himself.

BOSTON AMERICAN, SUNDAY, JULY 22, 1906.

HABIT.

STUDY this excellent cartoon by one of our best artists, Mr. S. H. Sime.

The thoughts that it suggests are extremely easy to write. We give the following idea to the young men and women who read this newspaper:

Many of you are interested in learning how to write, or in improving your way of writing. Every American, young and old, should be ABLE to express his ideas, CLEARLY, with originality.

To-day, before you read the editorial, STOP AND STUDY THIS PICTURE AND WRITE AN EDITORIAL FOR YOURSELVES.

You can think it out in your minds, deciding what you WOULD say. Or, better still, take paper and pencil, trace out briefly the thoughts that occur to you as you look at the drawing. Then write the whole thing out carefully, slowly.

Later you can compare your article with that which we shall now proceed to write, and decide which one you like better; what things on this page you would have put in your article if you had thought about them. And which of YOUR thoughts are conspicuously missing here. Parents might ask their children to look at this picture and tell their thoughts. The brain like the body needs exercise.

⁂

HABIT is the SLAVE-DRIVER and at the same time the protector of humanity

It is a servant and a tyrant. We NEED to have many habits and to use them. HABIT REPLACES THOUGHT. We get accustomed to doing a thing through HABIT, and the thing is done day after day without any conscious effort of the mind. It would be irritating if you had to think of the number of steps your stair-case consisted of every time you went up and down. You would fall in the dark a hundred times. But HABIT teaches YOUR FEET TO THINK, THEY take you up and down accurately and safely without your even knowing what they are doing.

In the small things of life habit is valuable. It is well to have the HABIT of regular eating, regular bathing, regular brushing of your teeth, regular hours for sleeping, going to bed and getting up.

Every one of these habits is of great material value to you. Such habits preserve health, they simplify life and prolong it by economizing vitality.

Nothing is more important than development of good habits—those that save useless efforts, AND LEAVE THE FORCES OF THE MIND FREE FOR LIFE'S REALLY IMPORTANT WORK, WHICH IS The doing of something new.

⁂

In life's little ROUTINE, HABIT is a time saver and effort saver.

In the BIG work of life, habit is a drawback; it means dulness, lack of progress.

This picture is good, because it shows us to ourselves in a striking way as we are.

We get into a certain circular routine, and we go round and round and ROUND, week in and week out, year in and year out. We carry our load of real or imaginary troubles. We have our little collection of money or ambitions of a small kind. And with this weight on our back we go in a circle—few of us have the energy to break out and get away into the wide fields of effort WORTH WHILE.

Habit is our circle and our slavery.

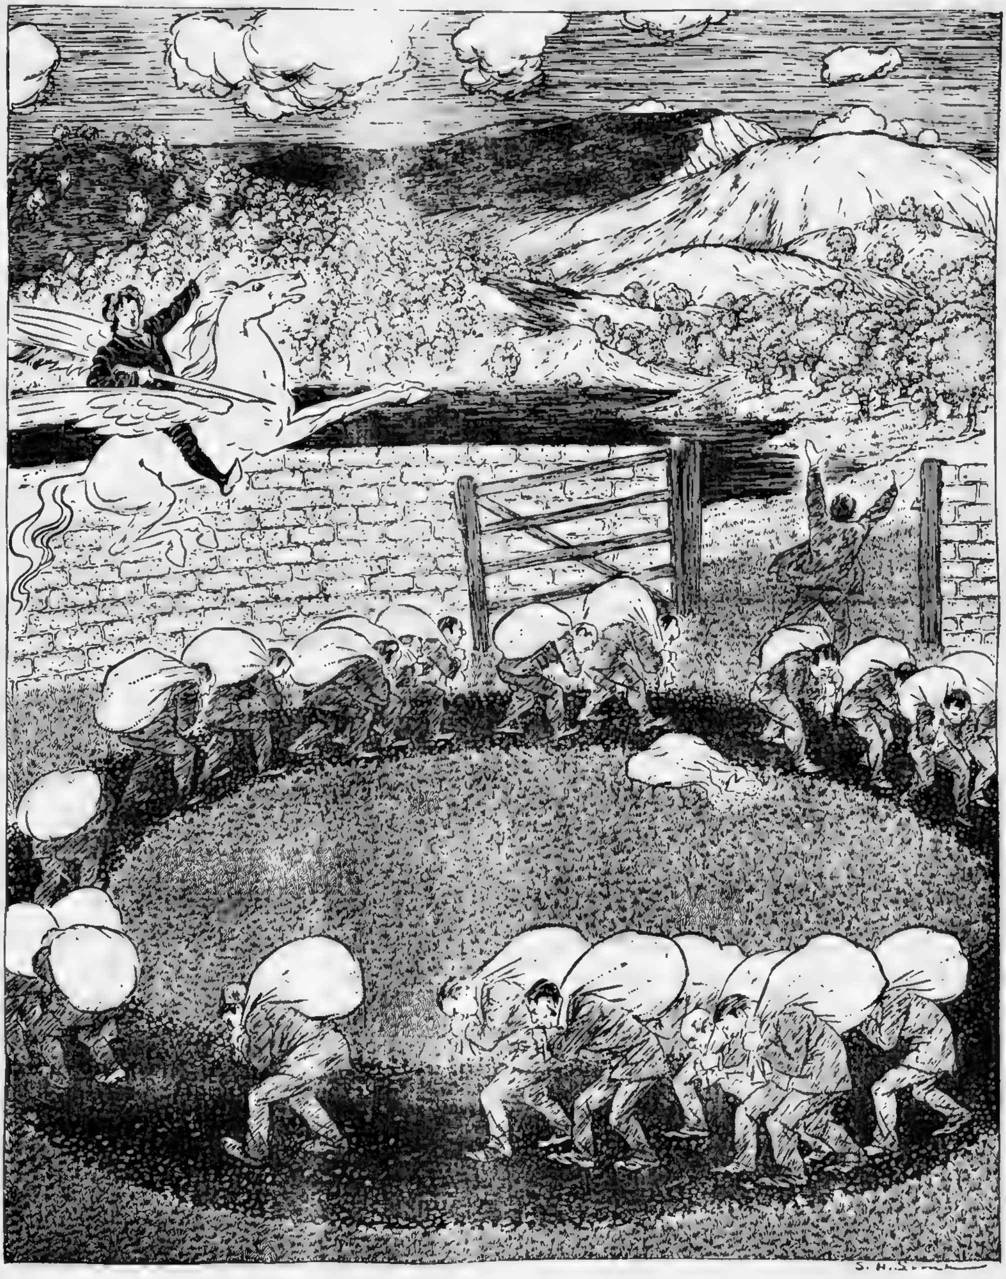
Those who have done something in history have had courage to break with habit, and energy to do the new, UNUSUAL thing.

All men were in the habit of going by a certain route to India. Christopher Columbus gave up that HABIT and decided to go to India by a new way. He didn't find the new road to India, but he DID discover this continent, which was better.

Scientific men were in the habit of believing that the sun went around the earth, that the entire marvellous universe whirled around our wretched little planet. But a man of higher grade got OUT of that habit of thought, and found the truth about creation in which we are a speck.

For ages men were in the habit of bowing down to others. They suffered taxation, blows and enforced military service, brutality, torture. But here and there in France, in England, here in 1776, MEN BROKE AWAY FROM THE HABIT OF SERVILITY AND FREE NATIONS WERE BORN.

They are fighting HABIT in Russia to-day, good luck to their noble fight.



Round and Round They Go, in One Small Circle, Faces Downward—Over and Over the Same Dull Routine.
Have YOU a Heavy Bag on Your Back? Are You Walking in a Circle?

⁂

It takes energy to break a habit. For, as we have said, habit means doing things WITHOUT MENTAL EFFORT. And effort is painful to our untrained minds. Only recently the feeble brain in our bony skulls has come up from the animal condition. We have but a few short centuries of imperfect thinking behind us. We dislike mental activity as the unhappy sloth dislikes walking. And when we begin to think we are more like a sloth upon the ground than like an eagle in the air. We have got to change from the sloths into something better; the breaking up of mental HABIT is the first step.

But don't imagine, young men, that the first step in getting out of a rut IS TO GIVE UP HARD, DISAGREEABLE WORK. There is nothing more foolish than the notion that the way to make progress is to drop one thing before you have settled upon another, BETTER.

The deadly routine of habit to which we refer is the custom of THINKING in a rut. WORKING in a rut does no harm IF YOUR MIND IS FREE, ACTIVE, ORIGINAL IN ITS EFFORT.

Our manner of making a living is not very important, provided we succeed in taking care of those that depend upon us.

⁂

While Newton was making his wonderful discoveries, inventing differential calculus, working on his theories of cosmic mechanical organization, HE WAS A ROUTINE SALARIED CLERK. The ordinary young person in such a position would say, "Work like this kills genius. How can I amount to anything while I have to do work that is not inspiring?"

You CAN do anything you please, no matter what your occupation, no matter how small your pay, no matter how small your bedroom, no matter how uninteresting your surroundings, IF YOU WILL FORBID YOUR BRAIN TO GET INTO A HABIT.

Read books, think about them. QUESTION everything that is put before you. Keep in your mind one of the most hopeful and inspiring of the Bible's texts: "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

That text, often quoted on this page in the past and often TO BE quoted upon it in the future, should be the guide of all who want to keep out of the rut.

Don't take ANYTHING for granted, so long as you do not know it yourself PROVE EVERYTHING for yourself.

Select the truth on your own account.

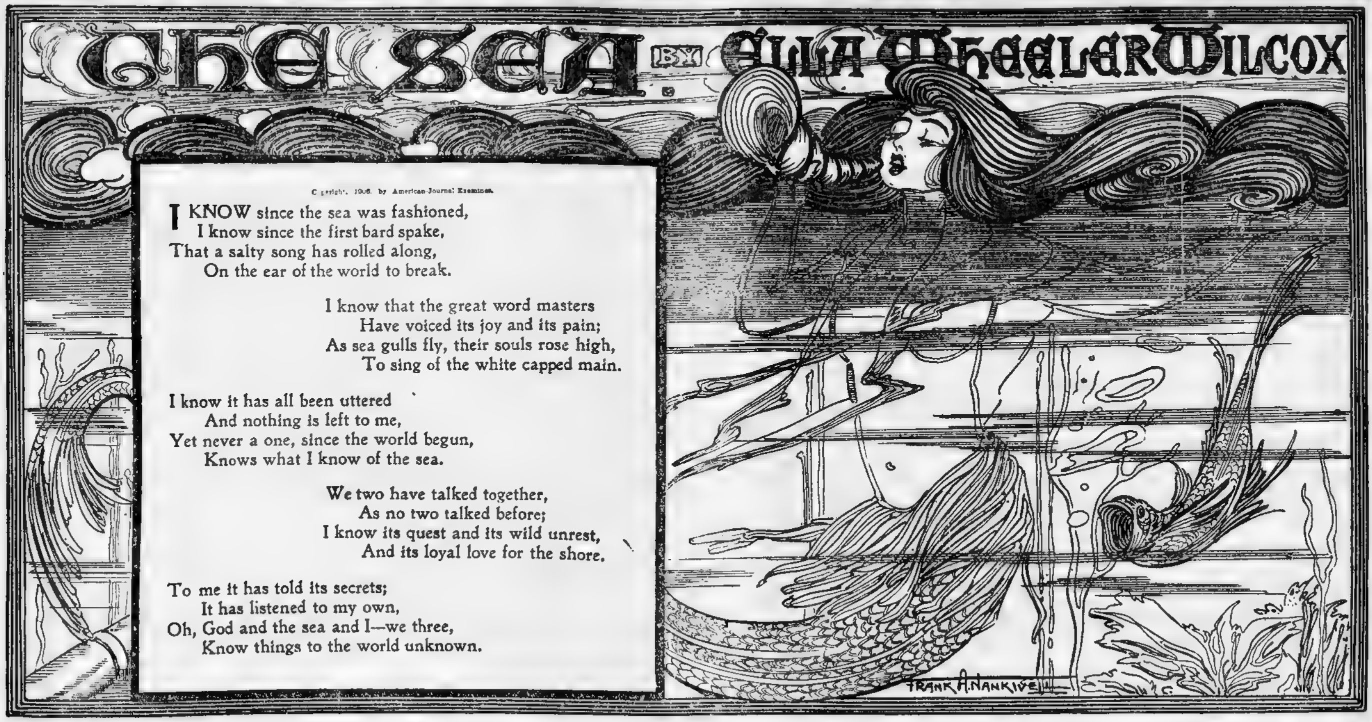
Avoid routine in your intellectual processes.

Don't repeat the thoughts of OTHERS. Don't slavishly share and follow the political OPINIONS of others.

Don't allow political tricksters to own you and deliver you because you are so much in the habit of voting for THEM that you can't think for YOURSELF.

Be independent, be yourself, BE A MAN.

THE SEA BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX



Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner.

I KNOW since the sea was fashioned,
I know since the first bard spake,
That a salty song has rolled along,
On the ear of the world to break.

I know that the great word masters
Have voiced its joy and its pain;
As sea gulls fly, their souls rose high,
To sing of the white capped main.

I know it has all been uttered
And nothing is left to me,
Yet never a one, since the world begun,
Knows what I know of the sea.

We two have talked together,
As no two talked before;
I know its quest and its wild unrest,
And its loyal love for the shore.

To me it has told its secrets;
It has listened to my own,
Oh, God and the sea and I—we three,
Know things to the world unknown.

A Short Cut to Fame (The Song Writer.)

By William F. Kirk

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner

THE other night, when I dropped in for a chat, I found him in a thoughtful mood.

"Now, what?" I ventured, mechanically, reaching for the bottle of Scotch and its understudy, the siphon.

"I have run out of ideas for fresh melodies," said the Song Writer. "It's too bad you aren't up on composing."

The Song Writer was always reminding me of my shortcomings, and his allusion to my lack of composing skill did not come as a surprise. Years ago I spent six months in the composing room of the Chippewa Falls Herald, and at one time in my youth, when I was in practice, I could play "Life Is Like a Mountain Railroad" on the piano with one finger. Further than that my musical education did not reach.

"Of course," continued the Song Writer, "if you could fake up a few nice melodies for some of my latest lyrics I'd declare you in on the profits. Think how pleasant it would be for you if you could leave your Harlem hall room and dwell in just such luxury as now surrounds you. I have here three complete sets of words, and simply cannot scare up a single note to go with them. This one, 'When Father's Flush Was Beaten by a Full,' is a sure hit, once it is set to the right melody.

"He gave a shuddering sigh, a tear came to his eye,
I never shall forget his white old face;
Poor mother had the blues and the baby got no show
When father's flush was beaten by an ace.

"Don't those words get to you good and hard?" he asked me.

"In a way," I agreed. "But how can an ace beat a flush? How can an ace beat any old poker hand?"

"Poetic license," said the Song Writer. "I mean an ace full."

"Even so," I persisted. "Why an ace full, when a deuce full or a tray full would do just as well?"

"You do not understand. You cannot understand," was his pitying answer. "Dropping the poker song for the time being. I have here two others, 'There's a Cockroach in Your Tresses, Mamie, Dear,' and 'Lorenzo, Leave That Potted Ham Alone.' How do they strike you?"

"I like the last one," I told him. "Maybe I could fake up some kind of a tune for it."

The Song Writer was delighted. "Now you're shouting," he chuckled. "There, there"—as I began humming, "don't be in a hurry. Take it home and give plenty of time to the stunt. Remember that true greatness can come to no mortal without a long, patient struggle. I worked four weeks on the line of my first real song hit, 'It Was in a Laundry That I Seen Her First.' Take your time, take your time. And now, good-night."

Dismissed with a graceful wave of his hand, I found myself on the street, and riding home on the Subway that evening I looked over the Song Writer's lyric. This is it:

And then she gasped: "Lorenzo, leave that potted ham alone."

Lorenzo, Leave That Potted Ham Alone.

I.

In a far-off distant city in a country o'er the sea
A loving pair was sitting down to have their family tea;
The man was tall and handsome and he wore a sleeveless vest,
The lady was red-headed, but magnificently dressed.
The loving husband gently said, "I'm hungry, so I am,"
And balanced on his knife blade half an ounce of potted ham;
The missus with the lurid locks just gave a frightened moan,
And then she gasped, "Lorenzo, leave that potted ham alone!"

CHORUS.

In the Jungle it was canned,
In a great and glorious land,
Where the Trusts waste neither gristle, hide nor bone;
Where some Lithuanian guy
Added scrapings on the sly—
"Lorenzo, leave that potted ham alone!"

II.

The husband shrugged his shoulders, and he took a healthy bite,
And finished up that potted ham upon that fateful night.
In vain his wife entreated him to eat some currant jell,
After each knifeful of the dope he murmured, "What t'ell!"
Now in that far-off city there lies a new-made grave,
O'er which a weeping woman mourns the man she tried to save;
Her locks, once red as sunrise, are streaked with lines of gray,
And often now she recollects the words she once did say:
Chorus: "In the Jungle it was canned, etc."

"This one, 'When Father's Flush Was Beaten by a Full,' is a sure hit, once it is set to the right melody."

Mirandy on Love

By Dorothy Dix

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner

"NIGHT befo' las'," observed Mirandy, "dere was a lot of gals an' boys at my house, an' dey was prognosticatin' 'bout de wharforeness of love, an' near as I could make out dey all seemed to think dat hit was a kind of chills an' fever, whar you was fust hot, an' den cold, an' trimbly lak you had de ague.

"'Dat's hit,' says Ma'y Jane, a-rollin' her eyes up to de ceilin' lak a dyin' calf, 'dat's hit. Whenever you come nigh to de pusson dat youse in love wid, you is tookin' wid de thrills an' feels lak youse got de palpitation of de heart.'

"'Huh,' says I, 'dem symptoms ain't no sign of nothin' ceptin' you is done et too much biled cabbage for supper, an' is got de dyspepsy. I ain't never seed no case of palpitation of de heart yit dat I couldn't settle wid a dose of sody water.'

"'You ain't in love,' says Sim Johnsing, 'onless youse always a-thinkin' 'bout de absent one, when you is away from 'em.'

"'Sometimes,' 'spon's I, 'hit's a lot easier to love a pusson when dey is absent dan hit is when dey is present.'

"'When you is in love,' says Alice Maud Gladys Geraldine, whut's got a poetical soul, an' recites 'Curfew Shall Not Ring To-night' at de chu'ch sociable in a voice dat sounds lak cracked ice rattling around in a pitcher, 'when youse in love, you is lifted above de sordid affairs of dis world, an' am transluted to de realm of de spiritual.'

"'Maybe so,' 'spons I, 'but I ain't noticed dat any of Ma'y Jane's beaus is done let up on deir feed any. When hit comes to tacklin' fried chicken an' new corn of a Sunday dinner, de love don't appear to interfere none wid de appetite.'

"'Oh, Ma,' 'sclaims Ma'y Jane.

"'Well, Sis Mirandy,' says Sim Johnsing, 'sence you have sperunced hit, suppose you tell us whut you think dat love is.'

"'Love,' says I, 'is dat whut make a man git out an' hustle to make a livin' for a woman an' a woman thank God on a cold mawnin', dat she is got a husband to git up an' cook breakfast for. Love is whut makes a man ruther hand over his pay envelope to a woman on Saturday night dan to spend hit on store clothes [illegible] beer for hisself, an' hit's whut makes a woman wear her year befo' las' bonnet widout sayin' a word rather dan make a man wuk overtime to buy her a new one. Ef you will look around in yo' system [illegible] of dem symptoms, you is in love, but ef you don't find dem you ain't, an' hit don't make no difference whedder yo' heart is doin' flip-flaps or settin' still tendin' to business in de same ole way. Dat ain't got nothin' to do wid hit.

"'Nuther is whether [illegible] thinkin' 'bout a pusson when dey is gone. My Lawd! thinkin' 'bout folks is a mighty cheap way to love. It's mighty easy to think 'bout anybody, but to link in an' wuk for 'em—dat's a gray horse of anodder color.'

"Yassum, dat's so, an' I'se sick an' tired of all dis talk 'bout lovin', when dere ain't nothin' doin'. I'se wore out wid hearin' men dat comes home drunk of a night [illegible]-tellin' how dey loves deir noble, angel wives, an' hit sho'ly does rasp my nerves to hear women whose husbands are goin' around wid de buttons off of deir shuts, an' holes de size of a saucer in deir socks, a-holdin' forth 'bout deir bein' so devoted to deir husbands dat dey would be willin' to die for 'em.

"Dere's Mose Hoskins, dat is dat lazy dat he ain't never done a hand's turn of wuk sence de day he was married to Sis Maria Tompkins. Dese twenty years Sis Maria is done took to in washin' an' supported him, an' all dat he does is to set in de shade by de tubs in de Summer, an' by de kitchen biler in de Winter, whar Sis Maria is bendin' over de washboard, a expostulatin' to her 'bout how devoted he is to her, an' how he loves her better ev'y year dat goes by. An' den when he gits tired watchin' Sis Maria wuk, he puts on de clean collar dat she has done ironed an' starts down de street, a-tellin' ev'ybody dat he meets 'bout how he is afeared dat his dear wife ain't as strong as she used to be, an' how hit suttinly would kill him ef de Lawd see fittin' to rob him of his treasure.

"An' all de women dat hears how beautiful he talks 'bout his wife say dat he sho'ly is a pattern of devotion, an' none of dem don't think dat hit's a mighty po' love dat takes hitself out in talk, lak one of dese heah fire crackers dat fizzles an' sputters out wid a great big noise, instid of hittin' somethin' lak a rifle ball.

"For br'er Mose's love ain't strong enough to make him go out an' git a job so dat Sis Maria won't have to wuk herself to death. I S'pecks he will mourn somethin' grand at her funeral, but hit's a lot easier to shed tears grievin' for a pusson dan hit is to shed perspiration wukin' for 'em.

"An dere's Sis Samanthy Jenkins. She's one of dem women dat totes a lock of her husband's hair in a bag around her neck, an' wears a life size portrait of him pinned on her chist, an' sets up by de hour an' tells you how she wusships him, an' how she ain't never happy out of his sight, an' dat she ain't never been parted from him a single day sence she's been married.

"Hit sho'ly does uplift you to hear dem noble words, an' see sech a grand image of devotion, ontell you happens to cast yo' eye under de bed an' see dat de flo' hasn't had no acquaintance wid de broom in a cat's age, an' dat de dishes is still a-standin' in de sink, an' dat dere ain't nary a place in de house dat ain't all gormed up wid whar de chillen is done smeared bread an' molasses, an' dat Sis Samanthy is been too lazy to clean up.

"Den hit sorter dribbles in on you dat Sis Samanthy's love is all wind, an' dat real love would make her roll up her sleeves, an' git a broom an' a mop, an' make dat house so dat a tired man would have some comfortable place to rest in when he come home, an' somethin' fittin' to eat on de table.

"An' dere's dose folks wid red haided tempers dat is always a sailin' into each odder, an' makin' remarks dat cuts to de bone, an' dat den, when dey cools off, has de gall to talk 'bout de way dey love.

"Huh! Dey don't love but one pusson—an' dat's deirself. When we'se got anything dat we think a lot of, we don't go lambastin' hit 'bout. We takes keer of hit. I done heared 'bout dese heah men dat comes home all tanked up, an' beats deir wives, an' den tells how dey love 'em; but I takes notice dat you don't hear of none of dem men ever gittin' drunk enough to beat deirselfs.

"Nawm, love ain't talkin'. Hit's doin', an' ontell a man is smitten wid a yearnin' to wuk for a woman, instid of holdin' her hand an' quote poetry books to her, he needn't worry 'bout de state of his affections. An' neider is a gal got any cause to wonder ef her true love is hove in sight ontell she sees some feller dat she feels lak she would be willin' to wear ole clothes for.

"De love dat wants to make you do somethin' for a pusson is de only love dat's all wool, an' a yard wide, an' dat won't shrink in de washin', an' dat will stand matermony. I don't want no man tellin' me dat he loves me, an' den let me split my own kindlin', an' tote in de coal."

"All dat he does is to set in de shade by de tubs in de Summer."

"Love is dat what makes a man git out an' hustle."

Newport maids and matrons are living the strenuous life. The search for pleasure is entrancing but wearying, and the popular hostess is literally a working woman.

SOCIETY SEEKS THE SEA IN YACHTS OR AT SHORE VILLAS

BY A SOCIETY WOMAN.

"Ho for the sea, the sea!" is the slogan of smart society, and the general world of opulence and ease is either cruising about in luxuriously-equipped yachts, enjoying the novelty of "a home on the rolling deep," or occupying the marine villas that have sprung up like fairy palaces in the breeze-swept cities-by-the-sea. The prosaic life of country club and country home is of the past, so far as this season and the ultra-fashionables are concerned.

Now that the midsummer madness of the pleasure chase is at its height, even the most indolent find themselves caught in the gay swirl and going the pace that kills.

Hostesses, vieing with each other, are surpassing themselves this season in the novelty and numbers of their entertainments.

Prospective moonlight motoring parties, tennis tournaments, afternoon teas and luncheons, dinners, bridge parties, hops and concerts, will keep the smart contingent at the various resorts in one ceaseless round of activity

"Mrs. Jack" to Remain Abroad.

Word has been received here that Mrs. John L. Gardner, who sailed for Europe some few weeks ago, intending to remain only throughout the Summer, has changed her plans and will remain abroad until late in the Winter. Boston society without Mrs. "Jack" will indeed be dull, as there are few hospitalities during the season in which she is not conspicuous.

In September Mrs. Gardner will be joined on the other side by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith (Corrina Putnam) for an automobile trip through Italy. The Smiths will spend the latter part of the Winter on the Nile.

Miss Blake's Wedding Date Not Fixed.

Expectation of a visit from the stork by Mrs. Frederick L. W. Richardson is given for the reason for the date of Miss Beatrice Blake's wedding to William Nickerson not having been definitely announced. Mrs. Richardson is Miss Blake's only sister, and she and her husband have been spending the past two years abroad. They are now living near London, where they were joined recently by Miss Blake and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Welland-Blake of Brookline. Miss Blake has elected that her wedding shall take place at her sister's home in England late in August.

Miss Buckingham to Wed in Fall.

In the brilliant array of October bridals, that of Francis Bacon Sears, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Bacon Sears of Marlborough street, Harvard '05, and Miss Marion Buckingham, of this city and Wayland, will stand out conspicuously.

It will be a church affair, and as the connections, particularly on the groom's side, are large and fashionable, smart society will be out in force. Miss Katherine Sears, the only sister of Mr. Sears, will be maid of honor.

EXODUS TO EUROPE DEPLETES SOCIETY

"Globe-Trotting" Tendencies of Americans Are Becoming More Pronounced Each Year.

The "globe trotting" tendencies of Americans proclaim them the coming cosmopolitans of the world. More insistently each year comes the call of foreign lands and the response to this call is little short of amazing.

A veritable exodus of the fashionables, which began in early Spring, is still on, and important departures are noted daily.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. Charles L. Harding of Dedham were among those sailing Tuesday for a Summer in Europe. The Hardings are enthusiastic over their plans for the season, which include an extended automobile tour on the continent. They sailed on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. and will join Mrs. Edgar Harding and her daughter, Priscilla, of Beacon street, who went abroad last Winter and will return with them in the Fall.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Bertram B. Stoddard of Dedham and their two children are among the well known society folk planning to sail Tuesday on the Saxonia. They will remain abroad two months, during which time they will make a tour through England, Switzerland and France.

* * *

Miss M. E. Hogan and her sister, Katherine, of Dorchester are to sail by the same boat.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lavell of Hammond street, Chestnut Hill, and their two young sons were among those sailing the past week on the Republic. Mr and Mrs. Alfred Bowditch, of Bay State road, with their two pretty and popular daughters, Mary and Rosamond, Charles D. Bigelow and the Misses Porter were others sailing by the same boat.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. Arthur Little, Francis Appleton, Jr., of Marlboro street and General Nelson A. Miles sailed from New York on the Oceanic early in the week and all will spend the entire Summer in Europe.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. John L. Thorndike, who are at their Manchester estate with their pretty debutante daughter, Alice, are planning to sail early next month for London, where they will attend the wedding of their niece, Beatrice Blake.

* * *

Sailing on the Kaiserin from New York on Wednesday were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and Mr. Yale Dolan, who will go directly to Mr. Whitney's place in the north of England to enjoy the shooting. Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno sailed at the same time and will pass several weeks abroad.

* * *

Rear Admiral French E. Chadwick and Mrs. Chadwick are planning to sail August 4 for Europe, where they will spend three months in touring on the continent. The rear admiral before sailing will finish his book on "The Causes of the Civil War," which he has spent some time in writing.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. Clarence S. Day sailed Tuesday for England, where they will spend the coming six weeks.

* * *

Among the fashionables yet to sail are Mr and Mrs. Clarence Moore, who have been spending the early season at Swiftmoore, their Pride's Crossing villa. They have engaged passage for Thursday, July 26, and will remain abroad until the latter part of September, when they will return to Pride's for a short stay before going to Washington for the Winter. Mr. Moore has just returned from Warrington, Va., where he has a large and prospering stock farm, to which he devotes much of his time.

* * *

Mrs. "Billy" Travers, who was at Newport early in the week, left for New York on Wednesday and sailed at once for England for an indefinite stay.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney sailed for Europe July 19th. During their absence their children will remain at their Newport villa.

POINT JUDITH CLUB PLAN TO ENTERTAIN

To Enliven Season at Narragansett Pier With Series of Dinners and Parties.

Among the Casino throng during the week were Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Collier, Mr and Mrs. A[illegible] Levering Gunter, Lieutenant Governor Eben S. Draper of Massachusetts and Mrs. Draper, and Mrs. Vaughn M. Coyne of New York.

Among the more notable Casino lunches of the week was one given by Mrs. A. Wolff, Jr., of New York on Wednesday, whose party included Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Trevor of New York, Mr and Mrs. Morgan Tillinghast of Philadelphia, and Mr Edward Gray of Boston. A luncheon was given the same day by Dr. William Francis Homan, house physician at the Matthewson, to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dugan and Dr. and Mrs. Horace Bowen of New York.

The Point Judith Country Club is planning a series of dinners and dances during the season. The club has re-elected Philip S. P. Randolph president, Edward Conner secretary and treasurer and has chosen the following new board of governors, Thomas B. Wanamaker, William L. Shepherd, Francis H. Dewey, William A. Hazard, Samuel G. Thompson, N. Monroe Hopkins, Willard P. Ward, Edward L. Welsh, Samuel H. Valentine, Joseph R. Dilworth, James W. Clark, Willard P. Ward, Charles L. Benninger, Horace Wylie, Edward A. Mitchell, C. Eustace Garratt, Charles McVeagh. James H. Morton, formerly of Lakewood and previously connected with prominent Southern clubs, has been engaged by the club as golfing master.

Congressman Robert R. Hitt of Illinois has arrived at Kinney's Lodge, where his family is domiciled. James W. Greaves of Providence has taken Cloverlawn, on the Kingstown road, for the season. Mrs. James W. Cooke of Philadelphia has rented Mrs. Willard Kent's cottage on Ocean road, and Mrs. Percival Frazer of the same city has secured Mrs. C. H. Pope's Anchorage on the Cliffs.

A luncheon given at the Casino by Mrs. Irving Chace Monday was followed by bridge. Pink roses and ferns adorned the tables. In the party were Mrs. C. S. Rodman, Mrs. E. A. Mitchell, Mrs. Samuel H. Valentine, Mrs. Saunders P. Jones, Mrs W. H. Lane, Miss Margaret E. Gale, Mrs. Margaret E. Gale, Mrs W. P. Denegre, Mrs. Henry de Coppett, Mrs. Henry B. Kane, Mrs R. G. Dunn, Mrs. William P. Fraser, Mrs. Philip M. Prescott, Mrs. Charles Hitchcock.

H. W. Sage entertained Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Mitchell and Grenville Richard Fortesque at a Casino lunch Tuesday.

REPORT MARION FISH BETROTHED

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish Expected to Announce Engagement of Daughter Soon.

The hostesses par excellence of Newport who are planning the largest and most elaborate entertainments of the season are Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mrs. Robert Goelet.

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish has announced that the first in her series of large Saturday evening dinners will be given August 11. In the meantime Mrs. Fish, who is considered by many as the social leader of Newport, is giving several minor hospitalities. Her daughter Marion is with her now and several of the functions to be given at Crossways will be in her honor.

It is expected that before the season is ended Miss Fish's engagement to Paul Rainey will be announced, as his attentions to the fair young heiress have been quite pronounced and gossiped about for some time.

* * *

Mrs. Fish's entertainments are not only the most original given in the gilded colony, but are most frequent, and the largest. A dinner or luncheon for twenty-five is considered a small affair by Mrs. Fish. When she entertains in the evening a company of vaudeville performers or a well known singer is generally present. It was at Crossways that the first society cake walk was danced.

Mrs. Belmont having no daughter left to bring out in society will formally present her son, Harold Vanderbilt, at a ball which she plans to give next month at Marble House. It will be one of the season's largest and most elaborate affairs, and the younger set in which young Vanderbilt is a prime favorite will be much in evidence. Mrs. Belmont will also give several large dinners later in the Summer.

* * *

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, who has just returned from her cruise to Bar Harbor with Mr. Vanderbilt on his yacht North Star, will be a close rival to Mrs. Fish in point of unique entertainments, of which she has many planned for the coming months.

Mrs. Robert Goelet, the youngest in the quartet of Newport's most prominent hostesses and who a little more than a year ago as Miss Elsie Whelen of Philadelphia was a fascinating bride, will later give several large affairs at Ochre Court. Just at present this interesting young matron is busy with preparations for the advent of a little stranger [illegible] and most of her entertainments [illegible] been postponed till the late season.

* * *

Mrs. Bryce J. Allan, one of Boston's most brilliant society women, is now at her Summer home at Beverly Farms, where she is kept busy entertaining house parties and giving larger and more formal affairs than in any previous season.

She is extremely fond of al fresco affairs and most of her minor hospitalities take the form of teas and luncheons served on the beautiful lawn of her estate.

WHAT SUBURBAN SOCIETY IS DOING

L. N. Scott and family of Franklin are at North Scituate for the Summer.

Mrs. G. E. Duffy and children are occupying the Mitchell cottage at North Scituate.

Miss Mildred B. Hamlin of Medway has been spending the past week in Salem.

The new home at Unionville of Joseph G. Ray was the scene of a quiet though pretty wedding Wednesday evening, when Winthrop B. Nye, superintendent of the Ray system of street railways, married Miss Susie Irwin, for many years secretary to the late Edgar K. Ray.

Peter R. Cauley, with a party of Boston friends, are in camp at Kingsbury's pond.

Mrs. E. B. Howard and daughter of Manchester, N. H., are the guests of friends in Medway.

In honor of her niece, Miss Stella Meyers, who is visiting at her home in Medfield, Mrs. W. W. Whiting gave a musicale to twenty of her young friends.

Miss Gertrude Beaudry and J. Adolph Siebel were married at Marlboro last Sunday afternoon by Rev. Arthur H. Wheelock of the Congregational Church. Mr. and Mrs. Siebel will reside in Medway.

Miss Grace Shannon of Medfield has been spending the past few days at Old Orchard Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Marston of No. 48 Rindge avenue, Cambridge, have gone to Clever Ridge farm, Meredith, N. H., for the remainder of the month.

COUNT BISMARCK AND HIS COUSIN INTEREST NEWPORT

Newport, July 21.—Important arrivals this week have been Count von Bismarck-Bohlen and his cousin, Count von Arnim, who are just now at one of the hotels, but who will later be taken up by society. It is said that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt may give a small dance in their honor early in August, but "small dances," so-called by Newport's princely entertainers, usually turn out to be splendid balls, and the first function of the season at the "Beaulieu" palace is eagerly awaited by society. Count Bismarck is making a tour of the world. He met Mrs. Vanderbilt at the Kiel races, where she was the guest of Prince Henry of Prussia, Admiral in the German navy.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. D. Lanier (Harriet Bishop), who went abroad last Autumn to remain away a year, by which time they believed their young son would have become entirely cured of his infatuation for the pretty waitress at the Groton restaurant, of which he was a frequenter, have returned to their Gravel Court villa.

* * *

"A Fete in a Venetian Garden," comprising a Venetian scene, with a restaurant in a garden, will be given at the Casino Theatre Saturday afternoon and evening, July 28, under the booth management of Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mrs. DeLancey Kane, Mrs. Edward J. Berwind, Mrs. Albert P. Cleaves and Mrs. Royal Phelps Carroll. The fete is given for the benefit of the Army and Navy Young Men's Christian Association of Newport.

* * *

Mrs. William G. Roelker's dinner function at Hawkhurst villa is the talk of the town, owing to its magnificence, which nearly outdid her St. Regis Hotel party of last Winter. In the centre of the table was a large silver bowl, from which protruded an artificial rosebush on a V-shaped trellis. It extended to the right and left of the dining hall, with a spread between the tips of the wings measuring forty-five feet.

* * *

President I. Townsend Burden has authorized the erection of a sun pavilion at Bailey's Beach, 100 feet long and 20 wide, from which the bathers can be seen from comfortable chairs. An innovation is the serving of Russian tea to the bathers upon emerging from the water. A room has been fitted up for the purpose.

* * *

Ex-Mayor Henry Bedlow is in Newport from New York. Edward Gray, who is summering at Narragansett Pier, is making frequent trips to Newport. Robert N. Carson's steam yacht Marietta has arrived here. Moses Taylor of Mount Kisco is visiting Mr and Mrs Henry A. C. Taylor. Mrs. Harold Brown entertained forty young people at Bristol Ferry the other day. Mr and Mrs. Oliver Gould Jennings have arrived at Belleacre at Bailey's Beach. Miss Marion Fish has joined her mother, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, at the Crossways.

* * *

Mrs. Fish, Harry Lehr, Mrs. Lehr and Sanford Beatty automobiled out to the island farming districts Wednesday noon, going as far as Tiverton, where they ate luncheon and saw the dancing at Island Park.

* * *

Miss Clara Knight enlivened the midway on Wednesday when she appeared in a new carriage costume of turkey red with parasol to match.

* * *

The white and gold ballroom at Beechwood is being regilded and retouched preparatory to Mrs. Astor's arrival in September, and is giving employment to ten men. The gold leaf on the Beechwood ballroom originally cost $40,000.

* * *

Professor Lark of Harvard has taken apartments at The Berkeley for a few weeks. Ex-Commodore Lewis Cass Ledyard is negotiating for a new schooner yacht of racing type to be built by the Herreshoffs at Bristol.

* * *

Mr and Mrs Howard G. Cushing (Ethel Cochrane), who are passing the Newport season with Robert M. Cushing at The Ledges, began receiving floral tributes from their friends on the birth of a son.

* * *

Mrs. Blair Fairchild (Edith Cushing) left Newport last week for a visit with Mrs J. B. Fairchild at Hyde Park-on the Hudson. Thomas Slidell of New York is at The Berkeley for the season.

* * *

George R. Rose of New York with his family has arrived to occupy the Julia Eldridge villa at the corner of Victoria and Ruggles avenues.

* * *

James Renwick is in Newport visiting his mother, Mrs. Henry B. Renwick, at the Needwood cottage on Parker avenue. Commodore and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt have returned from Bar Harbor on their steam yacht North Star. Mrs. Hamilton Fish has taken one of the Cliff cottages.

* * *

Richard Stevens of Castle Point, who has entered in every Newport tennis tournament since its inception here, and who is said to own "half of Hoboken," has arrived with Mrs. Stevens to visit Mr and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan.

* * *

Mrs. Thomas W. King of Hempstead is spending some time in Newport. Mrs. King, who was Cornelia Griswold Peabody, is a granddaughter of George Griswold Haven of New York, Lenox and Newport. She is one of the leading lights in the Ladies' Kennel Association of America.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. Philip W. Livermore (Fannie Iselin), who are honeymooning in Paris, and often in the company of the Baroness de Seillière and the Comtesse de Luberzac, are returning to this country in September, and will be at Newport before the season closes.

* * *

The most gorgeous array of hydrangeas to be seen at Newport so far this season are those on the front lawn at the Nathaniel Thayer villa. They are set out in a semicircle following the driveway, and are in pinks and blues.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. Lewis Butler Preston (Mabel McAfee) of New York are here to visit Mr and Mrs James B. Haggin at "Arleigh." The Marquis Villa de Rosa of Italy is the guest of Colonel and Mrs. John C. Mallery on Kay street. Austin Sands has had his sloop yacht Novice placed in commission at the Newport shipyard. Frederick W. Rhinelander is visiting Mrs. Leroy King.

* * *

Miss Pauline LeRoy French, daughter of Mr and Mrs Amos Tuck French, will pass the greater part of the Summer in Newport. Miss French, who has been greatly admired abroad as well as in her own country, is very popular in the younger set at Tuxedo.

* * *

Mr and Mrs. J. Laurens Van Alen have decided not to come over this year, and so "Rosetta" will not be occupied. Mr and Mrs. "Larry" Waterbury of Long Island are guests of Mr and Mrs. Payne Whitney at the Henry White villa on Harrison avenue. George R. Fearing, Jr., of Cambridge, is the guest of Mr and Mrs Frederick Sheldon. Roderick Terry, Jr., is visiting J. D. R. Baldwin at villa Chateau Nouga. John F. Brice, H. A. Curtis and George H. Benjamin are at the Muenchinger King cottage.

* * *

Newport Summer society has an important acquisition in Miss Edith Rotch of The Marshes, Nonquit, Mass. She is the eldest daughter of Mr and Mrs. William Rotch and a descendant of the late Artemas Rotch of Boston.

* * *

Miss Marguerite G. Chapin, who is summering at the Weaver cottage, is fast becoming an expert automobilist. Miss Chapin lately returned to this country from a long Paris sojourn.

* * *

Charles A. Childs of New York has taken the Shields villa on Ochre Point, known as Nethercliff. W. S. Hill of Washington is recorded at the Newport Casino. Mrs. G. A. Huhn is entertaining Miss Rhawn of Carpenter, Pa., at her Narragansett avenue villa. Mrs. Lewis Richardson of Roxbury is at the Oak cottage, Jamestown, R. I., for the remainder of the season.

* * *

Miss Isabel Dorothy Cameron, daughter of the late Sir Roderick Cameron, died Monday at her home on Staten Island. Her two sisters, Misses Catherine and Margaret Cameron, were in Newport recently, the former as guest of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish and the latter of Mrs. Edward R. Thomas.

* * *

Miss Edith Rotch of Vincent club fame, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rotch of Bay State road and Miss Edith Deacon won their first match in the women's handicap doubles lawn tennis tournament at the Casino Wednesday morning. Their opponents were Miss Gwendoline Burden and Miss Harriman, to whom they had to give fifteen. The match was pulled out 6-4, 7-5. The Misses Irene and Mildred Sherman made their first appearance in tournament the same morning, and though they put up a good game, they were beaten.

* * *

The William Putnams of Beacon street, who have been at Manchester-by-the-Sea since the closing of their town house, are the guests at Newport of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald De Koven.

* * *

Mrs. Nathan Matthews of Beacon street, with her attractive daughter, Miss Nathalie, who have been at their beautiful country place, Black Brook Farm, at Hamilton, for the past few weeks, are at present in the White Mountains, where they are registered at the Waumbek in Jefferson. They will remain there till the end of this month.

* * *

Miss Hannah Stevenson of Beacon street, president of the Vincent Club, has been entertaining her friend, Ethel Cryder, the New York belle, at her country home at Pride's Crossing. Miss Cryder concluded her visit early in the week and is now with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Cryder, at their magnificent estate in Southampton. Miss Cryder is particularly happy over the fact that her sister, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames (Edith Cryder) of Dartmouth street, and North Easton, is to be so near, as they have leased an estate adjoining the Cryders.

* * *

Miss Marion Burdett, whose engagement to Prescott Bigelow, Jr., was announced last Spring, is summering with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Burdett of Bay State road, at their country place in Marion. The Burdettes have recently purchased a fine new power boat, and it is in this that Miss Marion, who is noted for her skill in handling a boat, spends most of her time.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Chick, their daughter, Miss Mabel, and their son, William C. Chick, who have just returned from a year's tour abroad, are at their beautiful Summer place at Swampscott.

* * *

The T. James Bowlkers of Beacon street, who have been at their country place at Framingham since closing their town house, have gone to Northeast Harbor, where they are occupying a Kimball cottage and where they will remain until their departure for Europe later in the season. Katherine Roosevelt, Mrs. Bowlker's charming debutante daughter, is with them. Mrs. W. W. Vaughan and Miss Mary Vaughan are in one of their own cottages for the Summer and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parkman are at the Parkman cottage.

* * *

The J. Murray Kays of Gardner road, Brookline, are at their cottage, Eastern Point, Gloucester, for the remainder of the season.

* * *

The Misses Eulalie M. and Marie V. Iasigi have closed their Dedham cottage, where they spent the early season, and have gone to Northeast Harbor, Mt. Desert for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Codman are to occupy the small Meyer cottage on Main street, in Hamilton, after Sept. 1. Mrs. Codman, who is among the most attractive of the younger society matrons, is a sister of Mrs. Douglas Thomas, Jr., who has a cottage at Nahant.

BOSTON WOMEN CHARM AS HOSTESSES AT BAR HARBOR

Boston was never more brilliantly represented at Bar Harbor than it is this season, and it is its proud boast that among the charming matrons there who regard it as hostesses none entertain more royally than such members from its own smart set as Mrs. John Torrey Linzee of Clarendon street, Mrs. Quincy Thorndike of Marlboro street and Mrs. Timothee Adamowski of Chestnut street.

Mrs. Linzee, who before her marriage was Vida Manson, is one of the most lovely and winsome of hostesses and has a genius for devising unique and novel entertainments. She is very popular with the friends of her husband, who is prominent in the Somerset and other clubs.

* * *

Mrs. Thorndike (Ellen Lewis) who has been at her Bar Harbor home ever since closing her town house, is an enthusiastic yachtswoman and spends much of her time on the water. She will not open her Marlboro street home until late in the Fall, and then only for a short time, as she contemplates taking a trip to Europe, where it is possible she will spend the Winter.

The very charming Mrs. Adamowski who, with her husband, sailed for Europe in May and have only recently returned, is one of the most admired of the Boston hostesses now at Bar Harbor. She will be there throughout the month of August and during that time will give some of the delightful al fresco affairs for which she has a penchant.

* * *

Other Boston matrons who are adding to the state and gaiety of this most delightful resort are Mrs. Dwight Blaney, Mrs. Robert Amory, Mrs. A. P. Peabody, Mrs. Otis Norcross, Mrs. Henry D. Burnham, Mrs. Fred Crocker, Mrs. Hasket Derby, Mrs. Manson Tucker, Mrs. A. Thorndike, Mrs. Louis Svereaski, Mrs. Harold Sewall, Mrs. W. W. Seely, Mrs. C. D. [illegible], Mrs. Herbert Jacques and Mrs. Martin Brimmer.

MRS. CRANE HOOKS LIVELY BROOK TROUT FOR TABLE

Bride of Bay State Junior Senator Proves Expert at Fishing in Ponds Near Lenox.

Lenox, July 21.—Mrs. W. Murray Crane, nee Boardman, the bride of Senator Crane of Massachusetts, has been spending the early hours of the July mornings at Mt. Pleasant in trout fishing. Senator Crane and his bride arrived at Mt. Pleasant on July 11, and on the following day fishing tackle was sent to the mount at the request of Mrs. Crane, who has developed a fondness for taking the lively brook trout from the private ponds and streams on the Senator's country estate. Twice this week brook trout were served on the Senator's table, the catch being made by Mrs. Crane.

On Monday an interesting clock golf tournament was held at Hotel Aspinwall, Mrs. S. J. Clark of New York making the arrangements and John Hall McKay of New York awarding the prizes. The contestants included the Misses Eliza and Constance Griggs, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Griggs of New Jersey, Miss Elizabeth Clark, Miss Jeannette Butler, Miss Gertrude Butler, Miss Margaret Schley, Lyman and Charles Butler, Robert and Harold Gibson and Walter Singer. Miss Jeannette Butler and Miss Margaret Schley won the trophies.

Miss Josephine Durand, daughter of the British ambassador, has taken to golf this Summer and plays nearly every morning with her father on the Lenox course, which adjoins the embassy.

NORTH SHORE'S SEASON AT HEIGHT

Manchester Folk Anticipate With Pleasure the Harbor Illumination and Parade on Aug. 2.

Manchester-by-the-Sea, July 21.—The Manchester Summer colony is looking forward with much pleasure to the harbor illumination and boat parade to be held here on the evening of August 2 under the auspices of the Manchester Yacht Club. A committee composed of A. W. Craigie of Toronto, Ont., Edward S. Grew and Arthur M. Merriam of Boston are making the arrangements.

Miss Clara Winthrop sailed Thursday for Europe to spend a few months. Her sister, Miss Margaret Winthrop, intended to accompany her, but she had been threatened with blood poisoning in one of her fingers and was not able to leave this week. Miss Winthrop has been carrying her arm in a sling for the last few weeks, but despite this she has been much entertained as usual.

George F. Willett and family of Norwood, who have been spending a few months abroad, returned last Saturday and arrived at their cottage on Coolidge's Point Thursday for the rest of the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Parker Bremer are on a cruise down the Maine coast in Mr. Bremer's trim yacht, the Yethra, leaving here a week ago. They have on board as their guests Mr. [illegible] Theodore Bremer and Mrs. Bremer.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson B. Walker and son Charlie Walker, who went abroad in the late Spring, returned to Manchester this week.

Beverly Farms

Beverly Farms, July 21.—An event of unusual interest next week will be the Watteau fete given on the lawn at Miss Haven's place, Friday afternoon, at 4 o'clock. The affair is to be given in aid of the Talitha Cumi Home, under the direction of Joseph Lindon Smith. The committee in charge is composed of Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Jr., Mrs. Charles K. Cummings and Mrs. S. Parker Bremer. Young men and women and children from the summer colony will take part in the entertainment, dressed in the costumes of shepherds and shepherdesses. Tea will be served after the fete.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., had as their guests the first of the week the latter's mother and father, Senator and Mrs. Nelson W. Aldrich of Providence. They came down in their auto to spend the week-end, and Mrs. Aldrich has spent the week here.

Miss Katherine Tweed left Wednesday with her guest, Miss Alexander, for a visit to their latter's summer home at Oyster Bay.

Harold Vanderbilt was a guest the early part of the week of Harold Tweed and was an interested spectator at the polo practices in Hamilton on practice days. Harold Tweed, by the way, is developing into a fine player.

Mrs. Frank Morison was a week-end guest at the Charles H. Daltons. The Henry R. Daltons are occupying her cottage here this season.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Reed Anthony are on a cruise down the Maine coast in the Doris. They were guests over Sunday of Mrs. C. F. L. Ayer at Old Fort Iron, Kennebunkport.

Pride's Crossing

Pride's Crossing, July 21.—The delightful Summer villa of Mrs. Robert S. Bradley was the scene of a large gathering of the smart set yesterday morning, when William Everett gave another of his Friday morning readings from Shakespeare. His reading yesterday was "Macbeth." The course given is under the management of Miss Katherine Loring of Boston, and is generously patronized by the smart contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Pierson left Monday for a brief visit to Castine, Me., where they are spending the week-end.

E. F. Swift and family of Chicago were guests at Swiftmoor over the week-end. The Swifts spend their Summers at Lake Forest, just outside Chicago.

Alexander Cochrane is on a fortnight's fish trip to Metapedia. Mr. and Mrs. Cochrane, by the way, are again receiving congratulations on the fact that they have just become grandparents. A son was born the latter part of last week to their daughter, Mrs. Cushing (Miss Ethel Cochrane) at Newport.

Mrs. R. S. Bradley is entertaining at her villa Miss Clara Newell of Boston, her sister.

Mrs. Oliver Ames entertained a dinner party of fourteen at her attractive Italian villa Monday evening. Other dinner parties of the week were those of Mrs. W. A. Slater at Beverly Cove, Monday evening, and Dr. Harry F. Sears, who gave a party for sixteen Wednesday evening.

Magnolia

Magnolia, July 21.—The Magnolia season is now in full swing and all the cottagers are entertaining extensively, while scores of luncheon and dinner parties are being given almost daily at the hotels.

At the fashionable North Shore Grill Club, of which Miss Frances Stearns is the sponsor, Mrs. W. H. Coolidge of Brookline gave a swell dinner party for eighteen for her pretty young daughter, Miss Coolidge, a few evenings ago. Miss McGinley, Miss House, Miss Romeyn, the Frothingham and Stevenson boys and numerous others of the popular young men and women were among those present.

Tuesday Mrs. Thomas Stott of Lowell gave a luncheon for Mrs. Elliot and niece of St. Louis. Among her guests were Mrs. C. I. Hood, Miss Wilder and Mrs. Dutcher.

Mrs. Harrington Walker left the first of the week on an auto trip to the White Mountains. Mr. Walker is on a ten days' business trip to Detroit.

Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mrs. Wolcott H. Johnson and Master Samuel Johnson came over from Nahant by auto Monday and were guests at luncheon of Miss Clara Guild, a sister of the Governor, at luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Morse, accompanied by Miss M. E. Ingalls of Swampscott, arrived at the Hesperus, Magnolia, Monday, for the season.

Gloucester

Gloucester, July 21.—This has been a lively week on Cape Ann, the arrival of Admiral Evans's fleet at Rockport, creating additional activity, most of the Summer sojourners taking advantage of viewing the nation's great fighting machines.

Among the recent arrivals at the Seaside House, Lanesville, are John D. Whitcomb, Medford, Miss Pierce, Dorchester, George F. Sargent and Miss Sargent, Somerville.

Miss Edith Gerring of Haverhill is at East Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Morrison of Dorchester are visiting here.

Wallace Waterhouse, Esq., of Boston and a party of friends are enjoying their vacation at the cottage of the former at Long Beach.

Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, the noted authoress of Newton, is at her Summer residence at East Gloucester.

Miss Annie Otto of Cambridge, who is visiting here, will soon depart for Lake Winnepesaukee.

Miss Alice Perkins of Boston is at Rockport. Mrs. Henry Rider of Boston has arrived at East Gloucester.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Griffin and daughter of Boston are among the late Lanesville arrivals. Miss Helen Gilman of Dorchester is also here.

William E. Lofkin of Boston is spending his vacation at Annisquam. Z. L. Sault and son Raymond of Somerville are at Pigeon Cove.

Among the arrivals at the Hotel Harbor View, East Gloucester are: Mr. and Mrs. Prentice, Miss J. W. Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Lawrence, Arthur M. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ballard, Boston, Walter Swift, Wellesley; Abbie J. Barry, Lynn; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elder, Miss Gertrude Elder, West Newton.

Among the recent arrivals at the Rockaway, East Gloucester, are: Miss E. H. Bradford and the Misses Heald of Cambridge, and Louise Owen of Boston.

Hollis French and family of Boston have arrived at Annisquam from a trip abroad.

Among Annisquam's most ardent golfers are H. H. Wiggin and C. Fred Pierce of Boston.

Frank H. Howes and family of Boston are at Annisquam; Boyd Putnam, the actor, will not open his cottage until August.

SUMMER GIRL PREPARING FOR THEATRICALS IN FALL

THE [illegible] of the footlights has come to the summer girl of 1906, and she is the happiest and busiest of mortals, rehearsing for the various amateur theatricals and vaudeville entertainments which fashionables are to give for sweet charity.

Few of the amateur actresses are more in demand for these affairs or more generous in response than pretty Constance Bacon, or "Connie," as her intimates prefer calling her, who has starred often in the Vincent Club theatricals. Others who are responding to the call are Violet Cruger, Margaret Stackpole, Margaret Thomas and Sally Pierce.

Miss Bacon is spending the Summer at Lenox, where she is figuring more prominently than ever in the jolly times of her set. Just at present she is busy rehearsing for the vaudeville entertainment to be given in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, July 28, for the benefit of Miss Ethel Folsom's Berkshire Farms retreat. She is the youngest of Mrs. William B. Bacon's three interesting daughters and when in town occupies with her mother a suite at the Victoria. Her sister Elsie will also appear in the vaudeville.

Miss Bacon is one of the younger set who, during the early part of the month, enjoyed the popular moonlight picnics at Lake Makkeenac Boat Club and the informal dances which followed. She is fond of yachting and has only recently returned from a cruise in Long Island Sound. She is also interested in tennis and has entered the tournaments.

* * *

Miss Cruger, who is said to be fast in the meshes of a pretty romance, is summering at Tuxedo and will visit Newport early in August. She is also possessed of much dramatic ability and later in the season will appear in an entertainment for the benefit of a favorite charity.

The beautiful and ever interesting young heiress, who was at one time reported engaged to Harold Vanderbilt, is a daughter of Mrs. J. Fred Tams of New York by her first husband, Eugene Cruger, from whom she secured a divorce.

* * *

Margaret Stackpole, the second daughter of Mrs. Henry Stackpole (Bessie Value) of Beacon street, is with her parents at the Reynolds House, Edgehill, Nahant road, for the Summer, and as she is to be one of next season's buds she is enjoying a preliminary canter at her North Shore home. Her eldest sister, Priscilla, is a member of the Vincent Club and she, no doubt, will be asked to join immediately upon her presentation, as she possesses many accomplishments. She is an exceptionally pretty girl, with fine coloring and a sweet winsome manner that wins her friends wherever she goes.

* * *

Miss Thomas, who will be a bud in the near future, is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Washington B. Thomas, and her sister, at their Pride's Crossing home, which has recently been enlarged by the addition of a spacious ball, music room and veranda. Miss [illegible] is the younger of the Thomas girls and is a stellar member of the new Riding club, in which she took several blue ribbons last Winter. It is her skill as a horsewoman that brings her into the limelight. She will attend the Myopia Club horse show on Labor Day, and will no doubt entertain several friends on that occasion, as she did at the Country Club races.

She has entered golf tournaments, tennis matches and the various outdoor frolics arranged for the younger set. She is tall and of athletic build, with glorious dark brown eyes, brown [illegible] and extremely pretty coloring. Her father, Mr. Thomas, is identified with the Somerset, Myopia, University and other clubs, and her mother is one of Boston's most thoroughly delightful matrons.

* * *

"Sally" Pierce, the charming Brookline belle, who is at present enjoying life at Newport yachting, swimming, dancing and rowing, will soon leave that favored resort for a visit with friends in Magnolia and Nahant. Miss Pierce is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Pierce of Brookline, and her sisters are Dorothy, Rosamond and Mary. She is a vivacious blonde and spends the greater portion of her time aboard her father's fine yacht. She is strong, graceful, thoroughly well poised and is generally recognized as the real athletic girl.

MUSICALES CROWD SOCIETY CALENDAR

Smart Set Leaders Plan Brilliant Gatherings to Lend a Helping Hand to Sweet Charity.

Musicales will hold a prominent place on the society calendar the coming month and as all those scheduled are to be given under distinctly fashionable patronage, and in most cases for charity, there is little doubt of their success.

The first in the series of four arranged by the North Shore cottagers for Friday afternoons at 4 was given the past week and the others will be given on August 3, 17 and 31. Mrs. Francis I. Amory, Mrs. Robert C. Hooper, Mrs. Herbert M. Sears, Mrs. Robert S. Bradley, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. W. Scott Fitz, Miss Louisa Loring, Miss Mabel Boardman, Miss Helen Burnham and Miss Clara Endicott are the committee.

At the first, which was given at Mrs. Edward Crowe's, Miss Olivia Mead played violin and Francis Rogers sang. Mrs. Washington B. Thomas will be the hostess on August 31 when Miss Leila Ormand and Edith Thompson will be the artists. The third concert, on the seventeenth, will be at Mrs. Walter Denegre's home, "Villa Crest," when Myron W. Whitney, Jr., will sing and George Copeland, Jr., will be the pianist.

Mrs. Francis Meredith Whitehouse will open her beautiful [illegible] Crowhurst, for the concert on Oct. 11. Miss Susan Metcalf, the soprano, will sing, and Mr. Tramonti, the harpist of the Chicago orchestra, will play.

* * *

Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Mrs. Guy Norman, Mrs. F. Meredith Whitehouse, Mrs. Philip Dexter, Mrs. Henry Parsons King, Mrs. S. Van Rensselaer Crosby and several other equally prominent women, are patronesses for the musicale to be given in the Town Hall at Manchester-by-the-Sea the last of the month in aid of a favorite local charity. The artists for the occasion are Mrs. Frances Dunton Wood, soprano, and Mr. Charles P. Anthony, piano.

* * *

Society is anxiously looking forward to the illustrated talk on the Orient which [illegible] McIntosh, who was with the Taft party during the famous tour abroad last year, is to give at "Edgewater," the beautiful North Shore home of the John Shepards. The talks will be given on the spacious lawns of the estate if the weather permits, if not, they will be given in the beautifully appointed drawing rooms of [illegible]. A large part of the proceeds will be given to the building fund for the new rectory of the local church.

Mr. McIntosh will later go to the Masconomo House, Manchester, where he will appear before an equally smart gathering.

* * *

In aid of the Bar Harbor Hospital, Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno, who, with her family, has been spending the early Summer on the South Shore, will give at her Bar Harbor home the pretty little pantomime, "La Lune," which she gave with such success last Winter at the home of her mother, Mrs. Quincy Thorndike, on Marlborough street. The affair will be one of the most brilliant of the season, and besides the pantomime will include two French plays written by Mrs. H. H. Thorndike. Mrs. Fenno will be assisted by Bradley Fenno, her brother-in-law, and Miss Sherman, who takes the place of Miss Olivia Thorndike, now in Europe.

* * *

The Bar Harbor bench show, beginning August 16, will be another drawing card for society. It will be held under the auspices of the American Kennel Club. The following week comes the horse show, which, it is confidently predicted, will be the finest ever given at the Harbor.

The Newport horse show is scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, September 3, 4 and 5, at 2 o'clock; the Newport flower show at the Newport Casino Theatre, August 13, 14 and 15, and the national lawn tennis tournament from August 21 to 28.

Captain R. G. F. Candage of Brookline has issued invitations for an informal reception at his Kent street home July 28. On this occasion Captain Candage will celebrate his eightieth birthday. The Daughters of Massachusetts are to give him a reception July 31 at the Brunswick from 3 to 5. It is their fifth annual celebration [illegible]

* * *

Among the [illegible] at the Lenox horse show, which will be held on September 11, are George Westinghouse, Charles Lanier, William D. Sloane, Francis K. Sturgis, Girand Foster, Robert W. Patterson, Spencer P. Shotter, George W. Folsom and the Misses Vera and Gladys Bloodgood of New Marlboro, who have succeeded in carrying away the lion's share of blue ribbons the past two years.

* * *

The Summer colony at Dublin, N. H., is awaiting with great pleasure [illegible] the play which Joseph Lindon Smith is to give there early in August. [illegible] Ethel Barrymore [illegible] part. The play will be [illegible] in the beautiful open air theatre which is a part of the Smith estate. Mr. Smith gave a similar play last August, when Mrs. Jack Gardner and Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh were among the guests.

* * *

Plans for the fair to be given at Sandy Point Farm on the afternoon of August 8 for the benefit of St. Mary's Orphanage of Providence are progressing rapidly and the cottage colony is taking an active interest.

One of the features will be the musical athletic drill which the 110th Company, Coast Artillery, stationed at Fort Adams, is to give, under command of Captain R. T. Ellis. It has also been announced that Mrs. R. C. Vanderbilt, on her return from Europe in a few days, would arrange for the holding of some feature in the beginning ring at the fair.

In connection with the recent visit of Warden Bridges of the Charlestown State Prison and other [illegible] Wonderland at Revere [illegible] note that these prisoners [illegible] envied, in a way [illegible] (spell it with a [illegible]) Trained Animal show [illegible] Mr. Bobyns' particular hobby is the study of criminals and criminology. He has been to many State prisons, as a visitor, and would like the opportunity granted Warden Bridges and his colleagues of studying these questions at close range.

What Is Going On.

A glance at the following announcements from the playhouses and other amusement enterprises for the coming week will show that the pleasure seeker in and about Boston has a wide variety of entertainment programme from which to choose, both in door and out.

Keith's Theatre

The show announced for the week of July 23 at Keith's is an excellent one. Toby Claude, who appeared last season in "Fantana," and who has been prominent in many of the big musical comedies for several seasons, will be one of the principal entertainers on the bill. It will be her debut at Keith's, although she has appeared with big success in other theatres [illegible] The sort-shooting [illegible] several newcomers [illegible] Zazelle and Vernon in an act [illegible] "Clipper." Jack Norworth [illegible] Corkley and Mc[illegible] blackface comedians and [illegible] acrobats and [illegible] Anderson and Goines [illegible] [illegible] exhibited.

Tremont Theatre

Starting tomorrow night at the Tremont Theatre, Harry Bulger in Henry W. Savage's production of "The Man From Now," the Bangs, Bryan and Klein musical success, will begin his third month in Boston and the engagement has been one [illegible] "The Man From Now" [illegible] The [illegible] popular [illegible] the brightest and most original and then too the decidedly unique portrayal of the leading character by Mr. Bulger has proven one of the most popular he has ever essayed. In his two song hits, "There Isn't Anything That Can't Be Cured" and "Walking Cones," Mr. Bulger [illegible] songs [illegible] the order of every performance. The skating scene in which Mr. Bulger is so ably assisted by Miss Hattie Arnold is a scene of the most mirth provoking conceits of recent years.

Majestic Theatre

The Majestic Theatre closed its doors last night, to reopen Labor Day. The name of the next season opener is not even an [illegible] yet. The [illegible] company of "The [illegible] [illegible]

Castle Square Theatre

Gounod's grand opera "Faust," needs [illegible] tion at the Castle Square during the coming week has already been anticipated by an almost unprecedented demand for seats. Faust, as a matter of [illegible], is so familiar that nothing new can be said of it. It is one of the perennial standard pieces [illegible] The cast of "Faust" will introduce [illegible] Lockstone as Valentine [illegible] Ladd as Siebel, and by [illegible] as Martha.

Globe Theatre

John Craig is an actor who has played many parts, but the general opinion of his [illegible] in Boston seems to be that [illegible] "Prince Karl" which he will play at the Globe Theatre the present week, beginning with the matinee tomorrow [illegible] Mary Young. On Friday afternoon another of the popular professional matinees will be given.

"Prince Carl" will be given by the following cast: Karl von Arhmlen, John Craig; Spartan Spotts, Frederic Sullivan; J. Cos. Dracon, William Humphreys; Howard Algernon Briggs, Thomas McLarnie; Markey Davis; William H. Evarts; Gustavus, John F. Beck; Mayor of Karlschop, Kenrick Hall; Mrs. Florence Arhmlen Lowell, Miss Mary Young; Miss Allela Euclid Lowell, Miss Mary Sanders; Mrs. Priscilla Daphne Lowell, Miss Kate Ryan.

Grand Opera House

"Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," A. H. Woods' new thriller, will be the attraction which will open the season of the Grand Opera House on Saturday evening, August 4, and will be eagerly welcomed by admirers of sensational melodrama. The four acts and twelve scenes of this play are said to be full of action, and thrilling, startling incidents of a nature to leave the auditor in a breathless state. An excellent company is promised, composed of players of unusual ability. Miss [illegible] Woods [illegible] give away [illegible]

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Alone in the World," a sensational five [illegible] drama will be the Bowdoin Square [illegible] for this week. Its plot is one of intense interest with scenes in the lively portions of Greater New York, the Tenderloin and other exciting spots, and [illegible] scenes in the country and mining districts of the faraway West. A gay resort in the Tenderloin will be pictured with rare vividness, and a waterfall and dam [illegible] explosion full of excitement [illegible] pictured with care [illegible] the greatest of the [illegible] Bowdoin Square Theatre has ever [illegible] Hunt will head the [illegible] support. She will be seen as Mary Elliott, the persecuted one and the part calling for strong emotional work will find faithful fulfillment [illegible] girl. The strong part of Jaun Bark will be played by Miss Gertrude Rae, and the interesting role of Martha [illegible] will be played by Miss An[illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] reverse of character [illegible]. Florence Hale [illegible] the role of Dick Adams, the [illegible] will fall to Mr. Charles Miller; the heavy part of Bark, the lawyer, will be played by Henry Alexander, and the comedy [illegible] of Ace Ideson, the versatile city man, will be played by Butler Haviland.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Sig. Petro Jouvino's talented company of [illegible] fresh from [illegible] will be the leading [illegible] at Austin & Stone's Museum [illegible] twenty accomplished [illegible] they promise a [illegible] of good music and clever [illegible] native dancers of both sexes, pretty girls in [illegible] handsome men in [illegible] costumes, vocalists and instrumentalists [illegible] orchestra. Each programme will introduce a series of pleasing novelties. Penny vaudeville, the English Peep show and Ben Hur, the largest snake in the world, are among other scheduled attractions for the curio hall. The theatre performance this week will include a variety of features, headed by the "Minstrel Maids'" company in a breezy midsummer comedy. Frank Cook as interlocutor, [illegible] and Charley Clark as [illegible] Maxwell [illegible] vocalists [illegible] show. Among the maids are Ruby Parker, Minnie Burke, Pearl Hudson, Grace Howard, Cora Evelyn, Cassie French, Gertrude Campbell, Nettie Malcolm and Marion Cleveland.

Palace Theatre

The sultry weather seems to have increased rather than diminished the business at the Palace Theatre, for many persons not [illegible] visited the house to enjoy the splendid entertainment presented by the stock company [illegible] to escape the heat as well [illegible] house is always cool and [illegible] [illegible] week [illegible] of the best hits of the season. The stock company of clever comedians and handsome girls is presented in two laughable burlesques called "Slitz and Stotz" and "A Montana Gambler." Both skits are full of fun, and during their action there will be plenty of good specialties and musical numbers. The comedians, Messrs. Black, Graham, Patterson, Dixon and Shuster, are a quintette of versatile performers, while the girls are all young, pretty and talented. The musical numbers and dancing spectacles are all beautifully costumed. The olio will present a varied and entertaining bill. Among those who will contribute novel and pleasing acts are the Moxleys, a clever colored team; Fred Wykoff and company in a laughable rube character sketch; the Henderson brothers, musical artists, and the La Pe[illegible] family in a daring aerial act.

Out-of-Door Attractions

Wonderland

The popularity of Wonderland, that million dollar mystic city and electrical [illegible] at Revere Beach, is no longer problematical. It is positively and permanently assured, and its endless chain of attractions are the wonder and admiration of all. They include that realistic spectacle, Fighting the Flames, the weird [illegible] to Hell Gate, the sen[illegible] Chutes, the marvelous [illegible] Congress, the [illegible] Thompson Scenic [illegible] and phil[illegible] the educated horse, Princess [illegible] Ferari's Trained Wild Animals, the Japanese Village, Circle Swing, [illegible] Ball Room and Restaurant [illegible] Before the War, Hale's Tours, Love's Journey, and Fatal Wedding. Then, too [illegible] as the [illegible] the Open Air Circus [illegible] horizontal bar performances [illegible] balloon ascensions, all free.

"The South Before the War" is the latest of Wonderland's attractions, taking the place of Bett's Dog and Monkey [illegible] theatre, where a troupe of colored [illegible] singers and dancers give a [illegible] musical and miscellaneous [illegible] illustrative of conditions [illegible] half a century ago [illegible] An innovation or rather a new departure at Wonderland which shows conclusively the magnitude of some of its attractions and the great aggregation of people employed are the parades at 2 and 7 o'clock every afternoon and evening of all the employes of the shows and all the bands.

Today [illegible] to be a perilous balloon ascension by Professor La Roux and Miss [illegible] Zeigler, with a double par[illegible]

Greater Paragon Park

If [illegible] what may be the great [illegible] Greater Paragon Park which draws patrons there week after week as regularly as they would attend theatres with stock companies with a weekly change of bill the answer may be easily found in the beautiful Palm Garden which is the keystone, so to speak, of the park. One may come to accept the beauty of the park itself, its fine architectural [illegible], its exquisite Venetian ornamentation, its picturesque lagoon, its gorgeous electric illumination at night, its unique electric tower, its free open air circus with weekly changes of wondrous performances, its fascinating parades of throngs of people about the board walks, the stately round the park journeys of the Bostock canal, and its thousand and one other features as a matter of course after a while. [illegible] seeing all these features week after week through half a season and [illegible] such [illegible] as Boston's [illegible] Paradise [illegible] town Flood [illegible] Dream [illegible] Swing, Katzenjammer [illegible] House, Fun Factory, Chopin [illegible] Nelson Flight, roller coaster, etc., the regular patron invariably [illegible] of his stay in the park by striking out at once for the Palm Garden. Here is found the best of everything that the market affords.

Norumbega Park

Popular trolley travel continues toward Norumbega Park, and this ideal Summer resort finds happy throngs strolling about the grounds and taking in the great variety of amusements at all times of the day and evening. Crowds of children with their [illegible] governesses or mothers come [illegible] gates [illegible] view the wonders [illegible] in the zoological garden, ride on the merry-go-round [illegible] for the free [illegible] take a trip to the beautiful Charles [illegible] make a tour of [illegible] with its electrical wonders and the Japanese colony, walking [illegible] well graded paths or occupying [illegible] observation seats along the bank from which [illegible] views of the river may be [illegible] there is the restaurant [illegible] excellent [illegible] from which one [illegible] dinner while listening [illegible] of the orchestra stationed on the veranda.

The grand covered open-air theatre is a most attractive feature of a visit to this resort on the banks of the Charles, and the coming week the entertainment will be furnished by a list of well known vaudeville artists. The Macarte sisters in an act that combines musical and athletic features as well as tests of strength, will be a most entertaining number. Performing on the mandolin and guitar while balancing on the wire and trapeze is a novel [illegible] which they accomplish with grace [illegible] most picturesque animal act [illegible] with his snow white [illegible] intelligence is simply phenomenal.

Rail and Boat to Bass Point

The rail and boat route to Bass Point with service every ten minutes, is a delightful and speedy trip. Trains leave the Atlantic avenue station of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad for Lynn on ten-minute schedule. They connect at Lynn with boats of the Lynn Steamship Company for Bass Point. There shore dinners, fishing, bathing and all the varied pleasures of a high-class summer resort may be enjoyed. Sheaf's Theatre and the Electric Steam Color Scintillator are especial attractions. The scintillator throws a steamy jet 60 feet into the air, multicolored by means of an ingenious mechanical contrivance.

Steamers to Provincetown

For the heated term a trip to the tip of Cape Cod by the Provincetown boat is just the thing. One enjoys the cool salt breezes in the four hours' sail. There is a stop of an hour and a half at Provincetown, which affords ample time for a picnic on Town Hill or dinner at a hotel and a ride about town. The boat reaches Boston on its return trip in good season for the early evening outgoing trains to the suburbs or for the theatre. If one wants to "make a day of it." The boat leaves Bay Line wharf, 400 Atlantic avenue, at 9 o'clock in the morning.

For Trolley Trippers

One of the best trips for a warm Summer day is that to historic old Plymouth all the way by the cool trolley. The Old Colony Street Railway Company are advertising trips there at reduced rates throughout the Summer. The cars going over some of the most beautiful and historical spots in Massachusetts. The trolley information bureau and passenger departments are brand new features of street railroad work, but since the establishment of that of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railway Companies at No. 309 Washington street seems to be filling a long needed public want. All trolley information and helpful suggestions are rendered free for the asking. There are also all sorts of beautifully illustrated folders giving details of [illegible]

While the quaint interest of Gloucester and the natural beauties of picturesque Cape Ann always appeal to the sightseer and vacationist they have especial interest at this time for the reason that Admiral Bob Evans and his fleet of Uncle Sam's war vessels are at rendezvous there for their manoeuvres. Many people who are visiting Rockport, Gloucester and other points in that section are making their way by trolley, as the ride is an especially delightful one. For their convenience the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company is running round trips from Boston to Gloucester.

Travel to Nova Scotia.

Nova Scotia, the Maritime Provinces and Evangeline's Land are being visited by thousands of tourists seeking both health and pleasure in the bracing atmosphere and the interesting scenes for which those localities are famous. One of the favorite routes of travel is by the Dominion Atlantic lines whose steamers are crowded daily. The steamers Prince George and Boston leave Long Wharf, foot of State street, every day except Saturday at 2 p. m.

Sick and Weak Here's a Cure For You

Don't you want to feel the glow of newborn life in your blood and nerve, to feel the bubbling spirit of youth again? Don't you want to have a strong heart, courage, nerves of steel, self-confidence, strength in every organ, ambition, energy, grit and endurance? Don't you want to be rid of the "come and go" pains, the Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Varicocele, Weak Back and General Debility?

ELECTRO-VIGOR will cure all these weaknesses of men. It will make the nerves strong, the eyes bright, and will fill the body with that fire, that vim, that snap, which denotes perfect youthful manhood.

No pain nor debility can exist where the body is full of electricity, for this is the source of the vitality of manhood and womanhood. Twenty years Dr. Hall has spent in developing the best means of using curative electricity. He knows every pain and weakness that man is subject to and has so succeeded in his remedy as to bring perfect health and strength to all those using his marvelous treatment. Men exposed to rough weather, hard work, mentally or physically, or overtaxing vital forces are quickly and lastingly cured by his method. Many suffer from a breaking down of vitality which never yields to medicines. Electro-Vigor with its special attachment for men restores this energy.

Electro-Vigor, Dry-Cell Body Battery

THE ONLY BODY BATTERY WHICH

Makes Its Own Power. Requires No Charging. No Vinegar or Acid.

Guaranteed for One Year, Will Last a Lifetime.

You apply it about your waist when you retire. It works while you sleep. The patent regulator makes the current strong or mild. There is no shock or vibration. You feel a warm glow passing through every nerve in your body. It exhilarates you, makes you feel light-hearted, and you awaken in the morning feeling as if you could get out and take a ten-mile run.

If you have used an electric belt you will appreciate how much nicer it will be to have a battery which makes its own power where you avoid the trouble of soaking it in vinegar. We will make an allowance for your electric belt in exchange for "Electric-Vigor." Beware of imitations.

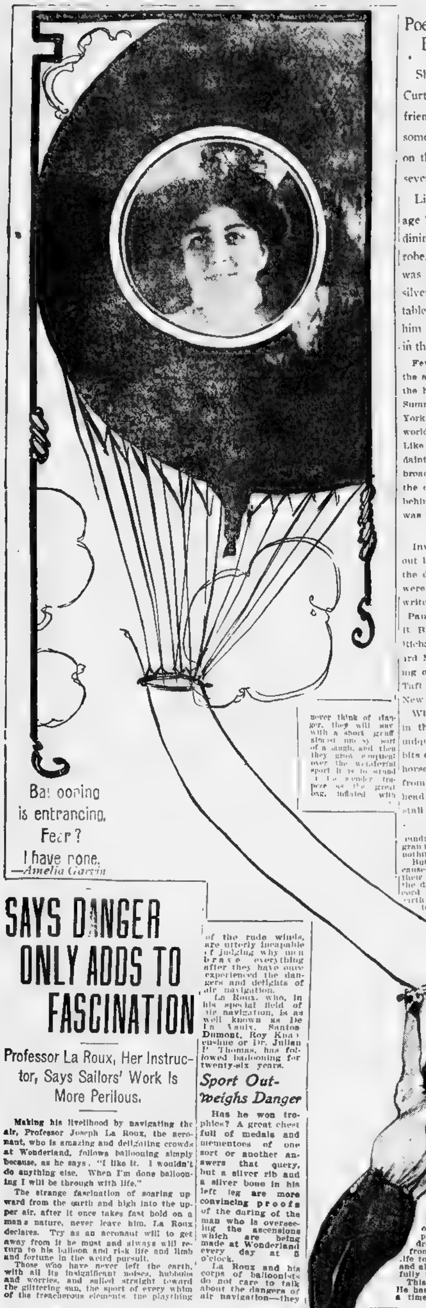
PRETTY BOSTON GIRL AN AERONAUT AT WONDERLAND



Ballooning is entrancing.
Fear?
I have none.
—Amelia Garvin

SAYS DANGER ONLY ADDS TO FASCINATION

Professor La Roux, Her Instructor, Says Sailors' Work Is More Perilous.

Making his livelihood by navigating the air, Professor Joseph La Roux, the aeronant, who is amazing and delighting crowds at Wonderland, follows ballooning simply because, as he says, "I like it. I wouldn't do anything else. When I'm done ballooning I will be through with life."

The strange fascination of soaring upward from the earth and high into the upper air, after it once takes fast hold on a man's nature, never leave him, La Roux declares. Try as an aeronaut will to get away from it he must and always will return to his balloon and risk life and limb and fortune in the weird pursuit.

Those who have never left the earth, with all its insignificant noises, hubbubs and worries, and sailed straight toward the glittering sun, the sport of every whim of the treacherous elements, the plaything of the rude winds, are utterly incapable of judging why men brave everything after they have once experienced the dangers and delights of air navigation.

La Roux, who, in his special field of air navigation, is as well known as De la Vaulx, Santos-Dumont, Roy Knabenshue or Dr. Julian P. Thomas, has followed ballooning for twenty-six years.

Sport Outweighs Danger

Has he won trophies? A great chest full of medals and mementoes of one sort or another answers that query, but a silver rib and a silver bone in his left leg are more convincing proofs of the daring of the man who is overseeing the ascensions which are being made at Wonderland every day at 5 o'clock.

La Roux and his corps of balloonists do not care to talk about the dangers of air navigation—they never think of danger, they will say with a short gruff almost mu sy sort of a laugh, and then they grow eloquent over the wonderful sport it is to stand on a slender trapeze as the great bag, inflated with hundreds of cubic feet of hot air, sweeps grandly heavenward and the earth becomes nothing but a faintly traced map.

But the parachute act that which causes the crowds at Wonderland to hold their breath for one startling moment as the daring aeronaut cuts away the slender cord that suspends him high above the earth and then darts like an arrow straight toward the ground thousands of feet below, before the great, umbrella like like contrivance catches the wind, opens and checks the fall is the simplest thing about the business, according to Joseph La Roux.

"I'd rather take my chances with the parachute than stay with the balloon until it comes down," he says decidedly. "Of course it must be in perfect working order or there'll be a case for the coroner. But I never take chances, and there never has been a fatal accident with my parachutes while I have been in the balloon business."

La Roux knows, for he made the second parachute leap ever made in the United States. That was in 1888 in Des Moines. In the first aeronaut to make the attempt in this country paid for his daring experiment with his life.

But for all thrills that are ever furnished to crowds of gaping uplifted faces, La Roux furnishes the crowning one at Wonderland when he sends one of his aeronauts high in the heavens and has him shot out of a giant, cannon shaped tube, parachute in hand. After the man drops a few hundred feet he casts loose from the first parachute and trusts his life to a smaller one, which arrests his fall and allows him to descend slowly and gracefully to the earth.

This is nothing—according to La Roux. He has been fired out of his cannon many a time himself and has done the double parachute descent with no inconvenience or injury. The great spectacle to come off at Wonderland causes him not a moment's uneasiness. It is merely the proper working of the mechanism that must be attended to before the start is made, and the aeronaut will have no more trouble to make the lightning change on his way down to the earth than if he were trusting to but one parachute.

Prefers Hot Air Balloons.

La Roux holds the record of America for high ascensions and successful voyages in air balloons. He has used gas ships and knows the game of the dirigible airship like that used by Santos-Dumont and Knabenshue, who rode over New York city and over several other of the larger cities of this country.

"Give me the old hot-air ship, if you please," he says. "I know about them. They're all I want. I think the ordinary balloon is far safer than any airship yet invented, and I would rather trust my silver rib and leg to one of these than to any dirigible ship that ever floated in the clouds."

The professor is teaching his airy art to others. He has associated with him this year at Wonderland several young men who are in various stages of experience. Some have made twenty ascensions, some but five or six. They all have perfect confidence in the man who, for twenty-six years, has followed ballooning as an art and a livelihood and whose wife is the most daring woman aeronaut in the world.

Miss Amelia Garvin of No. 181 E street, South Boston, is the newest of all the sensations which La Roux has to spring upon the public this year. On last Wednesday, this pretty and graceful Boston girl, who, with [illegible] Florence, are known as the [illegible] of vaudeville fame, made her first ascension in a balloon.

Loves the Excitement.

Without a twinge of fear, she took her place on one trapeze, while Fred L. Owens, a well-known parachute artist, stood on the other.

"Let her go," the plucky Boston girl cried as the big balloon was cut loose and soared into the air. Not a whit dismayed was she when the airship catching an unlooked for current of air, whirled her and the young aeronaut far out over the bay above the bathers on the beach.

Cutting loose her parachute she took the drop without an extra palpitation of the heart, so she told a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter, and her manner when she was pulled into a boat from the ocean proved that she told the truth. Her first thought was whether or not she had spoiled her clothes.

"Oh, it is just splendid," she said in telling of her experience. "I'm going to be a balloonist and Professor La Roux is going to take me with him. It will beat the song and dance of the stage. I never want to be anything else.

Never Forget Picture.

"They told me I would better not look down when I sailed away in the balloon. But I couldn't help it. I had to, and the picture I saw of Wonderland, crowded with thousands and thousands of people who were all looking up at me, and then the marshes for miles around, and the great blue sky, that seemed to be getting so close, and the green sea, that I didn't fear a bit as we sailed out over it, I will never forget to the last day of my life.

"I don't care how many times I go up after that, I will never forget that first picture I had of the earth when high above it. They say we went up about three thousand feet. If it is so delightful at that altitude I want to go a mile high the next time.

"How did I feel when I cut loose and jumped right into the empty air holding to the parachute rope and before it opened? How do I know? It is hard to say. I really don't think that I felt anything. I knew that the professor far away down in Wonderland was watching me. I have every confidence in him, for he never makes a mistake when he sends others up in his balloons.

"I felt that I must jump. No, I don't think that I even shut my eyes. I did not cry, 'Here goes,' but I just jumped and knew that I was shooting down toward the sea, like a streak of lightning. I didn't have time to think after that until I felt that I wasn't falling so fast and, looking up, I saw the big parachute filling with the air. Then I knew that I was safe.

Laughs at the Danger.

"I didn't have one unpleasant experience on my first trip up into the air. Even the little wetting I got in the sea didn't bother me a bit, for I was pulled right out. The air is so fine when you get up high. It isn't like the air that we are used to breathe."

La Roux talks feelingly of the perils experienced by the men who go down into the sea in boats. He speaks of how railroad engineers take their lives into their own hands, but if the dangers of his own calling are spoken of he laughs and says, despite his silver rib and leg, that ballooning is not half so dangerous as it is generally supposed to be if an aeronaut but knows his business and employs care and common sense.

"It's not being sure and careful that causes the trouble," he says. "If you follow the experiences of aeronauts you will find in nine cases out of ten when they come to grief that it was really their own fault. They either took a fool's chance or they forgot something. Eternal vigilance, you know. I am not a bit more afraid to be 2,000 feet above the earth in my balloon than I am to be at home in bed."

How Amelia Garvin Felt on Her First Trip to the Clouds

"They told me I would better not look down. But I couldn't help it. I don't care how many times I may go up after this, I shall never forget that first picture I had of the earth when high above it. I felt as though I must jump. But I don't think I even shut my eyes once." Amelia Garvin, who made balloon ascension

SOCIETY GIRLS GIVE BIRTHDAY PARTY TO PET HORSE

"Surprise," Feasted and Honored with Gifts of Silver, Eats from Costly Bowl at Table with His Fair Guests

Poems and Roses Also Among Gifts—Handsome Bay Then Entertains with Almost Human Tricks.

Sheffield, July 21.—Miss Sophie Curtiss and ten of her society friends gave "Surprise," a handsome bay horse, a birthday party on the occasion of his attaining his seventh year.

Like any happy youngster of that age "Surprise" was escorted to the dining room, decked in his brightest robe, given the position of honor, was presented numerous articles of silver, partook of everything on the table, heard rhymes addressed to him and finally entertained himself in the drawing room.

Few animals have ever been given the attention that was showered upon the handsome bay. "The Pines," the Summer home of Frank Curtiss of New York, who is a power in the financial world, was thrown open to "Surprise." Like any well-bred human, the bay daintily walked up the steps to the broad veranda through the doorway to the dining room and obediently stood behind Miss Curtis while the dinner was in progress.

Send Out Invitations.

Invitations to the affair were sent out by Miss Curtiss. Those present at the dinner and post-prandial exercises were E. P. Kidder of New York, who writes under the nom de plume of "Paul Brown," and Mrs. Kidder, Mrs. R. B. Glenny of Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Percy of New York, Mrs. Howard M. Whiting and Miss Betty Whiting of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe C. Taft of New York and Mrs. Ludwig of New York.

When the guests had all been seated in the dining room, which had been uniquely decorated with plants, ferns, bits of harness and trophies of various horse shows, "Surprise," at a whistle from Miss Curtiss, who stood at the head of the table, trotted from his box stall in the stable around to the front porch of the house, up the steps and marched into the [illegible] his stand with head [illegible] chair of Miss Curtis.

Guests Stand to Greet Him.

[illegible] the guests stood up to receive him "Surprise" bowed to each one in turn, and after they had been again seated and started [illegible] ceeded to munch his own from a silver bowl which had been placed on a pedestal behind the chair of Miss Curtiss.

Dinner over, the horse and his guests marched into the drawing room, where Mrs. Glenny in rhyme presented him a gift in behalf of each guest present, "Surprise" bowing his acknowledgments to each present. Mrs. Taft, in behalf of her own pet horse, "Dolly," presented "Surprise" a beautiful leather bound copy of William Cullen Bryant's poem, inscribed "From 'Dolly' to 'Surprise.'" From his mistress, Miss Curtis, "Surprise" received a dark green blanket, trimmed with gold braid, with the name "Surprise" worked on a centrepiece. Mrs. Ludwig gave a silver-trimmed bridle, Mrs. Glenny a cut-glass dish filled with loaf sugar, Mr. and Mrs. Percy a silver curry comb, Mr. and Mrs. Kidder a silver mounted whip and Mrs. and Miss Whiting a silver vase filled with seven American Beauty roses, one for each year of "Surprise's" life.

"Surprise" Says Farewell.

After the presentation of the birthday gifts, "Surprise," under the direction of his mistress, entertained the guests with an exhibition of his wonderful powers. Questions asked by each guest and repeated to "Sur [illegible]

Every question asked was answered correctly by the horse. "Yes" answers were made by a bow of the head, "no" by raising the head. Questions involving figures, such as his age, the number present, etc., were answered by raising his right foreleg and pawing the air the necessary number of times.

At the command "dead horse" from Miss Curtiss, "Surprise" lay perfectly still, stretched out on the floor until told to rise. "Say your prayers" was answered by "Surprise" by kneeling with bowed head and looking as devout as could be wished. With these and several other tricks, "Surprise" kept his company entertained for over an hour.

As a climax to the afternoon's entertainment, "Surprise" repaired to the grounds surrounding the house and was photographed with his guests. Then bidding them a fond farewell by courtesying before each, the almost human animal trotted back to his stall with his birthday gifts, wearing some and carrying the rest.

JUNGLE'S HERO PROVES FALSE TO UNION

FAILS TO CONTROL TOILERS DURING BIG STRIKE IN PACKINGTOWN

Copyright 1906, [illegible] All rights reserved. Published by courtesy of Doubleday, Page & Co.

All this was in June, and before [illegible]

It was the same in all the packing house cities, and suddenly the newspapers and public woke up to face the gruesome spectacle of a meat famine.

All sorts of pleas for a reconsideration were made, but the packers were obdurate; and [illegible] St. Joseph, Kansas City, East St. Louis and New York [illegible] men drew off their work clothes and marched out of the factories, and the great "Beef Strike" was on.

A New Game

Jurgis went to his dinner, and afterward he walked over to see Mike Scully, who lived in a fine house, upon a street which had been decently paved and lighted for his especial benefit. Scully had gone into semi-retirement, and looked nervous and worried.

"What do you want?" he demanded when he saw Jurgis.

"I came to see if maybe you could get me a place during the strike," the other replied.

And Scully knit his brows and eyed him narrowly. In that morning's papers Jurgis had read a fierce denunciation of the packers by Scully, who had declared that if they did not treat their people better the city authorities would end the matter by tearing down their plants.

[illegible] by your boss?"

Jurgis started. "Work as a scab?" he [illegible]

"Why not?" demanded Scully. "What's that to you?"

"But—but—" stammered Jurgis. He had somehow taken it for granted that he should go out with his union.

"The packers need good men, and need them bad," continued the other, "and they'll treat a man right that stands by them. Why don't you take your chance and fix yourself?"

"But," said Jurgis, "how could I ever be of any use to you—in politics?"

"You couldn't be it anyhow," said Scully.

"Why not?" asked Jurgis.

[illegible] man!" cried the other. "Don't you know you're a Republican? And do you think I'm always going to elect Republicans? My brewer has found out already how we served him, and there is the deuce to pay."

Work as a Heeler.

Jurgis looked dumbfounded. He had never thought of that aspect of it before. "I could be a Democrat," he said.

"Yes," responded the other, "but not right away; a man can't change his politics every day. And besides, I don't need you—there'd be nothing for you to do. And it's a long time to election day, anyhow; and what are you going to do meantime?"

"I thought I could count on you," began Jurgis.

"Yes," responded Scully, "so you could. I never yet went back on a friend. But is it fair to leave the job I got you and come to me for another? I have had a hundred fellows after me to-day, and what can I do? I've put seventeen men on the city payroll to clean streets this one week, and do you think I can keep that up forever? It wouldn't do for me to tell other men what I tell you, but you've been on the inside, and you ought to have sense enough to see for yourself. What have you to gain by a strike?" "I haven't thought," said Jurgis.

"Exactly," said Scully, "but you'd better. Take my word for it, the strike will be over in a few days and the men will be beaten; and meantime what you get out of it will belong to you. Do you see?"

And Jurgis saw. He went back to the yards and into the workroom. The men had left a long line of hogs in various stages of preparation, and the foreman was directing the feeble efforts of a score or two of clerks and stenographers and office boys to finish up the job and get them into the chilling rooms. Jurgis went straight up to him and announced, "I have come back to work, Mr. Murphy."

The boss's face lighted up. "Good man!" he cried. "Come ahead!"

"Just a moment," said Jurgis, checking his enthusiasm. "I think I ought to get a little more wages."

"Yes," replied the other, "of course. What do you want?"

Jurgis had debated on the way. His nerve almost failed him now, but he clenched his hands. "I think I ought to have $3 a day," he said.

"All right," said the other promptly; and before the day was out our friend discovered that the clerks and stenographers and office boys were getting $5 a day, and then he could have kicked himself!

So Jurgis became one of the new "American heroes," a man whose virtues merited comparison with those of the martyrs of Lexington and Valley Forge. The resemblance was not complete, of course, for Jurgis was generously paid and comfortably clad, and was provided with a spring cot and a mattress and three substantial meals a day; also he was perfectly at ease, and safe from all peril of life and limb, save only in the case that a desire for beer should lead him to venture outside of the stockyards gates.

And even in the exercise of this privilege he was not left unprotected; a good part of the inadequate police force of Chicago was suddenly diverted from its work of hunting criminals, and rushed out to serve him.

The police, and the strikers also, were determined that there should be no violence; but there was another party interested which was minded to the contrary, and that was the press.

On the first day of his life as a strike-breaker Jurgis quit work early, and in a spirit of bravado he challenged three men of his acquaintance to go outside and get a drink.

They accepted, and went through the big Halsted street gate, where several policemen were watching, and also some union pickets, scanning sharply those who passed in and out. Jurgis and his companions went south on Halsted street, past the hotel, and then suddenly half a dozen men started across the street toward them and proceeded to argue with them concerning the error of their ways.

As the arguments were not taken in the proper spirit, they went on to threats; and suddenly one of them jerked off the hat of one of the four and flung it over the fence.

The man started after it, and then, as a cry of "Scab!" was raised and a dozen people came running out of saloons and doorways, a second man's heart failed him and he followed. Jurgis and the fourth stayed long enough to give themselves the satisfaction of a quick exchange of blows, and then they, too, took to their heels and fled back of the hotel and into the yards again.

Meantime, of course, policemen were coming on a run, and as a crowd gathered other police got excited and sent in a riot call. Jurgis knew nothing of this, but went back to "Packers' Avenue," and in front of the "Central Time Station" he saw one of his companions, breathless and wild with excitement, narrating to an ever growing throng how the four had been attacked and surrounded by a howling mob, and had been nearly torn to pieces.

While he stood listening, smiling cynically, several dapper young men stood by with notebooks in their hands, and it was not more than two hours later that Jurgis saw newsboys running about with armfuls of newspapers, printed in red and black letters six inches high:

VIOLENCE IN THE YARDS! STRIKE-BREAKERS SURROUNDED BY FRENZIED MOB!

If he had been able to buy all of the newspapers of the United States the next morning he might have discovered that his beer hunting exploit was being perused by some two score millions of people, and had served as a text for editorials in half the staid and solemn business men's newspapers in the land.

Jurgis was to see more of this as time passed. For the present, his work being over, he was free to ride into the city by a railroad direct from the yards, or else to spend the night in a room where cots had been laid in rows. He chose the latter, but to his regret, for all night long gangs of strike-breakers kept arriving.

As very few of the better class of workingmen could be got for such work, these specimens of the new American hero contained an assortment of the criminals and thugs of the city, besides negroes and the lowest foreigners—Greeks, Roumanians, Sicilians and Slovaks.

They had been attracted more by the prospect of disorder than by the big wages, and they made the night hideous with singing and carousing and only went to sleep when the time came for them to get up to work.

In the morning before Jurgis had finished his breakfast, "Pat" Murphy ordered him to one of the superintendents, who questioned him as to his experience in the work of the killing room. His heart began to thump with excitement, for he divined instantly that his hour had come—that he was to be a boss!

Earns Big Pay

Some of the foremen were union mem- but fresh meats must be had or the restaurants and hotels and brownstone bers, and many who were not had gone out with the men. It was in the killing department that the packers had been left most in the lurch, and precisely here that they could least afford it, the smoking and canning and salting of meat might wait and all the by-products might be wasted houses would feel the pinch, and then "public opinion" would take a startling turn.

An opportunity such as this would not come twice to a man; and Jurgis seized it. Yes, he knew the work, the whole of it, and he could teach it to others.

But if he took the job and gave satisfaction he would expect to keep it—they would not turn him off at the end of the strike? To which the superintendent replied that he might safely trust Durham's for that—they proposed to teach these unions a lesson, and most of all those foremen who had gone back on them.

Jurgis would receive five dollars a day during the strike, and twenty-five a week after it was settled.

So our friend got a pair of "slaughter pen" boots and "jeans," and flung himself at his task.

It was a weird sight, there on the killing beds—a throng of stupid black negroes, and foreigners who could not understand a word that was said to them, mixed with pale-faced, hollow-chested bookkeepers and clerks, half fainting for the tropical heat and the sickening stench of fresh blood and all struggling to dress a dozen or two of cattle in the same place where twenty-four hours ago, the old killing gang had been speeding, with their marvelous precision, turning out 400 carcasses every hour!

The negroes and the "toughs" from the Levee did not want to work, and every few minutes some of them would feel obliged to retire and recuperate.

In a couple of days Durham & Company had electric fans up to cool off the rooms for them and even couches for them to rest on, and meantime they could go out and find a shady corner and take a "snooze," and as there was no place for any one in particular, and no system, it might be hours before their boss discovered them.

As for the poor office employes, they did their best, moved to it by terror; thirty of them had been "fired" in a bunch that first morning for refusing to serve, besides a number of women clerks and typewriters who had declined to act as waitresses.

Sway of Chaos

It was such a force as this that Jurgis had to organize. He did his best, flying here and there, placing them in rows and showing them the tricks; he had never given an order in his life before, but he had taken enough of them to know, and he soon fell into the spirit of it, and roared and stormed like any old stager.

He had not the most tractable pupils, however. "See hyar, boss," a big black "buck" would begin, "ef you doan' like de way Ah does dis job, you kin git somebody else to do it."

Then a crowd would gather and listen, muttering threats. After the first meal nearly all the steel knives had been missing, and now every negro had one, ground to a fine point, hidden in his boots.

There was no bringing order out of such chaos, Jurgis soon discovered, and he fell in with the spirit of the thing—there was no reason why he should wear himself out with shouting.

If hides and guts were slashed and rendered useless there was no way of tracing it to any one, and if a man lay off and forgot to come back there was nothing to be gained by seeking him, for all the rest would quit in the meantime. Everything went, during the strike, and the packers paid.

Before long Jurgis found that the custom of resting had suggested to some alert minds the possibility of registering at more than one place and earning more than one five dollars a day. When he caught a man at this he "fired" him, but it chanced to be in a quiet corner, and the man tendered him a ten-dollar bill and a wink, and he took them.

Of course, before long this custom spread and Jurgis was soon making quite a good income from it.

In the face of handicaps such as these the packers counted themselves lucky if they could kill off the cattle that had been crippled in transit and the hogs that had developed disease.

Frequently, in the course of a two or three days' trip, in hot weather and without water, some hog would develop cholera and die; and the rest would attack him before he had ceased kicking, and when the car was opened there would be nothing of him left but the bones.

If all the hogs in this carload were not killed at once, they would soon be down with the dread disease, and there was nothing to do but to make them into lard.

It was the same with cattle that were gored and dying, or were limping with broken bones stuck through their flesh—they must be killed, even if brokers and buyers and superintendents had to take off their coats and help drive and cut and skin them.

And meantime agents of the packers were gathering gangs of negroes in the country districts of the far South, promising them five dollars a day and board, and being careful not to mention there was a strike; already carloads of them were on the way, with special rates from the railroads, and all traffic ordered out of the way.

Many towns and cities were taking advantage of the chance to clear out their jails and workhouses. In Detroit the magistrates would release every man who agreed to leave town within twenty-four hours, and agents of the packers were in the court rooms to ship them right.

And meantime trainloads of supplies were coming in for their accommodation, including beer and whiskey, so that they might not be tempted to go outside. They hired thirty young girls in Cincinnati to "pack fruit," and when they arrived put them to work canning corned beef, and put cots for them to sleep in a public hallway through which the men passed.

As the gangs came in day and night, under the escort of squads of police, they stowed them away in unused work rooms and store rooms, and in the car sheds, crowded so closely together that the cots touched.

In some places they would use the same room for eating and sleeping, and at night the men would put their cots upon the tables, to keep away from the swarms of rats.

Packers Demoralized

But with all their best efforts, the packers were demoralized. Ninety per cent. of the men had walked out; and they faced the task of completely remaking their labor force, and with the price of meat up thirty per cent., and the public clamoring for a settlement.

They made an offer to submit the whole question at issue to arbitration, and at the end of ten days the unions accepted it, and the strike was called off.

It was agreed that all the men were to be re-employed within forty-five days, and that there was to be "no discrimination against union men."

This was an anxious time for Jurgis. If the men were taken back without discrimination, he would lose his present place.

He sought out the superintendent, who smiled grimly and bade him "wait and see." Durham's strikebreakers were few of them leaving.

Whether or not the "settlement" was simply a trick of the packers to gain time, or whether they really expected to break the strike and cripple the unions by the plan, cannot be said; but that night there went out from the office of Durham and Company a telegram to all the big packing centres, "Employ no union leaders."

And in the morning, when the 20,000 men thronged into the yards, with their dinner pails and working clothes, Jurgis stood near the door of the hog-trimming room, where he had worked before the strike, and saw a throng of eager men, with a score or two of policemen watching them, and he saw a superintendent come out and walk down the line and pick out man after man that pleased him; and one after another came, and there were some men up near the head of the line who were never picked—they being the union stewards and delegates, and the men Jurgis had heard making speeches at the meetings.

Each time, of course, there were louder murmurings and angrier looks. Over where the cattle butchers were waiting Jurgis heard shouts and saw a crowd, and he hurried there. One big butcher, who was president of the Packing Trades Council, had been passed over five times, and the men were wild with rage; they had appointed a committee of three to go in and see the superintendent and the committee had made three attempts, and each time the police had clubbed them back from the door.

Jurgis, a New "American Hero"

How the Sunny South Lures the Northern Song Writer

Illustrated by the song, "'Mid the Fields of Snowy Cotton," printed to-day on other pages of this newspaper

SINCE war times and the day of Stephen C. Foster the popular song industry has been rather neglectful of the Sunny South. Probably that is because most of the popular song writers have been Northerners, and the possibilities of cotton fields and mocking birds have been overlooked. It is easy to see, however, that the field which has so long lain fallow must now be more fertile than ever.

Evidently this has occurred to Otto and John Heinzman, for these authors and composers have lately brought out the song of the South printed on other pages of this newspaper to-day called "'Mid the Fields of Snowy Cotton."

There is a special and particular reason why Bostonians in the song writing line should find the South inspiring. It is difficult to distil romance from the familiar. Not only is the South unfamiliar to most Bostonians, but its romance is enriched with conventional attributes so well known that there is no need to risk losing the romance inspiration by visiting Georgia and Alabama and becoming as familiar with the real aspect of life there as they are with the life of Boston streets.

"Where the mocking bird is singing and the sunny skies are blue
Stands a little home forever dear to me."

Needless to quote more. "Cotton fields," "Golden corn," and a few other similar allusions fix the local atmosphere for the song of tender reminiscences of the "dear old Southern home."

There is also a conventional general style and form of melody in the absence of which the Southern song might be repudiated in the North. The Heinzman Brothers have taken care to respect this convention and their song is therefore used as an apt and helpful illustration in this connection.

The same authors have to their credit many other valuable illustrations, showing the proper manner of writing songs of other localities and other sentiments. The titles themselves are illuminating. Here are some of them.

"The Little Rustic Cottage by the Stream," "In After Years," "When the Wind Sighs in the West," "I Love You as the Sunshine Loves the Dew," "It Seems Like Old Times Again," "I Wonder Does She Sometimes Think of Me?" "That's When You'll Miss Me, Little Girl," "Down Where the Silvery Mohawk Flows," and "Esmeralda McCann."

With such models as these before them it is their own fault if other ambitious popular song writers do not challenge the productiveness of Otto and John Heinzman.

FACT and FICTION

COSMOPOLITAN for August is the issue of FACT and FICTION. Every article, story and poem is entertaining; some are instructive as well, and some just fascinating.

STORY OF ANDREW JACKSON

By Alfred Henry Lewis.

This is an historical novel that is true—every word of it. Andrew Jackson—who does not know him as one of the greatest of Presidents, but who knows him as a lover and, incidentally, as a duellist? When you know his private life as intimately as Mr. Lewis tells of it, you will know one of the most romantic characters in history.

THE TREASON OF THE SENATE

By David Graham Phillips.

Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, one of the powerful lieutenants of the "merger," and Senator Knox, of Pennsylvania, whose record is one of devotion to the men who exploit the American people—both are scourged in the August issue with facts about their deeds that patriotic citizens will read with horror and surprise. This instalment of "The Treason of the Senate" shows Elkins's connection with the infamous crime of "rebating," and how Knox betrayed Roosevelt after the President had retained him as Attorney-General.

CAUSE OF THE GREAT EARTHQUAKE

By David Starr Jordan.

Much has been written about what the earthquake did, but practically nothing has been said about the cause which underlay the whole calamity. Mr. Jordan, a scientific investigator, well qualified to write on this subject, shows how and why the terrible force locked in the bowels of the earth wrought this frightful destruction of the "Queen City of the West"—and, indeed, the whole Pacific Coast. This article is written in a popular style. Every one will be the wiser after having read it.

CAST AWAY ON FEATHER'S FOLLY

By Norman Duncan.

Every one who loves the adventure of the sea admires Norman Duncan's strong, virile stories, and this one is in his best style. The story runs breathlessly to the end, and the reader himself will scarcely breathe until he has finished it.

INGRATITUDE OF MR. ROSENFELD

By Bruno Lessing.

Lessing is the one humorist who is able to present to magazine readers the ordinarily sombre life of the New York east side Ghetto in garb of lighter hue. Lessing's characters are inimitable and, moreover, true; they have all the strength and reality of a master story-teller and observer of human nature.

ANGELS' VISITS By W. W. Jacobs.

Every one who has read Jacobs's short stories, which have been published from time to time in the Cosmopolitan, says that this wonderful English humorist suggests Dickens. He has all of Dickens's best manner of word caricature, with all the fidelity to nature that made that great novelist the greatest. "Angels' Visits" will provoke laughter enough to teach the laughless how to laugh.

A HONEYMOON IN A CANOE

Extracts from a Bride's Log Book. By Winifred Fales.

Those who would like a delicious little tid-bit of literature written almost in a whisper of words, ought to read "A Honeymoon in a Canoe." It makes dainty, entertaining reading, and might, perhaps, suggest to prospective brides and bridegrooms a delightful way to avoid the crowd on the momentous "trip" and of obtaining quiet and time for "honeymooning."

BOLD SENATOR BAILEY.

An intensely absorbing article telling of the effrontery and cheap logic of Joseph Bailey's reply to the "COSMOPOLITAN" on the floor of the Senate. A true statement, showing how the Senator failed utterly to answer the charges that he helped Standard Oil into Texas, that he received a $200,000 fee for his services in negotiating loans in oil and timber lands, and that he regularly works for the "interests" and against the people.

MOTHER OF THAW WON OVER BY WIFE.

Standing By Her Husband, She Forces Older Woman to Relinquish Insanity Defence.

JUDGE OLCOTT'S FIRM GIVES UP ALL PAPERS

White's Slayer to Appeal for Justification of Act in "Unwritten Law."

COLDNESS BETWEEN TWO WOMEN SHOWN IN TOMBS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, July 21.—Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw won to-day in a heart-rending battle in the Tombs with the mother of her husband, Harry K. Thaw, when both pleaded with the young man in regard to the plea that should be made to the jury which will try him for the killing of Stanford White.

The young Mrs. Thaw pleaded with her husband to stand firm in his determination to go to trial as a sane man.

His mother besought him with tear-dimmed eyes and trembling voice to take no risk of meeting death in the electric chair. She urged, begged, prayed and implored that he take the advice of Judge Olcott and former Governor Black and claim that he was the victim of emotional insanity when he fired the fatal shots on aMdison Square roof garden.

[illegible] pleading with her husband spoke for her own justification in the eyes of the public.

It is because of her that her husband's life is in the gravest peril and, believing that the wrong she says Stanford White did her when an innocent girl justified her husband's vengeance, she besought Harry Thaw to depend upon the "unwritten law" for his life and liberty.

He listened intently to the two women who are nearest and dearest to him. His wife won the battle. Thaw at the end was as firm as ever in his determination not to accept life at the price of being incarcerated in an asylum for the insane even for a brief period.

Letters by Mrs. Thaw's Mother.

A sensation has been sprung by persons interested in the prosecution, when they brought to public notice a series of letters written by Mrs. C. J. Holman, mother of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, to Stanford White, three years ago, the language of which may prove very serious to the prisoner.

These letters were found among the effects of the dead architect. In them Mrs. Holman complains bitterly of the conduct of Harry K. Thaw toward her daughter, now his wife, and implores Mr. White to do all in his power to bring her back to her mother's control.

"A scoundrel," "a villain," "a man with murderous intent in his heart" are phrases with which Mrs. Holman characterized Thaw in her letters to White three years ago. This development may have an important bearing on the future conduct of the case.

He said he wanted to be freed upon the ground that what he did was the right thing for a husband to do. He said he wanted not only liberty but the approval of the court for the slaying of the great architect.

In the end the elder Mrs. Thaw had yielded to the iron will of her son, backed by the insistent pleading of her daughter-in-law. The decision of Thaw meets the approval of Clifford W. Hartridge, the Pittsburg attorney and personal friend he himself chose for his counsel. The lawyer said to-night:

"Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, will stand by her husband to the end. She believes that he is sane. He has assured her of that fact and she believes in her husband implicitly. Mrs. Thaw believes that Harry K. Thaw was justified in shooting down Stanford White, and that he had ample justification by the "unwritten law."

"Important evidence tending to put Thaw in a better light is now being developed. That evidence, both Thaw and his wife, are confident will save him from both the mad house and the electric chair."

Mrs. Carnegie Sees Brother.

Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, sister of Thaw, went with her mother to the Tombs when the latter made her last plea with her son to accept the advice and services of the great law firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge. These masters of criminal law and practice believe the young millionaire doomed to the meanest felon's death unless he sets forth as his defence mental irresponsibility.

Mrs. Carnegie and the elder Mrs. Thaw were weeping when they left the grim prison and rode back to the law firm whose services the brother and son refused so curtly a week ago. There they got Judge Olcott to surrender the papers prepared for use in the application for a commission in lunacy.

Success in this formality might save Thaw even the risk of any trial at all. But he had told these lawyers from the beginning that he preferred the death house to the mad house. Attorney Hartridge received the lunacy papers from Judge Olcott. They include the report

UNABLE TO MOVE MUSCLE 3 YEARS BEFORE HE DIED

Mysterious Disease Held Sufferer in Its Grip For 14 Years.

Worcester, July 21.—After fourteen years' suffering, for the past three years on a cot, unable to move a muscle, Charles G. Earle died to-day at the home of his daughter, No. 8 Dewey street. Mr. Earle's illness was caused by some disease which has baffled physicians.

To-day an autopsy was held, and the surgeons decided it will take some time to determine the exact cause of death. Up to a few days ago Mr. Earle enjoyed possession of all faculties, although his joints were petrified, the ossification gradually extending to other parts of his body.

His hands and feet were swollen to twice their usual size, and he could not move a muscle, although in full realization of all that took place about him. He was a prominent society man and leaves a wife and two daughters.

LIGHTNING HITS YACHT'S TOPMAST; CREW IS STUNNED

Throng of Yachtsmen at Larchmont Startled by Fierce Storm.

Larchmont, L. I., July 21.—During the fierce storm which swept down on the big fleet of yachts assembled here for the open regatta this afternoon, marking the beginning of the race week, a bolt of lightning struck the topmast of the racing sloop Yankee, owned by Harry L. Maxwell, stunned several of her crew, and startled the great throng of yachtsmen in the harbor. Mr. Maxwell and his friends were not on board the yacht.

Several members of the crew were stunned but nobody received any injury.

The race of the seventy-footers, which was to have been the feature of the regatta to-day, was postponed.

The Yankee was taken to City Island where she will be fitted with the topmast of the seventy-footer Mineola, which is not in commission this season, and made ready for Monday's regatta.

CORTLANDT BISHOP TO TAKE SOCIETY ON TRIP TO THE CLOUDS

Armed With Certificate of Balloon Pilot He Plans Sport for Lenox Colony.

Pittsfield, July 21.—News of particular interest to the followers of the new sport of aerial navigation has been received here from Mr. and Mrs. Cortlandt Field Bishop, who are spending the Summer in Paris, automobiling and ballooning with friends.

It is understood that Mr. Bishop is to qualify himself as a pilot of balloons, and in September he will bring to Pittsfield a large balloon in which he will entertain members of the Lenox colony who care to take trips with him.

The Aero Club of America has established a station in this place and Mr. Bishop is determined to popularize the sport among society folk. Mrs. Bishop has made a number of ascents with Count de la Vaulx this Summer.

NEW YORK STARTS CRUSADE ON SPITTING

Three Out-of-Town Men Arrested for Breaking Ordinance.

New York, July 21.—Frederick Marchell, thirty-three years old, a Chicago merchant, stopping at the Waldorf-Astoria, was arraigned before Magistrate Barlow in the Jefferson Market Court to-day, charged with violating the health ordinance forbidding spitting in public places.

Marchell informed the magistrate that he was unaware of the ordinance and was discharged.

Two other out-of-town men were arrested at the same station by the same officer, also charged with spitting on the platform. Frank Stautmeister, fifty-two years old, of Hoboken, was fined $1, and Oliver F. Kauffman of Reading, Pa., was fined $2.

FOUR DROWNED IN ATLANTIC CITY SURF

Atlantic City, N. J., July 21.—Four persons met death in the surf here this afternoon, between five and six o'clock. Robert S. Thomas, 47 years old, manager of the Victor Talking Machine Works, Camden, died in a vain attempt to save his 13-year-old daughter Helen. Both bodies were recovered. Mrs. Thomas saw the drowning of her husband and daughter.

C. E. Sharpless, 28 years old, of Jenkintown, Pa., and Walter N. Whitlock, of Richmond, Va., were the other victims.

TRIES SUICIDE BY DRINKING ACID

Paul Boehn, thirty-one years of age, single, living at No. 81 Mozart street, Roxbury, attempted suicide at his home last night, by swallowing carbolic acid. He was sent to the City Hospital, where he was at once placed on the dangerous list. He is not expected to live through to-day. Domestic troubles are given as the cause of his act.

TERRIBLE DEATH PERIL FOR GIRL

Spencer, July 21.—Mary La Plant was at work near a skiving machine in Prouty & Co.'s factory to-day when the machine caught a strand of her unusually long hair and slowly began to draw the girl under the knives.

Miss La Plant's screams brought to the rescue a dozen men, who stopped the machine, but not before it had torn bunches of the screaming girl's hair from the scalp.

CITY SWELTERS UNDER HEAT SCOURGE.

In Vain Breeze Blows and Cooling Rain Descends, Humidity Sticks Near Top.

FIVE ARE PROSTRATED; RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

HEAT PROSTRATIONS.

[illegible], John, aged sixty-six, No. [illegible] Harrison avenue; fell from wagon, taken to City Hospital, will recover.

[illegible], Alfred, aged thirty-six, [illegible], No. 5 Hammond street; received scalp wound and concussion of the brain; taken to the City Hospital.

[illegible], John, aged seventy-one, overcome on Washington street near Hanover; taken to the Relief Hospital.

[illegible], Oscar H., forty-three, overcome in the Blackstone Market; taken to the Relief Hospital.

[illegible], Walter, aged forty-seven, overcome on Sudbury street, near [illegible]land; taken to the Relief Hospital.

Five heat prostrations were the result of the excessive heat of yesterday. High temperature coupled with a high relative humidity combined to make the weather conditions in Greater Boston almost unbearable.

The rain in the afternoon sent the mercury down for a short while and for a brief time a delicious coolness blessed the suffering multitudes. But this was for a short time only.

After the rain passed the mercury resumed its upward flight and was soon up around the eighty mark. Later last night a cool breeze came up again and it seemed as if there were some hope of the hot wave being spent.

This hope is dashed, however, by the [illegible] weather man, who holds out no relief in the forecast for to-day.

Temperature about the same. Partly cloudy to cloudy with light variable to westerly winds.

TO SCOUR WOODS FOR WINZOLA GOODELL

1,200 TO SEEK MISSING GIRL

Great Organized Search Starts Today—Over 30 Square Miles Near the Waters of Pond.

COUSIN INSISTS GIRL IS MURDERED

2 Persons Watched By Police on Suspicion of Knowing About Her Disappearance.

Belchertown, July 21.—Over twelve hundred armed, volunteer searchers will scour the wooded mountain beyond Upper Pond to-morrow in a great organized effort to find, dead or alive, Miss Winzola M. Goodell, who has been mysteriously missing since July 6.

One thousand men of Belchertown and vicinity will be in charge of Deputy Sheriff Barton. Sheriff Jarius E. Clark, who has just returned to Northampton from his vacation, will come down from that place at the head of 200 to 300 volunteers to assist the local searchers.

E. A. Randall,
Selectmen of Belchertown.

Belchertown, Mass., July 20, 1906.

With the diagram shown here, which gives the last known movements of the lost Winzola Goodall and which illustrates the various theories advanced to account for her disappearance, is shown a new photograph of the girl never before published, and the leader of the great posse which is trying to find her to-day. There is also shown a photograph of one of the posters offering a reward for the girl's discovery.

The search line will extend about six miles across the base of the foothills. It will move up the mountain and down the other side to Enfield, six miles beyond. Thus every foot of some thirty-six square miles will be covered.

Sidney Smith, cousin of the missing girl, persists in his declaration that Miss Goodell has been murdered and that he could give the authorities valuable clues. He has even gone so far as to say he would name the murderer. He is willing to give this information, he says, to any State officer who shall come.

Sheriff Clark had a conference tonight with District Attorney Irwin, as a result of which he has ordered all his deputy sheriffs, twenty-seven in number, to report for duty at Belchertown tomorrow morning at as early an hour as they can reach here. These officers will captain various divisions of the searching party.

The searchers, Sheriff Clark told a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter late to-night, will thoroughly scour the country surrounding the Belchertown Upper, Middle and Lower ponds. "It is a big task," he said, "but it has got to be done, and we will do it."

"I am glad the sheriff is going to start the big search," said the missing girl's father when he was told. "It's time something was done besides talk."

Girl Never Went to Pond?

A piece of evidence came out this evening which goes to show that Miss Goodell never reached the pond, as has been generally supposed, but turned into the woods at a point somewhere between the house of William Randolph, the last person known to have seen her, and the banks of the lake.

Miss Florence Jewett, a nine-year-old

2 POLICEMEN ARE KNOCKED OUT BY ROUGHS.

Patrolmen Patten in South Boston and Naughton in West End Rendered Unconscious Trying to Make Arrests

Two officers, one in the West End and one in South Boston, were knocked unconscious last evening while attempting to arrest their prisoners by friends of the captives. Later both were able to resume their duties with the result that arrests were made in both cases.

After receiving a severe gash in his right cheek while attempting to arrest Michael Nee, opposite No. 44 Gold street, South Boston, Patrolman Charles B. Patten, of Station 6, returned to duty and finally to the scene of the assault and arrested William Harrington, 17 years of age, of No. 22 Gates street, and John Flaherty, 17 years of age, of 185 Fourth street, who, he alleges, were his assailants.

While attempting to arrest two men charged with assault and battery on each other, near the corner of Cambridge and Blossom streets, about midnight, Patrolman Peter Naughton of Station 3, was set upon by friends of his prisoners and knocked unconscious by a stone thrown by one of his assailants. As he fell he released his prisoners and seized a man whom he thought threw the stone. He succeeded in retaining his grip upon the man until assistance arrived. With the assistance of brother officers he made his way to the station house with his captive. He was found to have a severe gash in his head and three stitches had to be taken in the wound.

His prisoner gave the name of Patrick J. Hannon, 20 years of age, living at No. 8 Brooks place in the West End.

THIEF STEALS $125 DIAMOND FROM TRAY IN STORE.

Walked Off Calmly After He Had Inspected Jewels and Promised to Come Back on Monday to Make a Purchase

A sneak thief entered the store of Freeman & Hunt, jewelry dealers at No. 55 Temple place, last night shortly before closing time and before the clerk noticed anything wrong had departed, taking with him a diamond valued at $125.

He swaggered into the store about 6 o'clock and asked to be shown some diamond rings as he wished to make a purchase. He was shown a large tray and after carefully looking them all over, left saying he would return Monday.

He had no sooner left the store, than the clerk discovered the loss and at once gave the alarm, but too late. The man had disappeared in the crowd.

He is described as about thirty-five years of age, of about 180 pounds and dressed in a grey suit. He carried a Raglan overcoat on his arm. The police are at work on the case and hope soon to effect a capture.

THREAD MAGNATE DEAD AT HOLYOKE

Holyoke, July 21.—Elisha Adelbert Skill, fifty-five years of age, of No. 248 Central Park West, New York City, died today at the home of his brother, Isaac W. Skill of Holyoke. He was vice-president of the American Thread Company.

HELD UP BY THUGS AND ROBBED OF $300 IN CASH.

Roxbury Man Attacked at His Own Door and Relieved of Saturday Night's Receipts at Back Bay Provision Store

Walter L. Milliken, of No. 135 Cedar street, Roxbury, reported to Roxbury Crossing Station early this morning that, as he was about to enter his house at 2 o'clock, he was seized and choked by two young men while a third grabbed his hand bag containing $300 and stripped off his cuffs and their gold links. The thugs escaped.

Milliken runs a provision store at No. 1408 Columbus avenue and was taking home his Saturday receipts. The thugs stood in the shadow of the house and were on him before he had time to dodge or make a cry.

After getting his valuables the three bolted down Cedar street and were out of sight in the darkness before Milliken could get a fair start after them.

STEAMER FINLAND ASHORE OFF HOLLAND

Flushing, The Netherlands, July 22.—The steamship Finland, bound from Antwerp for New York, is reported ashore off the Island of Wilsoorden at the mouth of the Scheldt River. It is understood that she has sustained no very great damage, but tugs have been sent to her assistance.

Terrors of French Commune Feared When People Realize Latest Despotism.

LEGISLATORS FLEE TO ESCAPE DUNGEON CELLS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—The Czar's order dissolving the Duma is expected to bring about the awful crisis which will plunge Russia into the throes of the most terrible revolutionary struggle the world has known since the French people tore down the Bastile and beheaded their King and Queen.

The notice was posted half an hour after the report reached the legislative body that such an action by the despot was imminent. While members of the Duma were discussing the rumor word reached them that the notice had been placed in black and white upon the walls of public buildings.

Members of the Duma received the news that the Autocrat had struck the long-expected blow in silence.

To Arrest Leaders.

Revolutionary leaders had whispered conferences. They said that the time for talk was past and the moment for action nigh. Most of them are busy with plans to escape from St. Petersburg. It is feared that they will be arrested and thrown into prison. The ministry believes that without leaders the mobs throughout the empire can do little. Many of the leaders are in the clutches of the secret police. To hold them they have only to clench the hand.

Much depends at this hour upon the loyalty of the troops.

TAGGART WHITE ELEPHANT FOR DEMOCRATS.

Accepted Invitation to 1st Indiana District Convention; Not Wanted Now.

FRENCH LICK GAMBLING IS REPORTED STOPPED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21.—The Democrats of the first district have a white elephant on their hands. Before Governor Hanley closed the gambling rooms at the French Lick Springs an invitation was extended to Thomas Taggart, Democratic national chairman, asking him to be present at the congressional convention at Petersburg. Taggart has accepted the invitation, but now the party leaders do not wish him to come, fearing it will hurt the party.

While they can not very well send him word to remain away from the Petersburg convention, they are talking among themselves and hoping that he will not be present.

Attorney General Charles W. Miller said to-day, with reference to the letter of Auditor Bigler to the French Lick and Fast Baden hotels that the State would take no further steps now "if conditions remained the same."

"No Necessity for Action."

"The State is informed by Mr. Taggart that there are no violations of the law by the French Lick Hotel and the State is informed by other sources that this is true," said Mr. Miller to-day. "As long as that is true there is no necessity for any further action on the part of the State. If conditions change, however, that is, if gambling is permitted again, the State will have a basis for further proceedings under the voluntary association act."

"This action of Auditor Bigler in sending the two hotel companies the results of his examinations was independent of the court action taken at Paoli, according to Mr. Miller.

"The auditor made an examination of the two companies," said he. "This examination completed, it would have been strange indeed if the auditor had not notified the companies of the results of the two examinations."

Taggart to Bigler.

"Would the State proceed under this voluntary association act in the event that the Supreme Court upholds the lower court in the proceedings that were instituted on information," was asked the Attorney General. "'We don't cross a bridge until we come to it,' said that official. "But you can put it down that the Supreme Court is not going to sustain the finding of the lower court."

KING GODFATHER TO INFANT MANCHESTER

London, July 21.—King Edward, represented by Earl Granville, was one of the godfathers of the Duke of Manchester's second son, who was christened to-day in the chapel royal, St. James' Palace.

The other sponsors were Eugene Zimmerman of Cincinnati, father-in-law of the duke, and Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester (widow of the eighth duke).

Mississippi water brought over for the occasion was used at the christening.

NAPLES THANKS HEARST FOR AID TO SUFFERERS.

Senator Declares at Gathering of Notables That Vesuvian Relief Fund Saved Many Lives and Much Misery

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Naples, July 21.—Judge John Palmieri of New York, who has arrived as special commissioner, representing William Randolph Hearst in the distribution of the Vesuvian relief fund, has spent two busy days of investigation.

This evening a special meeting of the Red Cross commission was held to welcome Judge Palmieri as Mr. Hearst's representative. Among those present were the Princess Ballamare, Baroness Barracca, Senator Marquis Atenolfi, president of the Neapolitan Red Cross; General Lahalle, the vice-president; Marquis Lavra, the secretary; Duke Dusenet, Count Panzuti, Commendatore Jernce, Councillors Albano, Sorge, Curo, Cirio, Montechiaro, Rubino and many other notabilities.

Senator Atenolfi begegd Judge Palmieri to convey the thanks of all Naples and the Vesuvian district to Representative Hearst and the relief commission for their generous aid which had saved many lives and relieved unspeakable misery. He said the Italians would never forget the noble initiative of Mr. Hearst and the committee. The Marquis Lavia, who has spent the last three months in the Vesuvian district distributing The American's fund, described the methods of distribution and announced that a report would be ready in a few days giving in full particulars of the work done.

Judge Palmieri thanked the Red Cross society in the name of Representative Hearst and the committee for the splendid reception. He has also arranged to visit the afflicted districts next week.

SOCIETY WOMEN TO RUN VENETIAN FETE

Newport, July 21.—Society women will preside at the booths which will be a feature of "A Fete in a Venetian Garden," to be given at the Casino Theatre next Saturday evening for the joint benefit of the Army and Navy Young Men's Christian Association and the Women's Aid of the Newport Hospital.

The stage will be set as a scene in Venice, and professional performers will appear in the pantomime.

AERONAUT TOSSED ABOUT BY GALE FACES DEATH.

Knabenshue Has Perilous Race in Balloon and Is Rescued By Crowd Who Seize Trailing Rope He Threw Overboard

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, July 21.—Roy Knabenshue, while sailing his airship at a height of 200 feet above the ground, nearly met death to-day, when strong, high winds seized his ship and tossed it about like a feather, almost throwing the aeronaut from the frame to the ragged rocks of Washington Heights.

His airship was blown clear over a spur of the elevated tracks in that vicinity and on to Washington Heights. He narrowly missed colliding with a flag pole and a house, and was hauled to the ground at West One Hundred and Sixtieth street and Edgecombe road by men and boys who clutched at the trailing rope he had thrown overboard and pulled him down.

Knabenshue kept his courage throughout and even when the airship pitched to and fro in the wind he attempted by running along the flimsy frame to gain its control. Failing, however, in this, he turned off the motor and shouted to the crowds beneath to pull him down.

Knabenshue said to-night: "I promise you that in a day or two when I think everything is favorable, I shall go to Governor's Island and throw imaginary bombs on the [illegible]. That will be my last trip here. [illegible] I'm through with New York. I've spent fifteen hundred dollars here and haven't got a cent back."

TRAIN IN PANIC OVER MAD DOG

A fox terrier dog belonging to Mrs. Charles Reed of No. 1 Lamartine square, Jamaica Plain, was driven mad yesterday by the heat while being brought into Boston from the Reed home on a New York, New Haven & Hartford train. After causing much excitement among the passengers it tore great holes in the dress of Mrs. Reed and her sister, and was finally removed to the Dedham street police station where it was shot. Mr. Reed had great difficulty in holding the dog, the animal jumping up and down and biting at everybody near him. The animal was stricken while the train was near the Back Bay station, and when the station was reached Mr. Reed removed the dog in a cab to the police station.

CALL ON LABOR MEN TO UNITE IN POLITICS.

American Federation of Labor to Urge Defeat of Candidates Unfriendly to Workers.

GOMPERS TO STUMP AGAINST LITTLEFIELD

Washington, July 21.—On Monday next the American Federation of Labor will issue a political pronunciamento to the workingmen of America urging them to act as a unit against the election of candidates for office who are unfriendly [illegible] to the interests of organized labor.

The Federation has two [illegible] on its rolls, and working hand in [illegible] it are the 500,000 men of the brotherhood of trainmen, including conductors, engineers and firemen.

President Gompers and many other labor leaders will go through out the country making speeches in the districts of those members they will seek to defeat.

Representative Littlefield of Maine, who is alleged to be hostile to the labor interests, is the first object of the Federation's attack. During the campaign President Gompers will make noonday speeches to the factory hands in Littlefield's district.

Others on "Blacklist."

Among the other candidates for re-election to Congress who are on the Federation's "blacklist" are: Speaker Cannon, Republican Floor Leader Payne, Representative Dalzell of Pennsylvania, spokesman of the railroad companies; Charles Landis of Indiana, Representative Jenkins of Wisconsin, chairman of the judiciary committee, which killed the anti-injunction bill; Representative Parker of New Jersey, chief antagonist of the anti-injunction bill in the judiciary committee.

In fact all the Republican members of the judiciary committee will be put on the list, excepting Representative Pearre of Maryland, and Birdsall of Iowa, who voted with the Democrats in the committee against postponing a report of the bill.

All the Republican members of the labor committee are in the list, excepting possibly Chairman Gardner of New Jersey. The chairman is held in high esteem by the labor leaders, but in some quarters they are opposing him for not bringing the eight-hour law fight to a direct issue with Speaker Cannon.

President Gompers is reticent as to the details of his plans. The Federation's political policy, however, is given out by him in these words:

"Workers Should Be Unified."

"As our efforts are centered against all forms of industrial slavery and economic wrong, we must also direct our utmost energies to remove all forms of political servitude and party slavery, to the end that the working people may act as a unit at the polls in every election.

"The Federation most firmly favors the independent use of the ballot by trade unionists and workingmen, united regardless of party, that we may elect men from our own ranks to make new laws and administer them along the lines laid down in the legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor and at the same time secure an impartial judiciary that will not govern us by arbitrary injunction of the courts, or act as the pliant tools of corporate wealth."

WILL COCKRAN WED MISS IDE IN FAMOUS PALACE OF ORIENT?

Miss Annie Ide, daughter of Governor General Henry C. Ide of the Philippines, who is to wed Congressman W. Bourke Cockran of New York.

New York and Washington Society Gossiping About Romance of the Congressman and Governor's Daughter

Proability Is That Ceremony Will Be in America, as Few Friends Could Go as Guests Half Way Around the World

New York and Washington society is to-day speculating upon the report that the coming wedding of Miss Ida C. Ide, daughter of Governor-General Henry C. Ide of the Philippines, to Congressman W. Bourke Cockran is to take place in the historic old Malacanang palace, the present home of the bride-to-be and her sister, Miss Marjorie, and where the two brilliant young American women have entertained distinguished personages of this and other countries.

Romance suggests the wedding in the far Philippines, as Miss Ide would be the first American bride to be led to the altar in the great drawing room of the ancient and historic castle which was Castile's pride in the East for so many years. But practical social ethics says no. To hold the wedding so far from home, and in view of the fact that Governor Ide will resign his post next fall and return to the United States, would rob the ceremony of the great social possibilities which it carries with it.

Society people do not greatly credit the last rumor of a change from the original plans. It is pointed out that so far American friends of the distinguished couple could journey half way around the globe to attend the nuptial ceremony that it would be robbed of its most desirable features.

Society is interested in this approaching wedding from the additional touch of romance, it being the forth wedding resulting directly from the trip made to the Philippines by Secretary of War Taft and his party. The engagement of Alice Roosevelt to Congressman Nicholas Longworth was the first fruit of the long trip. How many other marriages are to result from this famous junket of statesmen and Cupid everyone is now guessing.

LATEST OF LONG SERIES OF "EXONERATIONS"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Washington, July 21.—Major General Leonard Wood, the President's "dearest friend," etc., is entering upon his seventh vindication as a gentleman and an officer.

This time it is the case of Captain L. M. Koehler of the Fourth Artillery in the Philippines. The voluble and irascible captain has used language which General Wood need not have heard and need not have acted on except through informers. Koehler will probably be convicted. Koehler, before this incident had just been in a row with Major Hugh L. Scott and Koehler got the worst of a court martial. Major Scott is the man that General Wood used to refer people to when they wanted information about the killing of women and children in the Dajo mountain fight. Scott was the general apologist for this "brilliant feat of arms," as the President called it.

According to the unprintable characterizations of Wood by Koehler, the case, if proved will go hard with the captain. General Wood, in the row between Scott and Koehler, exonerated Scott and ordered Koehler to a trial. This rather exasperated Koehler and he expressed himself violently about General Wood.

As General Wood is practically demanding another vindication, it is interesting to recall some of the things for and from which it has ben necessary heretofore to "vindicate" the president's best friend.

When he was governor-general of Cuba General Wood put his hand in the treasury and got out enough money to float the North Atlantic squadron in when it made a visit to Havana harbor, which General Wood assumed to be a personal call on himself. The law department at Washington said that it was all right, and he was triumphantly vindicated.

Then there was public criticism of the fact that General Wood and family had accepted some silver and pearl tokens, so to speak, from the celebrated Jai Alai gambling concern in Cuba, whose lease had been extended by his excellency the governor-general. Then he spent the Cuban money to buy sugar trust literature and in general to boost the sugar trust game in Cuba about the time of the arrangement of the Cuban tariff.

The war department and Major Scott vindicated General Wood in the Mount Dato Dajo affair where the women and children were butchered.

General Wood made a certain other navigation of the globe and had the government to pay part of his private expenses.

There was a refund and this matter was also put in the list of vindications.

General Wood, it is well known, was jumped over the heads of captains and colonels by the hundreds to give him the place he now holds and is naturally very unpopular. The matter was all the worse in the navy and army eye for the reason that Major-General Wood was originally [illegible] officer in the surgical corps, and which it has been necessary heretofore to [illegible] thing like a colonel.

1200 Scour Woods for Lost Winzola Goodell

WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO WINZOLA M. GOODELL?

TWO THEORIES IN MYSTERY OF MISSING GIRL

MURDER

Those who believe the girl has been killed base their beliefs on:

1. Her unpreparedness for any journey.
2. Her lack of motive for running away.
3. The loneliness of the spot where she disappeared.
4. The peculiar mentality of a man who might be suspected.
5. The discovery of the empty boat, the back comb in it, the string on the shore and the writing on the Schillaire cottage.
6. The letter which Miss Goodell sent to her sweetheart ten minutes before she left home.

DISAPPEARANCE

Those who believe the girl has merely become lost or run away (their number is very small) base their belief upon:

1. The absence of motive for her murder.
2. The evidence that she left the road before she reached the pond

Great Search Organized in Effort to Find Missing Girl, Whether Dead or Alive.

girl who lives at West Pelham, left her home at 3.40 on the afternoon of July 6, the day Miss Goodell disappeared, with her uncle, Charles R. Allison of New York, and his son Harold, to drive in a buggy to Dwight and Belchertown.

At Dwight she stopped at the post office and fixes the time at 4. The Haven [illegible] there just ten minutes before she [illegible] the road toward the pond. [illegible] after she had stopped in Dwight [illegible] Miss Goodell pass and go down [illegible] toward the pond, passing out of sight under the bridge of the Central Massachusetts road. From there to the pond is at least twenty-five minutes walk.

Within less than ten minutes Miss Jewett and her companions drove over the same route. They must have passed the house of Mr. Randolph, half way to the pond, a moment or two after Miss Goodell went by.

They did not come upon her on their road to the pond. From this Miss Jewett is positive that the girl turned off from the road before reaching the water, and took some path into the woods.

State Detective James McKay, who was expected this afternoon from Great Barrington, where he has been working on the Streub murder case, did not arrive to-day. He is expected to-morrow. If Sidney Smith gives any definite name to him as that of a suspect, sensational developments may result.

Girl's Name on Wall.

Discovery of Miss Goodell's name written in lead pencil, with another name and some sentimental quotations underneath on the wall of the A. P. Schillaire cottage on the shore of Upper Pond has excited considerable interest. The handwriting of her name has been identified as that of Miss Goodell.

Two suspects who have been under surveillance by the police are still being watched. [illegible] two [illegible] row [illegible] in Belchertown. He is said to be not always responsible for his actions. The other young man [illegible] Leon was well acquainted with Miss Goodell. But definite action against them has not been taken yet.

[illegible]

"A Woman's face is a woman's life, even though she is a gay coquette."

"Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

"Beware."

The handwriting has been positively identified as that of Miss Goodell.

Doubt as to Second Name.

The first of the two names discovered yesterday is undoubtedly Miss Goodell's. There is some doubt as to the second name. Some have said it is that of Leon Schillaire, son of A. P. Schillaire, the Northampton photographer, who owns the cottage.

The Schillaires own the boat which was found out on the lake with dry oars, and in which some have thought Miss Goodell was rowing when she met her mysterious fate, drowning or otherwise. The Schillaires and the Goodells have long been friendly, and Miss Goodell was at perfect liberty to use the boat any time she saw fit.

On the night following the one on which Miss Goodell disappeared Leon Schillaire and three men friends occupied the cottage. He had known Miss Goodell intimately.

A. P. Schillaire, father of Leon, when interviewed to-day, said emphatically:

"The relations between my boy and Miss Goodell were only those of a son to a daughter of friends of his father.

"The Goodells and my family are old friends. My boy is only eighteen and never kept company with Miss Goodell. Leon was not at the cottage on the day of the girl's disappearance. He was here in Northampton and in the studio the greater part of the afternoon.

"If that was Leon's name that you speak of above that of Miss Goodell I know nothing of it. There have been several names [illegible] on the outer wall of the cottage."

[illegible] however attach considerable significance to the peculiar writing on the wall. The signatures are of recent origin.

FACTS KNOWN TO POLICE IN THE GOODELL MYSTERY

BELCHERTOWN, July 21.—The known facts in the disappearance of Winzola M. Goodell, daughter of Postmaster Wesley Goodell, who has now been missing fifteen days, are these:

Winnie Goodell was last seen on Friday forenoon, July 6, either by William Kennedy, who keeps a small store near her home, or by William Randall, who was mowing hay in a field as she went along. She was then going toward Upper Pond. From that time her whereabouts have been a mystery.

The next day a search was made for her, it being thought that she had fallen from her boat in Upper Pond and drowned. Searchers then organized and under the direction of Deputy Sheriff Barton dragged the bottom of the pond. Divers were later employed and guns were fired into the water, but the body was not found.

Boat Found Drifting.

The boat in which she is supposed to have been rowing was found drifting a few yards from the spot where it was kept. The oars were drawn into the locks and there was no indication that it had been used. It is believed that it either went adrift or was shoved from the shore. In the bottom of the boat was a hair comb belonging to the girl.

On Wednesday Sidney Smith, a cousin of the girl, found a piece of ribbon hanging on a bush. This is now identified by Mrs. Goodell as being a part of the ribbon used on the clothing of her daughter.

In among the bushes where this ribbon was found there was every evidence of a struggle having taken place. The ground was trampled and dug up by footprints, and the bushes around were crushed and broken. One spot showed evidence of having been carefully covered with leaves as though to conceal something, but nothing was found.

On the Schillaire cottage on the shore of the pond the name of Winnie Goodell written in lead pencil has been found. Over it is an indistinct name, supposed to be that of Leon Schillaire. The police attach no significance to this.

Tramp Seen at Pond.

On the day of the girl's disappearance an excited stranger, believed to be a tramp, was seen at the shore of the pond. He spoke to Harry Thrasher and asked him about the running time of electric cars. It is now believed by the police that this man escaped that night on a freight train bound for Boston. He could not be clearly described by Thrasher, as he came upon him so suddenly and appeared so excited that he was too surprised to note his general appearance.

When Miss Goodell left home she was lightly dressed. She wore no hat or corset and wore slippers. She had no money. At that time she was in the best of spirits.

The girl had a sweetheart, Professor Frank Bartlett of Hampton University of Virginia. He was here only a few weeks ago, and they parted the best of friends.

FOREST HILLS "L" STATION BIG ONE

The new Elevated terminal at Forest Hills square is to be the biggest on the Elevated system and about twice as big as the present Dudley street terminal, according to a new set of plans which the Elevated company filed with the Railroad Commissioners, modifying the original plans accepted a year ago.

The terminal will have two separate stations for inward and outward trains. Each station will accommodate eight-car trains, which the Elevated intends to put on as much as possible. It is expected that the Forest Hills extension will be completed in about two months.

DEATH OF ACTRESS IS LAID TO DOCTOR

Denver, July 21.—Investigation into the deaths of Miss Cleo Spruin and Miss Etherine Brown, the former of Providence, R. I., both members of a theatrical company playing here, has culminated in Mrs. Spruin, who is here, swearing out a warrant for the arrest of Dr. E. M. Brandt on charges of illegally treating her daughter.

PE-RU-NA RECEIVES PRAISE

For Relieving Such Symptoms as Debility, Backache and Headache.

THERE are a great many phases of woman's ailments that require the assistance of the surgeon.

But by far the greatest number of such cases are amenable to correct medicinal treatment.

No surgeon in the world has relieved so many women from the different phases of ailments peculiar to womankind than Dr. Hartman through the use of Peruna.

He receives many letters from all parts of the country relating to subjects of vital interest to womankind.

Of the vast multitude of women Dr. Hartman cures annually, only a small per cent. of them consider it necessary to write to the Doctor at all.

Not one in a thousand of these fortunate women report their success. Of those who do write testimonials, only a very small per cent. are ever used in public print.

While it is not affirmed that Peruna will cure every case of this kind, it is certainly the part of wisdom for every woman so afflicted to give Peruna a fair trial. Her chances of relief are so many that any woman would be doing herself an injustice to neglect such an opportunity of relief.

Mrs. LUTIE WARD

Mrs. EMMA E. GILDNER

Mrs. Emma E. Gildner, 729 Santafe Ave., Denver, Col., Financial Secretary Germania Order der Harugari, writes:

"Peruna has been a great blessing to me. I suffered agonies with severe headaches and a weak back and could hardly drag myself around.

"A friend who was visiting me was taking Peruna for the same trouble and induced me to try it. I soon found that I was being helped and in less than three weeks I felt like a different woman, and in four months I was well. Peruna certainly gave me strength. I consider it an ideal woman's remedy."

Very Precarious Condition.

Mrs. Lutie Ward, 617 Tracy Ave., Kansas City, Mo., writes: "A few years ago my health was in a very precarious condition, the result of womb trouble and general debility. I suffered a great deal and was glad to try Peruna when it was recommended to me so highly. I found it very beneficial. In a short time the pains greatly decreased and in two months I was completely restored. I am pleased to endorse it."

Mrs. Louis Lacomb, Hayward, Wis., writes:

"I have followed your treatment as closely as I could and am now entirely well. We had two doctors and one said that I would have to have an operation performed before I could regain my health.

"We then decided to write you as to my condition, as I had been suffering nearly a year with severe pains and headaches at times so that I could scarcely stand up.

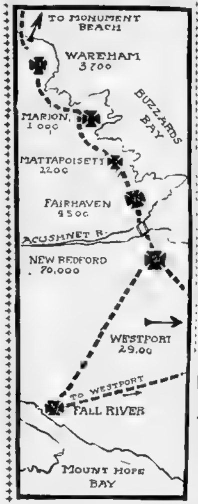
"Now I feel so well after a short treatment with your remedy, and am so grateful that I do not know how to express my thanks.

"I thank you many times for the kind advice I have had from you."

FACE STRIKE ON NEW BEDFORD TROLLEY ROAD.

Motormen and Conductors to Quit Work To-morrow Noon If Demands Are Refused.

ASK HIGHER WAGES AND RECOGNITION OF UNION



Territory which will be affected by New Bedford street railway strike if it is declared

New Bedford, July 22.—Unless the [illegible] averted. The sentiment of the men, as [illegible] the demands of the carmen for money and recognition of the union at its conference with the executive committee to-morrow forenoon a strike will be ordered to take effect at 12 o'clock. As fast as cars are brought in after that time the crews will leave them.

Only by the hardest efforts on the part of the union executive committee was a strike planned [illegible] take effect to-day averted. The sentiment of the men [illegible] [illegible] that [illegible] have [illegible] accomplished nothing was to leave their cars as they came in last [illegible] return to work until their demands were granted.

It was after 1 o'clock this morning before the executive committee had persuaded the motormen and conductors to await the outcome of the conference with President Crapo to-morrow [illegible] with the understanding that if no decision was reached by noon, the men should then strike.

Sunday Strike Averted.

A strike on a Sunday, as the men had planned among themselves, would have been a crippling blow to the company. It would have deprived it of an immense Sunday traffic, people going to and from the various parks nearby, and the thousands of visitors who are coming here on account of the First Heavy Artillery being now at Fort Rodman. Here are the towns and cities with populations which would be involved in the strike:

New Bedford	70,000
Fairhaven	4,500
Wareham	3,700
Dartmouth	4,000
Mattapoisett	1,200
Westport	2,900
Marion	1,000
Rochester	1,100
Bourne	1,800
Acushnet	[illegible]
Total population	91,000

There are also four big parks, Lincoln Park, Lakeside Park, Hazelwood Park and Buttonwood Park.

In addition to this the heavy service on the air line to Fall River, Lincoln Park being about half way between New Bedford and that city, and the largest of all the Sunday amusement places.

There was a rumor among the men at the car barns last night that the executive committee of the union had been discharged from the employ of the company and that other union officials are "slated." If this be so, then a strike may be precipitated at any moment, as there would be no men to take the part of the union in the conference to-morrow.

Organizer Fitzgerald, who has been in charge of the affairs of the union in this matter, said early this morning to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"The company must recognize the union and its demands, or there will be a strike on in New Bedford Monday noon."

The demands of the 700 employes are that they be paid a flat rate of 25 cents an hour, time and a half for extra trips, double time for snow plow work and the complete recognition of the union. This latter has always been denied.

The present rate is twenty cents an hour for beginners and a graduated scale up to twenty-five cents an hour after sixteen years of service.

The company has been breaking in many new men of late in preparation for a possible strike, and the general belief is that the officials do not intend to give in to the men.

It has been suggested by some of the car men that Mayor Coughlin of Fall River, the recognized head of the union, be present at the adjourned conference with President Crapo on Monday, but this has not been settled.

William F. Cleary, president of the local union, said to-night to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter:

"It seems to the union that this difficulty must be settled one way or the other at once. One thing is certain—the unanimous vote of the union to strike will be carried out to the letter unless the company yields."

The vote of the union at its meeting on Thursday night was 100 in favor and none against.

Defence of Slayer of Stanford White to Be 'Unwritten Law'

MOTHER, GRIEF-STRICKEN, SURRENDERS TO THAW

Young Man Behind Bars for Murder, and Pictures of Devoted Mother Who is Trying to Save Him.

Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, in his cell in the Tombs; his mother, Mrs William Thaw, alighting from her carriage to visit her son and examining evidence. At the left is a picture of the elder Mrs. Thaw in her widow's weeds.

Tearfully Appeals to Him to Yield That Insanity Plea May Be Made, but in Vain.

[illegible] Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton. This [illegible] says that Thaw is insane.

Another important document placed in the hands of Attorney Hartridge is the first statement made by Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. It is the [illegible] relationship with Stanford White and details the story of treatment suffered [illegible] which [illegible] drove her husband to [illegible] the grim penalty [illegible] unwritten law.

Lawyer Irritated Thaw.

Thaw, it is understood, felt from the beginning that Judge Olcott was not in sympathy with his story of what he had [illegible] at the hands of White and the [illegible] Thaw [illegible] and his [illegible] told Lawyer [illegible] satisfied [illegible] lawyers were to have nothing to do with his [illegible]

He told his mother that Mr. Hartridge [illegible] any other [illegible] and that the real facts be [illegible] Judge Olcott [illegible] that he did [illegible] above him mentally sound.

Within a few days Attorney Hartridge will have in his possession a joint statement by Thaw and Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw giving every detail of the case. They believe this story, when brought before a jury, will cause any twelve men to declare Thaw was justified in taking White's life.

Mrs. William Thaw, the prisoner's mother, and his wife did not debate the question of what his plea should be when they made their appeals to him. [illegible] to the young wife [illegible] twice in the half hour they were with Thaw in the Tombs to-day. Then her tones were frigid and her manner as cold.

Young Wife's Second Victory.

It is the second victory the wife has won over the sorrowing mother. The first was when Mrs. William Thaw pleaded with her son not to marry the artist's model, who inspired the motive for killing of Stanford White.

If the insanity plea is to be discarded by the Thaw defence, it is not known what use will be made of the service of E. J. [illegible] of Allentown, Pa., who was retained by the elder Mrs. Thaw. He is a legal expert on emotional insanity. He won fame in the Bechtel murder case.

After his mother and sister left Thaw in the Tombs Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw remained behind. She cheered her husband and told him that his decision was right.

THAW'S MOTIVE SHOWN IN NOTES TO WHITE FROM EVELYN NESBIT'S MOTHER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, July 21.—Motive for the murder of Stanford White, it is claimed, is indicated in a series of letters written by Mrs. C. J. Nesbit Holman, mother of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, to Mr. White, and after the latter's death, found among his effects.

Just what disposition is to be made of these letters is not known at present.

Among the first letters, one which is considered of the utmost importance is one written by Mrs. Nesbit to Mr. White. It is undated, but was penned after Mrs. Nesbit had returned from abroad, where she had been [illegible] by Harry Thaw, and Evelyn [illegible] was not his wife.

Wished Evelyn Dead.

The letter was headed simply "Friday," but evidently was written in 1903. It [illegible]

"Dear Mr. White: Your letter received. Will send Florence's letter as you desired. When we first went to Paris and met Thaw, he and Florence quarrelled continually. We were at least, I was—indeed miserable. I expected each day to hear her say we would return to America. Thaw came to me, asked me to sign a paper. The article was that he did not intend to marry Florence. I thought as she hated him so, I was doing the right thing. I do hope something can be done to save her from him. He does not intend to marry her. I would rather see her dead. I only hope when she hears about the paper that her pride will at last save her. Very truly,

E. F. Nesbit."

It appears that in the latter part of 1903 Mrs. Nesbit had considerable trouble with her daughter. Mr. White knew Evelyn at that time and he was also said to have at that time contributed to the support of Howard Nesbit, a brother of the present Mrs. Harry Thaw. On November 17, 1903, Mrs. Nesbit wrote the following letter to White in this city.

Dear Mr. White:

Howard wrote Florence that the doctor here prescribed an electric battery at once for my arms. She was so inhuman to answer that she would do nothing until I gave the order for the furniture. I do not want it. All I wanted when I went out to you was to save it from Thaw, as I was told he intended to destroy it. I hope to be able to come and get what few things I possess, as I suppose she would throw away all my belongings.

I will send to you her most inhuman letter. She should be told my lost health is due to her brutal treatment.

Very sincerely,

E. F. NESBIT.

White Annoyed.

Evidently Mr. White was considerably annoyed because of the receipt of the foregoing letter and he telegraphed to Mrs. Nesbit in words which brought this reply from her:

Dear Mr. White:

As soon as your first telegram came I answered it. I am very sorry if you have been annoyed. I hope you get what you want from the storage.

Very truly,

E. F. NESBIT.

About this time Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit returned from Europe, November 1, 1904, there was considerable space devoted by the newspapers to young Thaw and his companion. Mrs. Nesbit had married in the meantime Mr. Holman and in her desperation it seems the only person she ever cared to appeal to was Mr. White, who had been known as Evelyn Nesbit's early protector. Mrs. Holman wrote to Mr. White as follows:

"The morning papers say Florence is in New York. If the coward won't say she is honorably his wife please try to get her to see you and talk sense to her and have her understand the awful light he has placed her in before the world.

"I am deeply tortured with reporters. My head has simply been splitting for a week. You have no idea how disgraceful this affair is to the Pittsburg people. They drive me wild to [illegible] me to take action, that she is not of age.

"Mr. White, please talk to her. She is [illegible] to her and how she is [illegible] wronged. I hope to hear from you very soon. Very truly,

E. F. HOLMAN."

Wanted to Punish Thaw.

Among the letters White showed there is one written by Mrs. Nesbit, probably in 1904, reading as follows:

Dear Mr. White:

I hear Florence has left New York. Do you know where she has gone? I do wish you would [illegible] punish that [illegible] I do not think it right he should be allowed to [illegible] control of her. He does not allow her to write to Howard or me. She is [illegible] ungrateful. Please let [illegible] to do. I received the post [illegible] order and thank you very [illegible]

Very truly, E. F. NESBIT.

At one time Thaw went with [illegible] to Pittsburg. Mrs. Nesbit at that [illegible] was not in Pittsburg, but Mr. Holman, [illegible] whom she was engaged to be married, then [illegible] his intended of [illegible] daughter's presence in that town. It appears that the mother was annoyed [illegible] of reports that had reached her [illegible] written to Mr. White. The letter is undated, but probably was written [illegible] 1904.

Dear Mr. White: I just received a letter from Mr. Holman. He tells me Florence is [illegible] Pittsburg with Thaw and her reason for going to Pittsburg was to see a lawyer about what I said about Mr. Thaw in Paris. While in Paris Thaw hated me because I would not allow him to speak ill of you. He said it was indeed a pity I had not died instead of Mr. Nesbit, as I was not fit to be her mother. Now, Mr. White, Thaw is doing all this against me because he knows he is guilty of [illegible] treatment of me while I was abroad. Please tell me what to do. I am almost crazy, as she and Thaw have gone to Gills, my best friends, with their lies. Goodbye. Very Sincerely

E. F. Nesbit.

Disgraced Us All.

There is a letter signed E. Holman and written on a Thursday to "Dear Mr. White." Mrs. Holman writes as follows:

Florence has asked Howard to visit her at Christmas time. Do you think it would be right when she is in the horrible position she seems in. She says she is not married. Howard is not a child and he has heard some horrible expressions from the boys at school. Oh, how heartily she has disgraced us all. I am heartsick. All

Mr. Holman feels it so. People in Pittsburg [illegible] awfully and the men hate [illegible]

The wretched beast sent articles to the papers of Pittsburg. The editors would not allow them to be published [illegible] know me. He did all he could to get me to say something so he could publish that awful story he has made up, saying I sold [illegible] I certainly did not. [illegible] to obey and I am grateful [illegible] for it. I hope you are well, and that I may hear from you. Do you know if Florence is married?

Affidavit as Evidence.

Much has been said since the night Thaw killed White about an affidavit which Evelyn Nesbit is said to have made in a lawyer's office and in which she is reported to have stated things concerning [illegible] now her husband. It is known positively that the original affidavit is in existence and that it was drawn in the lawyer's office at the instigation of Mr. White. It is believed that this affidavit, the contents of which was known to Thaw, had much to do with the murder.

Mr. Jerome [illegible] be able to get possession of the affidavit and it will be used with effect should Thaw be tried.

WAR BY MEXICO NEAR, SAYS REFUGEE.

Anti-Foreign Sentiment There Will Force Hostilities Declares Ohioan.

AMERICANS FLEE FROM STORM ABOUT TO BREAK

New Orleans, July 21.—"In my opinion war will break out between the United States and Mexico within less than six months" was the startling statement made by E. J. Mather, an Ohioan who passed through New Orleans last night with his family bound for Cincinnati.

Mr. Mather was a member of a party of fifty-two refugees from Mexico who are fleeing from the country on account of the threatened anti-foreign uprising.

The refugees party was composed of seven men, seven women and thirty-eight children, all of them being bound for their old homes in the United States. The men were all heads of families, one being an Ohioan, two being Kentuckians, one a Tennesseean, and the balance Eastern men.

"The situation in Mexico is alarming," said Mr. Mather. "The anti-foreign sentiment has grown to such an extent that I do not believe the Mexican government can cope with it successfully.

"The Mexican national government has done practically nothing to prevent the threatened outbreak, as far as I can learn.

"In fact, [illegible] According to dispatches from that [illegible] trouble of a most serious kind is brewing beyond the Rio Grande; there is now no longer doubt. The air is full of rumors of uprisings, strikes and even revolution [illegible] mentioned.

"Circulars [illegible] in every public place warn the gringoes that every American found in the [illegible] after September 16, the Mexican independence day, will be driven into the sea. The burden of the cry in the circulars is, 'Mexico for Mexicans.'"

A great strike of all the laboring classes in the country is proclaimed for September 16.

RUSSIAN DREAM OF FREEDOM IS DOOMED

The Czar is not sure that he can rely upon the rank and file of his soldiers if force is used toward Duma members, the propaganda of liberty which has maimed the autocrat's mailed hand may defeat his purpose. The conduct of the soldiery is puzzling to the Czar and his advisers. Cossacks, infantry and cavalry are fraternizing upon the streets. Many are among the crowds which have gathered around the posted notices that the despot has dissolved the Duma. Hitherto the Cossacks have been regarded as proof against revolutionary sentiment. The Czar is not so sure he can depend upon them now.

Everywhere [illegible] there is but one opinion expressed, that the struggle will no longer be conducted by words, but by force.

The Autocracy believes that it has struck in time and before the revolutionists are ready to fight. It is feared by those who had hoped for peace that the next few days will be marked by [illegible] if not by a frightful uprising which will drench the Empire in blood. [illegible] have ever been [illegible] soldiers in the city than are here now. They were brought to overawe the Duma.

GIANT BISON BULLS FIGHT TO DEATH

New York, July 21.—The greatest fight of the year occurred yesterday at the Bronx Park, when two great bison bulls locked horns in the dark and fog and fought, roaring. At the end one went down in death, and the other, bellowing a weak triumph, dropped gasping beside him.

Heine, the victor, has been the outlaw bull of the Bronx herd for a long time. He is an enormous brute, of great strength and vicious habits. He is so ugly that he is kept in a pen alone. He is the handsomest specimen of the species in captivity.

WON REPUTATION FOR TRAPPING OIL BARONS

Pressure Brought to Quash Indictments, but Attorney Says He'll Prosecute.

MUST FACE CHARGE OR BE EXILED, IS THREAT

By Boston American Leased Wire.

FINDLAY, Ohio, July 21.—"I will find John D. Rockefeller and I will arrest him, even if it has to be on his own golf links in Cleveland. To me he is nothing more than any other American citizen. I do not believe he should be shown any more leniency nor should he be treated more harshly."

With this calm declaration to-day Sheriff E. L. Groves of Hancock County announced his intention of arresting the richest man in the world and the head of the Standard Oil octopus.

Short, heavy-set, with bulldog jaws, Groves bears the reputation in his home county of being a scrapper. He is known throughout the State for his fearlessness and his courage in performing the duties of his office.

For his cleverness in outwitting the Standard Oil officials in Ohio and serving summons on them when they sought by every avenue to guard themselves, he gained a reputation as the most persistent sheriff in the Middle West.

The oil officials had been informed that the sheriff was coming with papers, and all officers were in hiding. Disguised, he drifted into the secretary's office and asked for the president.

Secretary Robertson, not thinking of the [illegible] said the president was out of [illegible] if there was business he would [illegible] The sheriff took the papers [illegible] outside pocket and in another [illegible] was served with a [illegible] and a summons of the State of Ohio against the Standard and Rockefeller.

What Prosecutor Says.

[illegible] Prosecuting Attorney William J. [illegible] of Hancock county, who has lead [illegible] against the trust [illegible] the matter is, we decided [illegible] after the [illegible] sheep and leave [illegible] boys and janitors alone. If anything is to be accomplished, it will have to be through the head of the concern. All [illegible] talk about Sheriff Groves going to [illegible] York or chasing John D. Rockefeller [illegible] the country is a mistake. [illegible] will arrest him if he comes to Ohio, [illegible] extradite him, but when you try [illegible] with the richest man in the world you need a mint of money. I don't want to bankrupt Hancock County."

Governor Won't Talk.

When Governor Harris was asked to-day if he would grant a requisition for the return of John D. Rockefeller to Findlay, O., [illegible] the Oil King's return from abroad, he [illegible] to answer the question, saying he [illegible] not regard it as proper to pass upon [illegible] question without first seeing the request, examining the papers and ascertaining the motive.

Seek to Quash Indictment.

There is a report that the Standard Oil Company is bringing great pressure to [illegible] to have the warrant for its founder [illegible] drawn, but the prosecutor would not [illegible] this.

It is not probable that extradition papers will be asked for the Oil King. Hancock county authorities feel they should not incur this expense if the richest man in the world prefers to become a voluntary exile from his home city.

86 TAKE TEST FOR MEAT INSPECTORS

Eighty-six applicants for appointment as inspectors of meat products were yesterday examined by the local secretary of the Civil Service Commission, Edward E. Stebbins, in the Federal building.

Mr Stebbins has received 550 applications for the places, but he believes that not nearly that many will report for the test after having acquainted themselves with the requirements and the experience that will be necessary.

In yesterday's examination 105 applicants were directed to [illegible] and only eighty-six appeared.

MRS. W. R. TRAVERS IS WED IN NEW YORK TO "FREDDIE" HAVEMEYER

MRS F. C. HAVEMERER, FORMERLY WIFE OF WILLIAM R. TRAVERS

DIVORCED WIFE OF RICH SUICIDE

Both Bride and Groom Prominent in Society of Newport and the Metropolis.

CEREMONY VERY SIMPLE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, July 21.—In the presence of three relatives, including her brother, Mrs. Lillian Harriman Travers, daughter of the late Oliver Harriman, whose divorce from William R. Travers a little more than a year ago was followed by the tragic ending of his own life a little later, was yesterday wedded to Frederick C. Havemeyer, clubman, hunter and society favorite, in the rectory of the Church of the Holy Innocents at No. 139 West Thirty-sixth street, at noon.

The wedding party arrived at the rectory in two carriages. They were met by the Rev Father Michael O'Farrell, who performed the ceremony. Mr Havemeyer was attended by his brother, Harry Havemeyer. Thirty minutes after they entered the house Mrs. Havemeyer appeared leaning on the arm of her husband. They entered a carriage and were rapidly driven toward the Grand Central depot.

Both Are Wealthy.

Thus was solemnized a marriage that friends of the twain had looked forward to for months.

The bride and her husband are both wealthy. Both are prominent socially here and in Newport. Mrs. Havemeyer is a sister of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Sr., who was formerly Mrs Rutherford.

Even when Mrs. Havemeyer, as Mrs Travers, began her suit against the late William R. Travers, son of the famous wit, for divorce, it was known that she had the sympathy of Mr. Havemeyer. The attentions of "Freddie," as his intimates referred to him, to Mrs. Travers since that time had been marked.

Tragic Death of Travers.

It was said even before the divorce suit that if Mrs. Travers secured her freedom "Freddie" Havemeyer might be the lucky one to win her as his bride.

One of the social sensations of Newport and New York was the discovery that Mrs. Travers had been divorced for seven weeks before it had become known.

This was in May, 1905. In the following September came the tragic death of William R. Travers, who fired a bullet through his brain in his apartments at No. 156 Madison avenue while standing before the picture of a beautiful young woman, not that of his divorced wife.

Mr Havemeyer is a son of the late Theodore A. Havemeyer and the last of the family to marry, it is said.

WASHINGTON TAKES UP CAUSE OF MEN'S ILLNESS

[illegible] of [illegible] now [illegible] an investigation which is [illegible] certain Boston contractors and may involve a number of naval officers as well. Admiral Evans is said to be determined to go to the bottom of the matter and expects to have on hand to-day the report of the committee of fleet physicians. [illegible] of the committee, said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter yesterday:

"It was bad meat which caused the illness of so many men, but the responsibility has not been fixed. But when Admiral Evans reads the report he will find that the matter has been thoroughly investigated."

150 Sailors Made Ill.

The Illinois is at Rockport and about 150 of her crew were made ill by meat, said to have been bought in Boston, served as a supper ration. The illness was a form of ptomaine poisoning. Only one man was in such a serious condition he had to be sent to a hospital ashore. The rest speedily recovered.

Massachusetts packers and slaughter houses are now under the scrutiny of the State Board of Health and the report of that body gives the larger concerns and many of the smaller ones a clean bill. This it is believed will greatly stimulate the demand for local goods, as the awful disclosure of conditions in Chicago plants has caused public aversion for all the "The Jungle" brands.

But the Massachusetts board of health has found the conditions in many of the small concerns in rural districts anything but sanitary. They will not be publicly named until the slaughter house probe [illegible] over the State.

CHARGE SLIGHT BY DEVENS STATUE COMMITTEE.

Emmet Guards of Worcester Say Their Civil War Record Should be Commemorated Along With That of Others

Worcester, July 21.—Company I, 50th Massachusetts Regiment, known in the Civil War as the Emmet Guards, complains that it has been neglected by the historians who collected data to be placed on the statue of General Charles Devens, which was dedicated July 4. The veterans of this regiment are aggrieved that the committee has neglected to place upon the statue the fact that their regiment was in existence during the war and that it did good service. They have called the attention of the Devens commission to the oversight, and if it is found that there has been a mistake, an addition will be placed on the statue to include the number of the regiment.

There were three companies of the Emmet Guards from Worcester in the war. [illegible] Company [illegible] of the 25th regiment, who went to the front in 1861, under command of Captain Tom O'Neil, and Company I, of the 50th regiment, commanded by Captain Nicholas Power, are the companies which complain that proper recognition of their services has been neglected.

LABOR DAY PARADE QUARREL SETTLED

Providence, July 21.—The controversy over the election of a chief marshal of the Labor Day parade has been adjusted by the withdrawal of President George E. Brady of the Central Trades and Labor Union from the field. Last evening his resignation was accepted by that body, after he had insisted upon such action in the interest of a successful celebration in spite of the almost unanimous sentiment in his favor.

The trouble which arose over the claim of the Building Trades Council that it ought to have had the opportunity of making a nomination for the office, and which threatened to disrupt the parade, is now settled, and next Friday evening the place will be filled from a list of nominations to be made meanwhile.

RAILROAD WHISTLE ENEMY TO HEALTH

Worcester, July 21.—Mayor John T. Duggan has received from the trustees of the Odd Fellows' Home at Barbers Crossing a protest against the Boston & Maine Railroad because it is claimed the engines of the company carry shrill whistles which are used from the time the engine reaches a point near the home until it enters the city. The protest says that the noise is [illegible] and was being [illegible] also [illegible] Mayor a protest against [illegible] in the vicinity of Green and Washington streets, and Mayor Duggan says both protests will be heard by the railroad commissioners at Boston next Monday.

A Brand New Freak Each Day for Week at the W. Y. C. Show

STAR IS A XU.

Wi-wi Is Touted Hard.

[illegible]DOR ALSO

A brand new freak for each day in the week will be exhibited at the coming annual circus of the Winthrop Yacht Club, according to the solemn-sworn statement of the veracious members of the committee in charge. This circus will take place August 1, 2, 3 and 4, and the things which will be seen, to say nothing of being heard, will be fearful and wonderful, according to the same committee.

7 Stars.

These seven freaks in particular are the major freaks. There are innumerable minor ones, of course, but the seven are the stars in the circus constellation.

The Xu," for instance, resembling an okapi only more so. It is not different [illegible] are [illegible] Commodore Samuel L. Haskell, chairman of the committee. The Winthrop "Shag" or "Winthrop Eater" has Gilbert F. Ditmars and Frank H. Becker in charge of him.

'Ware Xu.

Horace S. Ridley will exhibit an unusually fine "Calsode" or "Isosceles Ivay," as it is more commonly known. George Myrick and Vice Commodore Ralph C. Goudey will attend to the ferocious Xu, obtained with much difficulty from the wilds of East Boston.

Edmund H. Hurst and Carle P. Cubberly are training a "Dazzam" so that it will eat from the hand. Chas. F. Chipman and William G. Brown have wired back from Ulululand that they have just secured the only living specimen of the Two-faced Wi-wi," which has a peculiar voice, like some one hitting a tin-pan with a bungstarter.

Is Hybrid.

Last but not least, among the major freaks, will be George W. Roberts's odd-looking Ideo," which is well-known to be a hybrid of the "Widgam" and the "Osettu."

With these interesting exhibits as a nucleus of their show the yacht club men have no fear for its success.

WIDOW SEEKS TO ANNUL A DIVORCE

Providence, R. I., July 21.—Alleging the divorce her husband obtained from her in this State is not legal, Mrs. Henrietta Estes of Washington, D. C., has petitioned the courts to annul the decree, on the ground that she had never been notified of the fact that a petition had been brought.

The husband is dead, but Mrs. Estes has sued his nephew, Nathaniel H. Estes of Fall River, to recover what she claims is due her as widow from her husband's estate.

NAVAL BRIGADE IS BACK FROM VOYAGE

The cruisers Brooklyn and Maryland, with the Massachusetts Naval Brigade on board, arrived in port yesterday after cruising a week between Boston and Portland. As the 500 men disembarked from their vessels off Driscoll's wharf they appeared tanned, strong and healthy.

They were well pleased with their week's sailor and soldier duty at sea. Much of the time during the cruise the vessels were wrapped in fogs.

WEDDING TO JOIN RICH FAMILIES OF TWO STATES

Bancroft-Moulton Courtship in Maine Brings Together Relatives of Bay State Executives.

PORTLAND, Me., July 21.—Wedding bells are about to ring in the union of two of the oldest, [illegible] and most aristocratic families in Massachusetts and Maine.

Miss Helen Moulton, daughter of Mrs. Alan A. Moulton, of Portland, is the bride to be.

Joseph B. Bancroft, son of Eben Draper Bancroft of Hopedale, Mass., is the prospective bridegroom.

Miss Moulton is a cousin of Governor [illegible]

Most Fashionable Wedding.

It will be the most fashionable wedding Portland has ever seen. The Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts are to be among the guests.

The young people have known each other only since the beginning of the year. [illegible] first meeting was in this city at a New Year's ball. Miss Moulton was belle of the [illegible] and Mr. Bancroft a stranger [illegible] promenading together most of the [illegible] and when the ball was over the [illegible] accompanied [illegible] home. Bancroft is a Harvard man [illegible] Miss Moulton [illegible] first cousin [illegible] Lieutenant Governor Draper.

Two years after graduating from the Waynflete Academy, which is Portland's most fashionable private school for young women, Miss Moulton [illegible] has been a triumphant one.

Also a West Pointer.

After a preliminary education in the schools of Worcester, "Joe" Bancroft went to West Point. Army life was not exactly what he pictured it, and he decided on [illegible] He left West Point and took a course [illegible] Harvard in 1899 [illegible] Last Christmas he was offered a position with the Portland Iron & Steel Co. in this city and accepted it. He is now assistant treasurer of that corporation.

Eben Draper Bancroft, his father, is treasurer of the town of Hopedale, Mass., and an active factor in the prosperity of the neighborhood. The Bancrofts are rated as the wealthiest people in the district [illegible] family [illegible] not only the oldest one [illegible] section of Massachusetts, but it has been for many years prominent socially.

After an extended honeymoon, young Bancroft and his bride will return to Portland and make this city their home.

A general conference of the barbers of the State will be held in the Labor Temple, Providence, Sunday evening, July 29.

RAPID FIRE GUNS FOR NEW BRANCH OF ARTILLERY.

Ninety-two Vickers & Maxim Machines, With Capacity of 600 Shots a Minute, Shipped From Armory at Springfield

Springfield, July 21.—The first shipments of the new Vickers Sons & Maxim machine guns, destined for a new arm of the artillery service, were made from this city this week. The guns, which will fire 600 shots a minute, were shipped from Europe to this city, where they have [illegible] undergoing tests at the United States armory.

There are ninety-two of them and they will be used to equip a new corps in the artillery service, being distributed among the thirty regiments of infantry, fifteen regiments of cavalry and the Porto Rican provisional regiment of infantry which comprise the new branch.

The organization of the new corps, which will consist of forty-six commissioned officers and over 850 men, with ninety-two of the guns, is the result of effort by the general staff and Brigadier-General Crozier, chief of ordnance, to increase the efficiency of the United States military service. One gun platoon will be assigned to each regiment.

The gun, with the supporting tripod and three boxes of ammunition, will be carried by one pack animal, and the remainder of the equipment, consisting of twenty-five boxes of ammunition, by four other animals. The new gun can be mounted and dismounted in an incredibly short period.

Test Ballot in 21 Cities and Towns Shows Thosands of Republicans Will Cut Guild.

STRAW VOTE INDICATES MORAN TDAL WAVE FOR GOVERNOR

Popular Movement In Favor of District Attorney Knows No Party Lines, and Is Daily Growing In Impetus All Along the Line.

ON BASIS OF LAST YEAR'S POLL PLURALITY TO EXCEED 10,000

SENTIMENT IN 21 CITIES AND TOWNS.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has taken a straw ballot of 3,718 voters in twenty-one cities and towns in Massachusetts as to their preference for Governor, with their previous political sentiments. This ballot was taken absolutely impartially, without knowing or ascertaining the sentiments of the voters. The total figures show several interesting indications, as follows:

DEMOCRATS FOR MORAN	1,676
REPUBLICANS FOR MORAN	362
TOTAL FOR MORAN	2,038
REPUBLICANS FOR GUILD	1,631
DEMOCRATS FOR GUILD	49
TOTAL FOR GUILD	1,680
GUILD'S LOSS	362
MORAN'S LOSS	49

NET GAIN FOR MORAN—313, OR 8.4 PER CENT.

If this percentage of gain and loss should hold as an average throughout the State, and taking for a basis the vote cast for Guild and Bartlett last November,* MORAN WOULD CARRY MASSACHUSETTS BY 10,596.

Actual figures, gathered by a canvass of citizens in many of the cities and towns throughout Massachusetts, indicate that John B. Moran, as a candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, the coming Fall, shows great and increasing strength.

Of Republicans interviewed a considerable percentage of those who voted for Guild last election have already decided to support Moran. Of Democrats the number who say that, between Guid and Moran, they will support Guild, is so small as to be almost a negligible quantity.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has had a "straw" ballot taken by its correspondents in twenty Massachusetts cities and towns outside of Boston, and by its reporters in several sections of Boston. The method of collecting the ballot was to stop individuals of voting age as they came along the street, without any knowledge of their personality or attempt to influence their decision, and ask them to fill out the ballot blank, which set forth their past political affiliations and their present choice as between Moran and Guild.

Result Shows Trend of Popular Sentiment.

The vote in Boston was taken during rush hours at the North Station, the South Station, the Park street entrance to the subway, and at Roxbury, the South End, East Boston and South Boston, at an hour when the street was filled with people.

In this ballot taken by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, 3,718 people have voted. The tabulation of their sentiments, which appears on this page, will prove of interest to all readers and may appear as the handwriting on the wall to some politicians.

A number of interesting matters are reported by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN'S correspondents in connection with their gathering of the ballot.

Republicans all over the State signify their intention of voting for John B. Moran for Governor, instead of voting the straight Republican ticket, as they did last year. Labor men generally favor Moran.

Republicans for Moran.

At the North Station, South Station and Park street subway station, where thousands of men nightly take cars and trains for their homes, 100 men at each place were asked to vote on the "straw" ballot, with this result:

Park street subway—Fifty-three Democrats and 18 Republicans will vote for Moran. One Democrat and 22 Republicans will vote for Governor Guild.

South Station—Forty-three Democrats and 15 Republicans will vote for Moran. Eleven Democrats and 31 Republicans will vote for Governor Guild.

North Station—Seventy-two Democrats and five Republicans will vote for Moran. One Democrat and nineteen Republicans will vote for Governor Guild.

The Moran sentiment is overwhelming in comparison with that for Governor Guild. The figures show that at Park street, whereas eighteen Republicans have changed over to Moran, only one Democrat sides with Guild. At the North Station five Republicans go over to Moran to one Democrat for Guild.

"The strenuous and honest Moran is just the kind of man the people want," said Former Mayor Charles G. Rutter of Lawrence to the SUNDAY AMERICAN correspondent. "I'm with Moran against the field," present Mayor Cornelius F. Lynch of the same city said.

Tucker Case a Factor.

Governor Guild's appointment of President Dana of the Senate to the bench and his action in the Tucker case are two things which voters throughout the State say will cause him to lose many votes.

"I will vote for John B. Moran if he is nominated," said a prominent Salem man. "I am a Republican, but I do not like the way Guild acted in the Tucker case. I have spoken to several people about this, and I find that they take the same view as I do."

It is seldom that a straw ballot has been taken so many months before election, but, although it is early, the majority of the voters seem to have made up their minds for whom they shall cast their ballots in the Fall. In nearly every case the man asked to fill out the "straw" ballot readily consented, and this alone is significant in showing that the people generally feel that the fight will be between Moran and Guild.

Boston, of course, might be expected to be strongly for District Attorney Moran, but when Springfield, in the western part of the State, shows that by the "straw" ballot ten out of 115 Republicans will vote for Moran, it is easily seen that the district attorney's popularity is not in the least confined to any one section, but instead is generally widespread.

To his "dare" spirit is attributed the enthusiasm for Moran, and the result of the "straw" vote which the SUNDAY AMERICAN prints to-day, carefully studied, clearly shows that from present indications, in the primaries, at the convention and in the election, John B. Moran is likely to draw the largest vote.

New Hampshire Bosses Temble As Churchill Movement Gains Impetus

Novelist's Campaign for Governorship on Platform of Freedom from Railroad Rule Commands People's Support

Keynote Sounded at Concord Rally Disturbs the Politicians Who Take Orders from the Boston & Maine Corporation

WINSTON CHURCHILL, NOVELIST AND REFORMER IN CHARACTERISTIC POS

By J. Frank Davis.

Concord, N. H., July 21.—Like those sturdy pioneers of American history who are the heroes of his romances, Winston Churchill has pushed into an untrodden path and the sound of the first blow of his axe blazing a trail has sounded throughout the State.

Political leaders are watching the picturesque Churchill movement, whose campaign was opened in this city last evening, with argus eyes. Republicans of the "safe, sane and conservative" [illegible] profess to see in it nothing more than an attempt to oust personal leaders, and Chairman [illegible] of the Republican State Committee is out with an appeal to regular partisans to "stand firm and save the party." Democrats whose alliances are with the same corporation whose rule Churchill hopes to end, see in it only a possible opportunity for them to win pickings from the quarrels of the majority party, and are watching earnestly. Members of both parties who wish for political freedom are giving the movement god-speed with more or less openness, as they have or have not Boston & Maine affiliations. Meantime hardly a politician in the State refuses to admit that the Churchill candidacy, even though it may not carry the young novelist into the executive chair at the State House, is nevertheless likely to imprint an ineffaceable mark upon the year's politics in New Hampshire.

In Hands of the Committee

For several hours to-day Winston Churchill and the members of his executive committee sat in conference in the office of Judge Remick, planning and preparing to execute their campaign of education and political freedom. To the committeemen from many cities and towns in the State had come requests for dates for rallies. The independent citizens were writing that they were with the movement and wanted to see and hear the candidate. The committee planned how best to satisfy them all, how to route the Churchill itinerary, how the largest number of people should be reached in the limited time remaining before the holding of the convention.

Mr. Churchill placed himself unreservedly in the hands of his committee when the campaign opened. They cannot send him too far nor too often. The quiet of his home, the coolness of the breezes that blow across the Connecticut to Harlakender House in Cornish, the pleasure of his saddle horses or his automobile—all these things he is willing and ready to put behind him while he goes to and fro through the State, speaking to his people.

He himself selected the watchword of the campaign. It appeared in big type on the posters that announced his opening rally, and will have a prominent place on all the literature of the battle. It contains fourteen eloquent words.

"Return Government to People."

"To put the government of New Hampshire back into the hands of the people."

There are nearly 230 cities and towns in the State. Winston Churchill can by no possibility visit them all, nor can the people of them all gain the near view of him that he and his committee would like. So a mail campaign has been adopted, and to-day there went out from Concord large quantities of literature addressed to the voters of New Hampshire.

These circulars are plain, well printed, simple. They contain a few earnest words of appeal to the voter, the platform of the new Lincoln Republican Club of New Hampshire and the terse response of Mr. Churchill to the platform, in which he not only accepts it unreservedly, but suggests that it be submitted to all the other Republican candidates for their approval.

When Winston Churchill came down from the platform at Phenix Hall, last night, after his opening speech, a crowd of people gathered to shake hands with him and extend their best wishes for his success. A few of these were erstwhile Democrats, a few were Republicans of some prominence, a considerable number were young men but a year or two beyond their majority, men who were filled with the impulses of youth toward decency in politics.

You have probably already read what Winston Churchill said to that audience. It was much the same that he has said in these and other newspaper columns since the movement began—that the Boston & Maine railroad controls the State of New Hampshire, that the State of New Hampshire did not fight for freedom from England to transfer her allegiance to a corporation, that the time is at hand to strike a blow for freedom, and that through this movement the blow can be satisfactorily and definitely struck.

What he said in his speech made a distinct impression and won for him frequent and spontaneous applause. His manner of saying it did even more.

It is not that it is given to Churchill to sway men by flights of oratory. He is not a professional public speaker, nor as it chances, does he claim to be. So there is no reason why his inexperience on platform or stump should militate against his success. He is not asking the voters of New Hampshire to elect a Demosthenes but an honest man. He is not urging them to vote for him because he can spellbind multitudes, but because he believes in the freedom of the people.

And his self-evident earnestness accomplished more toward convincing his audience, last night, than would the impassioned eloquence of many a silver-tongued orator whose soul did not feel the message he was speaking. Churchill believes every word that he is saying, and his audience perforce, knows that he believes it, and, necessarily, believes it, too. Now that is a good asset for a speaker in any campaign; it will prove an entry on the credit side of this.

Throughout New Hampshire especially in those larger communities where politics is practiced as an exact science the year around, the politicians are eyeing the Churchill movement with as anxious an eye as the captain on a tropic sea eyes that cloud, "no larger than a man's hand," that may presage disaster to ship and freight.

Greenleaf Now in the Lead.

During the past few days, in the cities of Southern New Hampshire, I have been trying, with my "ear to the ground," to gather some intimation of the exact situation. It is no part of my duty to make any forecast—the politicians themselves are chary of doing that just now—but any forecast the politicians themselves to anyone whose scope of investigation allows him to interview machine Republicans, machine Democrats, conservatives, radicals and independents.

Of the five candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor in New Hampshire, [illegible] to have a distinct lead. [illegible] as reader probably knows, is a Boston man who runs a New Hampshire summer hotel and his candidacy would in every way satisfy the Boston & Maine railroad. Perhaps he will be nominated. If it were not for the Churchill movement he probably would be.

A machine Republican, who bitterly hates Churchill for having entered the campaign, and seems to have had little political use for him before that event, conceded to me that Churchill already has seventy-five votes in the convention out of eight hundred. He thinks Churchill will have about a hundred. This hundred, he admits, may be the balance of power [illegible] Floyd, who, although "safe, sane and conservative," would be an inferior [illegible] to almost anyone else for [illegible] is especially interesting to the members [illegible]. For the other candidate [illegible] is satisfactory to the road. [illegible] of Exeter. I was unable to find any sentiment in the cities I visited among the people I saw.

Chance for a Democrat.

The fourth candidate, Pillsbury of Manchester, is a reform candidate, he sure [illegible] spell the [illegible] capital letter. He doesn't admit any allegiance to the Boston & Maine, but neither has he taken the attitude that the State ought to govern itself independently of the big corporation and the newspaper which he controls has not yet had anything definite to say about the free pass evil. The Boston & Maine would presumably prefer to have one of the others to Mr. Pillsbury, yet there has appeared as yet no reason why it would not be willing to have him nominated if he developed such unexpected strength that a serious internecine strife might be involved in his turning down.

Politicians do not believe Winston Churchill will be nominated. I am reminded that politicians in Massachusetts were positive last Fall that John B. Moran could not be elected, and that politicians have endured some severe surprises in recent campaigns. If Churchill gets the nomination he will be elected, although there is every indication that the Boston & Maine will attempt to secure control of the Democratic convention in that event to name a "conservative" Democrat in opposition.

If Churchill does not get the nomination the Democrats of the State are pretty likely to name Mayor Reed of Manchester, and he could probably defeat any Boston & Maine candidate, so that the State stands a pretty good chance of getting a better regime, whether Churchill actually is nominated or not.

Wants Support of Plain People.

But all these things are from the viewpoint of politicians—and Winston Churchill is not seeking his support from politicians, but from the plain people, the ones who cast the votes, and pay the taxes, and are the backbone and the muscle and sinew of the State. He is leading the movement to put the government of New Hampshire back into their hands, where it used to be. He believes they will respond to the call, and that not seventy-five nor a hundred votes will be his in the convention, but a majority.

"The only thing that worries me," said a Republican machine man with whom I talked in Manchester, "is this. I'm not fretting about the votes Churchill will get this year, but one of these movements is hard to stop, once it gets going. I'm figuring that two or three years from now there'll be a little row on and this gang that's started this Lincoln Republican Club may get in and win."

That's the story. Churchill would tell it in more polished manner, but it is the same story he would tell—has told, for that matter, except that he is not as cynical about his this year's vote as the Manchester man.

He hopes to win. He believes he will win, a belief based not on a knowledge of politics or politicians, but a conviction of the inherent honesty and independence of the people of a New England State. But if he does not

A Day's Developments in the State Political Field

Lodge gives orders that Foss must be placated, at expense of Lane and Seiberlich.

Democratic "leaders" desperately urging former Governor Douglas to stand for nomination against John B. Moran.

Straw vote in 21 cities and towns indicates plurality of more than 10,000 for Moran over Guild.

Political headquarters for District Attorney Moran have been established by ex-Mayor John P. Feeney of Woburn.

"LEADERS" DESPERATELY URGE DOUGLAS TO RUN AGAIN

Deprecating in interviews the hot weather talk of politics, and pretending that it is altogether too early to select candidates for the State ticket, the so-called old "leaders" of the Democratic party are, nevertheless, desperately endeavoring to induce ex-Governor William L. Douglas of Brockton to agree to accept the nomination again, if it should be possible to defeat District Attorney John B. Moran in the convention.

Several times during the last week propositions have been made to the former Governor through a mutual friend of his and the "leaders." State committeemen who have visited the State headquarters during the last few days have been quietly informed that Douglas might [illegible] again and they have been warned not to attach themselves to the Moran boom.

Douglas Not a Candidate.

The last official statement from Ex-Governor Douglas was given to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN about a week ago, when he said:

"I am in private life and I like it. I intend to stay there. I am all wrapped up in the issue of tariff reform and will do all I can to promote it, but I am not a cadidate for office."

Notwithstanding that declaration and the fact that Douglas gave but cold comfort to a [illegible] that were made by Chairman Quincy and Mayor Fitzgerald [illegible] that were ready made, despite denials renewed efforts were made within a week, through an intermediary, to induce the former Governor to change his mind and become receptive. So far he has absolutely refused to listen to the songs of the old time bosses, but they, for some reason or other, are telling members of the State Committee that Douglas may be brought around to such a frame of mind that he will consider it his duty to run. They have even gone so far as to say to some of the lesser members that they feel sure Douglas will run.

The next most important piece of information given to the country members is that Henry M. Whitney has flatfootedly told the leaders of the State Committee that he will not be a candidate for Governor under any circumstances. One of that State Committeemen to whom this statement was made, retorted with the remark that the leaders were not very anxious to have Whitney agree to run for the nomination, as they knew he would not stand the ghost of a show with Moran in the convention.

Commissioner White has notified Chairman Jackson of the message from Governor Guild relative to the absorption of street railways by steam railroads, and says that it has been agreed that [illegible] shall study the [illegible] at once and furnish Attorney General Malone with all the facts they can find that will aid him in bringing a case before the Supreme Court in equity to test the validity of the street railway holdings of steam roads under existing laws of the Commonwealth.

VANDERBILT YACHT HAS BROKEN DOWN

Reginald De Koven Arrives at Newport Cottage From Rest Cure.

Newport, R. I., July 21.—In a lively run to Newport from Great Neck this afternoon by Willie K. Vanderbilt, Jr., on his turbine steam yacht Tarantula, the paddle shaft and two wheels were broken, but the boat continued under spare engines. New parts have been telegraphed for, and in the meantime the Tarantula has gone on the Newport marine dry dock. Reginald De Koven, author of "Robin Hood," who has been at the Stockbridge sanitarium taking the rest cure for some weeks, arrived at the Derham cottage to-night.

8 CRUSHED UNDER 7-TON STEEL GIRDER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Chicago, July 21.—Eight men were crushed under a seven-ton steel girder which was being lifted up to the third floor of the Knickerbocker Ice Company's new branch building at Fifteenth street and Indiana avenue early to-day. Five of the injured are in a critical condition.

The girder was being lifted by a monster steel crane and had reached the third floor when it broke away from the chains which supported it and crashed down on the unfortunate workmen who were working on the second floor just below it.

PANAMA BOND ISSUE TO BE AT 104.40

Washington, July 21.—Mr. Ayres of the Merchants National Bank of Philadelphia and Mr. Robinson, president of the firm of Fisk and Robinson of New York, who, between them have secured the bulk of the Panama bonds, were at the Treasury Department to-day and agreed upon the price at which the bonds will be placed upon the market.

The figure agreed upon is 104.40 plus one per cent. a year interest.

PLAN TO RUN TRAINS BY ELECTRICITY

New York, July 21.—The substitution of electricity for steam on the New York Central's lines within thirty-five miles of the Grand Central Station will be accomplished, it is expected, by October 15. This announcement was made yesterday after successful tests had been made with two electric locomotives sent back and forth over a section of the track constructed near Kingsbridge.

Incidentally officials of the Central said that electricity would ultimately be used all along the main line and its branches, but they denied that it was their intention to do away entirely with steam traffic.

Mama, be Warned! Protect the Little Ones!

MAMA! Don't be frightened—but be warned!

Every Mother knows, or should know that the terrible Mortality [illegible] children is caused by Stomach and Bowel troubles. Colic, Sour Curd, Cholera Infantum, Summer Complaint, Measles, Rashes, Scarlet Fever—even Mumps—have their first cause in constipation.

The Delicate Tissues of a Baby's Bowels will not stand rough treatment. Salts are too violent, and Castor Oil will only grease the passages, but will not make and keep them Clean, Healthy and Strong.

There is no other medicine as safe for a child as Cascarets, the fragrant little Candy Tablet, that has saved thousands of families [illegible] happiness.

The Nursing Mother should always keep her Milk Mildly Purgative by taking a Cascaret at night before going to bed.

No other medicine has this remarkable and valuable quality. Mama takes the Cascaret, Baby gets the Benefit.

Cascarets act like strengthening Exercise on the weak little bowels of the growing babe and make them able to get all the Nourishment out of Baby's Natural Food.

Larger children cannot always be watched, and will eat unreasonably. The Ready Remedy should ever be at hand—Cascarets to take care of the trouble when it comes.

No need to Force or Bribe children to take Cascarets. They are always more than ready to eat the sweet little bit of Candy.

BOSTON SOCIETY WOMAN IS ENTERTAINED AT NEWPORT

Mrs. James Lowell Putnam Honored by Friends on Eve of Departure for England.

Many dinners, luncheons, afternoon teas and other social gatherings are being held at Newport this week by friends of Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, of Beacon street, Boston, and the North Shore. Mrs. Putnam, who was a general social favorite at Newport last Summer, when she spent the season there with her husband, is the guest of Mrs. Reginald De [illegible].

Many of the special entertainments are being crowded into this short space of time for the reason that Mrs. Putnam is soon to sail for England, where she [illegible] visit her sister, Mrs. [illegible], [illegible] has not been [illegible] ever since her marriage, and her brother, Monroe Robinson, who recently sailed from New York for England. A family reunion is being planned.

HELD FOR $150 THEFT: MAY BE $200,000.

Assistant Cashier of National Park Bank of New York Said to Have Looted Thousands.

LOOK FOR ACCOMPLICE IN OFFICIAL HIGHER UP

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, July 21.—When Edward Frost, assistant cashier of the National Park Bank, was arraigned in the Tombs police court to-day, for the alleged defalcation of $150, it was revealed that not only would the robbery amount to $200,000, but also that other officials higher up were his confederates.

The fact that the American Surety Company, which bonded the accused, is actively engaged in ferreting out the mystery is taken as an indication of the fact that more than $150 is involved. It was declared that Frost, as assistant cashier, practically had full supervision of [illegible] of most of the incoming cash. It was said that the bank's mission [illegible] almost altogether from the [illegible] and that no defalcations of such a magnitude could have been possible unless the thief had an accomplice who held a high position in the institution.

Money Kings Control Bank.

President Richard Delafield and Vice President Gilbert C. Thorne declined to-day to say anything in connection with Frost's arrest. W. O. [illegible], assistant cashier, also refused to give any information. Frost in his cell declined to make any statement. He has been with the National Park Bank for fifteen years. The National Park Bank is one of the oldest institutions in the city. Its vice presidents, besides Gilbert C. Thorne, are Stuyvesant Fish, John C. McKeon and John C. Van Cleaf.

In the directorate are John Jacob Astor, August Belmont, Francis R. Appleton, Isaac Guggenheim, Edward C. Hoyt, Charles Scribner, Cornelius Vanderbilt, George Frederick Victor, James T. Woore, W. Rockhill Potts and Lewis Cass Ledyard.

The bank's last statement showed a paid up capital of $3,000,000, surplus and undivided profits of $2,2[illegible], deposits $97,000,000 and loans [illegible] stocks, bonds and securities $7[illegible].

Laughs at Charge.

When Frost was asked as he was leaving his cell if he knew the bank was said to have lost $200,000 he merely laughed and said, "I am pretty sure that I can show at the proper time that I did not do what I am charged with having done."

On July 16 last Frost left the bank, although it is not believed that he went on a regular vacation. Suspicion had already been aroused, and detectives were sent to his home in Newark, N. J.

Fled From Detectives.

There it was learned for the first time that Frost's establishment in Newark, where he lived with his wife and one child, was pretentious. Inquiry in Newark revealed that the Frost residence was for sale. But when the detectives reached the Newark home Frost and his family had left. There was no one in the place but the servants and they refused to reveal his whereabouts. The detectives watched the house for days but found no trace of Frost. Finally the address of his mother in the Bronx was discovered and he was found there.

HUNDREDS OF ORPHANS APPEAL TO NATION FOR FREE HOME AT FRISCO

Heroic Women Lend Aid to House the Destitute and Open School Doors to Little Sufferers in Earthquake Horror.

By Gertrude T. Bodfish, M. D.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS MAKE ORPHANS' APPEAL NECESSARY

When correct ideas of justice and of economic equality rule the mind and action of the masses it will be no longer necessary to make appeals to the benevolent and philanthropic that a fund may be raised to erect a proper shelter for the young and innocent victims of any great calamity.

The "San Francisco Orphans' Fund Committee" was organized to supply the need demanded by the catastrophe—a need which, under a government based upon economic principles would not exist.

Dr. Gertrude T. Bodfish

The time is not far distant when the young and helpless, the aged and infirm will be cared for by the active cooperation of [illegible] of our [illegible]. The time is rapidly [illegible] when the education and training of children, rich and poor alike, will be along lines that will develop and not suppress natural abilities, when education will be free and [illegible] according to their different tendencies or preferences. In that [illegible] good [illegible] or artisan will not be spoiled to become a poor doctor, neither [illegible] so poor preachers who would make excellent teachers.

When money no longer rules our judgment in the choice of our life's work, we will cease to find round pegs in square holes [illegible], but each man and woman will be free to qualify himself or herself for the position in life each is best [illegible].

When correct ideas of justice and of economic equality rule the mind and action of the masses it will be no longer necessary to make appeals to the benevolent and philanthropic that a fund may be raised to erect a proper shelter for the young and innocent victims of any great calamity.

The "San Francisco Orphans Fund Committee" was organized to supply the need demanded by the catastrophe—a need which, under a government based upon economic principles would not exist.

Open Colleges to the Poor.

The time is near at hand when all will demand their just share in the knowledge of the centuries which now is controlled [illegible] few. The principle of free education should be extended to our colleges, universities and technical schools. Why should we [illegible] or [illegible] partially prepare our boys and girls for the life that [illegible] before them? Anyone who wants a college education or any kind of an education should have the right and the opportunity to get it, and the only obstacle to its attainment should be the disability of the student.

As man awakens more and more to a realization of his kinship with the Divine, when he realizes the infinite possibilities within him, he will no longer be content to feed on husks or accept the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table in the form of gifts and scholarships and other charities. He will demand for himself and for his children the right to his share of all the knowledge, general and special, that is in the world.

Demand Right to Work.

He will demand the right to work in order that he may give due value received for all his training. The argument that one can be educated beyond his station is [illegible] and unjust, for no human being with a desire or ability for knowledge should be denied the possibility of acquiring it.

We pride ourselves on our free schools and on our liberal opportunities! What a miserable farce when we know we have 8,000,000 little white slaves in this country grinding out their childish lives in wretched, inhuman drudgery in order that a few people can ride in their automobiles and have five or six palaces to live in, while the slave who helps them gain their wealth have not even one decent place that [illegible] called by the sacred name of [illegible] free schools? Free education? [illegible] God forbid! Let us call things by their true name and not pat ourselves on the shoulder in seeming self complacency. Not while one child, black or white, foreign born or native, goes without proper education can we call our [illegible] country. Not till every little [illegible] is enrolled in some school can we [illegible] free education.

2000 Destitute Children.

But you say "what can we do about it? How prevent it?" By aiding every way in your power to educate all children that are helpless and homeless, and by [illegible] those first that are the most [illegible] of your immediate help. Two thousand [illegible] and destitute children are without proper shelter in San Francisco, and yet people go to Europe, spend thousands of dollars in frivolous pleasures, forgetting their duty to the helpless ones of earth, the helpless little ones of their own native land.

I was witness to a very interesting scene in the elevated road a short time ago. Two boys, well dressed and well-mannered, entered and took seats near me. Shortly after an elderly lady and a young woman entered. The seats were all taken. One of the lads, raising his hat, quickly arose and gave his seat to the elder woman. He glanced at his companion as if to say "follow my example." Slowly, and with apparent reluctance, the other boy arose, and, raising his hat, gave his seat to the young woman. I could not refrain from saying to the first boy who gave his seat, "You must have had a beautiful and kind mother who gave you the right bringing up." He bit his lip, his eye moistened, as he replied, "I am an orphan and was brought up by the Sisters."

In a moment more we whized by the Cathedral on Washington street. Again he raised his hat with the same manly reverential air. The other boy did not. He had a nice home and kind parents, so his friend told me.

Difference in Training.

This incident set me to musing and wondering, and I have wondered ever since what difference there could have been in the training of these two lads that could result in such opposite behavior, and I also wondered if it were not possible to train all boys to treat all women with respect.

A letter from San Rafael, Cal., written to our committee in New York, tells us "that 150 orphans of the Maria Kip Orphanage of San Francisco are in tents near this town. We have a little food and clothing, but we need money to build suitable quarters for them here, where they will have to remain for an indefinite period. Practically little money can be [illegible] here, and we beg that you give this matter your earnest consideration and appropriate a liberal amount."

It is the plan and desire of the national San Francisco orphans fund committee and its branches to collect all the orphans of the various asylums which were destroyed into one large institution or under one management, and the teaching and training force can thereby be concentrated and expenses minimized for the time being, until the State is able to assume charge.

Draw No Creed Line.

The support and education of these children must be undertaken by the philanthropists of the land. The Christian and the [illegible], the Protestant and the Catholic, [illegible] are urged to unite in this work for [illegible].

[illegible] about our Father's business [illegible] believe in the "fatherhood of [illegible] the brotherhood of man," we [illegible] these children as our very own [illegible] an opportunity to build their [illegible] with the Divine plan [illegible] to lift up the "I" and to [illegible] of the God within. If we [illegible] doing this, let us not call our[illegible] Christian people.

[illegible] continue to get up benefits [illegible] various entertainments and appeal to [illegible] when we wish to do some [illegible] deed, until that distant or, [illegible] rapidly approaching period is here, that period to which we alluded above, when the whole will take care of the whole [illegible] part.

Need 100 More Women.

Many women who dislike publicity are [illegible] getting up entertainments for an orphans fund in different towns in New England. Small garden fetes, tableaux and dramas are promised, but we need a hundred more women to do these same things in other towns.

Will you who read this appeal, help us in our effort to swell this fund? In New York the great athletic carnival, to which we have alluded in these columns, will be held on Saturday, August 4, at the American League Baseball Park.

STOCKS Rally Follows Depression Conditions More Hopeful MONEY

MARKET MAY FOLLOW SIGNS OF GOOD RISE

Technically Ready for Higher Prices, but Money Dominates the Situation.

LOOK FOR BUMPER CROPS

In a dull and dispirited market yesterday, most of the leading issues held firm and even made slight gains. The course of prices was irregular, however, and some of the minor issues showed losses.

Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Reading and St. Paul were the features of the day, each gaining one point or better. They became the market leaders at the opening. This caused an active and strong market in the early dealings, but trading soon fell off. In the ensuing dullness the strength of these stocks continued unchanged. The bank statement was the best reported for months.

The week in the stock market was an up and down affair. One day the list rose consistently, and the next it went down again. There was considerable liquidation, the chief sufferers being the pools. They were compelled to liquidate on account of tighter money, and as the outside public has not been in the market to any appreciable extent, it follows that the buyers have been the banking interests. The buying by them against the short interest was the principal cause of the slight rally which has been the net result of the week's trading.

But Small Comfort.

After weeks of weary waiting, Wall street has had this little rally, but it is a small crumb of comfort. Stocks are a bit higher than they were a week ago and that is about all that can be said of the result of the rally. The seesaw movement of the market merely resulted in a net gain for the week, and it is really a question whether this may be said to be a rally. In any event the outlook for a continuance of the gain is dubious, and some of the leading brokers are already saying that the market has had about all the gain it is entitled to.

It has been pointed out that after a decline which lasted almost continuously for nearly two months it was only to be expected that a rally should come. There was an immense volume of shorts at the lowest prices, and the elimination of a large part of this caused the week's advance. With the market now in an improved condition, the chief question for speculators to answer for themselves is whether there is sufficient buying power to support an advance without very definite support from the short interests. If these have been eliminated already, there would not be enough covering on an advance to maintain an upward movement. Time only can bring an answer to this.

Money Is Easier.

One encouraging feature is the easier position of money, which was uncomfortably firm until near the close of the week. It is now fairly easy, especially as concerns call loans. No great ease can be expected while trade expansion is so general, and yet, as the real wealth comes from the soil, little fear should be felt as to financial resources. Europe will continue to want wheat and cotton, and if these harvest as plentifully as they promise to, we shall be able to draw whatever foreign gold is necessary to meet our requirements. Money on call loans at 3½ to 4 per cent., and for over the end of the year money is quoted at 5 to 5½ per cent.

The bank statement yesterday came as a gleam of sunshine through the dusk of a dull and glowering day. It showed an increase of $8,560,200 in the surplus, which now stands at $19,391,000, as compared with an actual deficit a few weeks ago. The increase in the surplus was caused by the unusual increase of $10,125,000 in specie and an increase of $1,687,000 in legal tenders. These offset an increase of $9,455,500 in loans and an increase of $20,807,200 in deposits. The publication of the statement did not materially affect the trading yesterday, but its effect on the money market it will favorably influence the stock market.

Coppers Unchanged.

Coppers changed little during the week, but there developed a slightly stronger tone and a much improved feeling toward the future. There was not much activity. There is no real indication of a decrease in the price of copper, the metal. It is now settled that the London quotations, by which it was indicated that there had been a distinct falling off in the price of copper, were due to manipulation. The American source of low metal quotations was regarded as more or less a joke. The authentic reports are to the effect that copper consumption is unexampled in the history of the industry. During the week contracts were placed for a large portion of the supply for the last quarter of the present year. The third quarter had already been sold out, so that there is now assurance that the metal situation will remain on its present basis for the remainder of the year. It is possible, moreover, that the era of high prices will continue into the coming year.

Copper shares in Boston were quiet all the week, and some brokers literally dozed in their offices. In New York, however, Amalgamated and Anaconda were active and strong. The decline in the latter during the previous week provided a large speculative interest the opportunity it was looking for to acquire large blocks of the shares. Amalgamated directors declared the same dividend, 7 per cent, as announced in April. This was regarded by many as a wise move. Money that still remains in the company's treasury is always a big asset, and certain sources of revenue which are now coming into view promise a better position for the company to make an increased payment when the next dividend day comes.

Trading Was Narrow.

The total sales in New York yesterday were only 144,000 shares. Southern Pacific became the principal market leader in the dull market, 46,800 shares changing hands. The price touched 71¼ for the high point, and closing at that figure, showed a gain of 1 point. Reading, which was next in point of activity, gained 1¼ to 124⅞, after reaching 125. Union Pacific closed at 147¼, its highest point for the day, thereby gaining 1⅛. Amalgamated reached 98⅜, but at the close was at 97¾, off ⅛. Brooklyn Rapid Transit gained ⅜ to 74⅜. Those were the most active stocks. Sugar gained 1 to 132. Interborough Metropolitan 1½ to 37¾. Pennsylvania, which was very quiet, ⅝ to 127¾; Steel common ¾ to 36, and Steel preferred ½ to 102⅞. Pacific Coast lost 2½ to 132 on sales of only a few shares. Rock Island preferred lost 1¼ to 61½, but the other losses, few in number, were all fractional.

Trading on the Boston Stock Exchange was at low ebb. The market was very narrow. The local copper shares did not reflect the improved condition of Anaconda and Amalgamated. Butte Coalition was in good request on reports of a strike at the Minnie Healy property. The Greene Consolidated Copper Company made announcement of a strike of ore at the Capote. New York bought Amalgamated. Most of the coppers whose prices changed at all advanced slightly. [illegible] gained 1 point, to 21½. Bingham gained ½, to 27⅞; Butte Coalition ½, to 31⅝; Copper Range ⅛, to 70⅜; Michigan ⅜, to 12¾; North Butte ⅝, to 85½; Osceola ¼, to 101⅝; Parrot ¼, to 25¼, and Utah ¼, to 54¾. Boston & Maine gained 1, to 170, and Massachusetts Gas common lost ¼, to 57½.

CONDITIONS FAVOR RISE IN MARKET.

New York, July 21.—The action of the market in the last few days indicated that the decline in the price of securities had more than discounted all the unfavorable things that were known and all the uncertainties that were feared before the size of the crops became almost a definite quality.

The bumper harvests mean too much to the bulls to be dismissed idly as unimportant. But it must be remembered that the larger the harvests the more money is needed to move them. Under those circumstances you come face to face with the problem of whether or not there is sufficient money to conduct actual business and at the same time engineer a bull movement in the stock market. From a technical point of view the market is favorable for a good rise.

The weak holders on both sides have been eliminated but undoubtedly a considerable short interest remains. With the aid of the monetary forces, it should be easy to cause an immediate advance, but the advance is not likely to be of a wild character for the simple reason that there is practically no public demand for stocks.

The disclosures in connection with Wall street undertakings that began with the investigation of the notorious ship yard trust, about three years ago, have been almost continuous since, the attacks on corporations, the attitude of the administration toward high financial interests, the uncertainties of the coming political campaign and the ever present monetary problem, are factors that are likely to prevent a genuine bull market for some time.

KING'S BULLETIN

I want to send my weekly financial newspaper free to every investor in corporation securities—to every person with money deposited in banks or trust companies.

"King's Financial Bulletin" is a large 8-page newspaper and is published for and in the interest of honest investors.

It is issued on Saturday of each week and is sent free, postpaid, to all making written request for it.

It is absolutely independent in all things.

It has no advertising space for sale, and is, therefore, in position to hew straight to the line, letting the chips fall where they may.

At all times, in season and out of season, "King's Financial Bulletin" will be found standing for, insisting on and demanding a "square deal" for investors.

It is the personal organ—the special envoy—of a financial agent who believes that Right is Right—who believes that Wrong is Wrong, whether committed by a bank president or a bootblack—who believes that four cents does not begin to represent adequate compensation for the labor of an American dollar a full calendar year—who deplores the fictitious form of speculation fomented by Wall Street and its apostles and disciples—who believes that the trading in stocks on margin is a broad and beaten path that leads more men and women to destruction every year than any other form of gambling—who believes that banks, trust companies and all corporations should be conducted in the interests of the people whose funds make their success possible, whether deposited in vaults in the name of safety or invested in their securities—who believes that the crying need of our country is a clearer understanding of the rights of corporation stockholders, whether the engraved certificates represent a one-share interest in the Billion Dollar Steel Trust or a ten-dollar peanut stand.

Always "King's Financial Bulletin" will stand for and commend without favor all things in the world of finance that are Right, and condemn without fear all things that are Wrong.

My hope is that the doctrine of Correct Investing, which I boldly proclaim through this publication from week to week, may touch a responsive chord in the hearts and minds of investors, and to the end that I may be able to render the greatest good to the greatest number, I invite personal correspondence with all interested persons, to whom I will gladly send this liveliest and most vigorous of all financial newspapers, free postpaid so long as its weekly visits may be desired. No investor should be without it. Write for it today. Address

Sensational Confession of Plot by Former Coachman Point in Her Favor; Man Says He Was Given $500 for False Story

Attempt Made to Steal Papers From Judge's Desk Baffled by Court Attendant—Guard Children From Kidnappers

Pittsburg, Pa., July 21.—Declaring that the Perkins detectives did make him drunk when he made his retraction of the deposition in the Hartje divorce case, Clifford Hooe, the former coachman, in his statement made to Assistant District Attorney John S. Robb, Jr., declares that the story he told of the libellant in the divorce suit was a fabrication throughout. He goes into details as to how the deposition was taken and says that he was paid over $500 [illegible] different times for [illegible] the deposition.

Made Conspiracy Charges.

[illegible] Mr. Robb [illegible] charges [illegible] conspiracy to [illegible] against [illegible] Welshons [illegible] and [illegible] was made [illegible] on May 22, and it will [illegible] testimony to [illegible] Alderman F. M. King next Wednesday, when those charged with conspiracy will be given hearings.

What is believed to have been a deliberate attempt to steal from the desk of Judge Robert S. Frazer notes pertaining to the Hartje divorce case was frustrated by an alert woman employe of the courthouse. Saying that he was a son of the Judge, a [illegible] young man was discovered last Saturday morning by Katherine Spratt trying to obtain entrance to Judge Frazer's chambers.

Said He Was Judge's Son.

When asked why he was there and what he wanted, the intruder told Miss Spratt that he was a son of the Judge and that he was there to get some papers in the desk. He said that the Judge had given him the wrong key and [illegible] the woman would open [illegible] key which he was sure [illegible] of the lock of the desk.

Miss Spratt told the man he could not [illegible] into the room, explaining that she had [illegible] orders from Superintendent of Buildings Mercer not to allow anyone in any of [illegible] rooms without a written order, either [illegible] him or the county commissioners.

Excitement reigned in Pittsburg for a [illegible] time this afternoon when a false report became current throughout the city that Hartje had committed suicide.

Mrs. Mary Scott [illegible] having her [illegible] children guarded with the greatest [illegible] [illegible] have been looking [illegible] their safety since that time.

FAMOUS INSURANCE SUITS SETTLED BY COUNSEL.

Pawtucket, July 21.—Two sensational suits that have been pending in the Supreme Court for the past seven years against the estate of the late Dr. M. W. Kelligher of this city were settled this week by agreement of counsel.

The suits were brought by the State Mutual and the Berkshire Life Insurance Companies of Massachusetts during the life of Dr. Keligher, and the contest has been continued in the courts since his death. They were to recover $3,500 each, on the ground that certain life insurance claims had been collected by fraud and that Dr. Kelligher was responsible. With interest, the claims amounted to $10,000.

One year [illegible] the plaintiff [illegible] which was [illegible] of others. Negotiations were then opened to settle the cases, with the result that an agreement was reached this week satisfactory to all parties.

REFUSE TO ORDER TAX LISTS FILED

Pawtucket, July 21.—The attempt of Councilman Joseph Hughes to compel the Board of Tax Assessors to file with the city treasurer a full and complete list of the names of all persons against whom a personal property tax has been assessed on or [illegible] July 25 has been frustrated by the [illegible] [illegible] Democratic [illegible] the exact registration of personal property taxpayers in [illegible] to prevent any addition of names to [illegible] lists after the time for such assessments had expired.

LODGE'S GREAT PURPOSE NOW TO PLACATE FOSS

Political Hopes of Lane and Seiberlich to be Sacrificed in the 11th Congressional District.

Promising to issue orders to Senator Daniel W. Lane that he must retire from the fight for the Republican nomination for Congress in the Eleventh District and agreeing that Senator Frank Seiberlich will be disposed of in such a way that he will not bother, Republicans in charge of the programme of Senator Lodge for the Fall campaign are devoting all attention to Eugene N. Foss since his published declaration that he intends to be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Harmony is the cry that Lodge has sounded. The party must have it this [illegible] to defeat [illegible] he has [illegible] workers, and his orders are that Foss and his friends must be placated even though it be necessary to sacrifice Lane and Seiberlich, and any others that may stand in the way.

The Lodge orders show that the Senator is concerned not only about Governor Guild but very much alarmed about the re-election of Lieutenant Governor Draper. The first concession to the Foss element was the refusal to allow General William F. Draper, leading apostle of the stand-patters, to serve on the platform committee. The [illegible] offer of the congressional nomination to the friends of Foss. For several days Foss has been in New York on business, but representatives of the machine boss located him and made the offer of the congressional nomination to him in person there.

Friends Caution Foss.

The next move to make it easy for Foss to fall in with the Lodge programme was to have the Republican newspapers issue statements from alleged friends of Foss, [illegible] to the effect that Foss [illegible] for a minute [illegible] from the Democrats, if it should come to him.

One of the men in closest touch with Foss said to a reporter for the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN: "Desperate efforts are being made to [illegible] Foss [illegible] out of the fight against Draper. The leaders of the Republican machine have promised that he can have the nomination for Congress in the Eleventh District if he will keep out of the fight against the Lieutenant Governor. Of course he is asked to stultify himself to this extent on the tariff reform and reciprocity issues that he will confine his preaching of the reforms to the Eleventh District. His friends to-day sent him a long telegram [illegible] him not to [illegible] to the [illegible] of the bosses but to stand for the larger field of influence, the whole State, where the nomination for [illegible] would give [illegible] Another thing [illegible] that Mr. Foss has never made the statement relative to a fusion ticket ascribed to him. He has never said he would not welcome an indorsement, and his best friends have urged him not to. We tell him not to reject the support of any honest set of men, and we do not think he will. As we understand his position now, he will fight for the Republican nomination for second place and not take the sop that has been offered to him."

Bates Presiding Officer.

The [illegible] of having ex-Governor John L. Bates selected as the presiding officer of the Republican State convention is explained in political circles as an attempt to offset the soreness among followers of the former Governor over the appointments made by Governor Guild, who, it is charged, has overlooked all the Bates men who were candidates for appointive office. The selection of United States Attorney General Moody as the platform writer [illegible] the [illegible] possible from his connection with the administration of President Roosevelt.

LABOR TO JOIN IN POLITICAL CONTEST

Pawtucket, R. I., July 21.—The Central Trades and Labor Union meets Monday night to consider the communication from President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor requesting members of all labor unions to interest themselves in the political situation and use their best efforts to have labor men elected to the General Assembly. The formation of a Wage Earners' League similar to that organized in Providence is the probable outcome of the meeting. [illegible]

MUNICIPAL BAND TO PLAY NEW MARCH

The [illegible] Park City Point [illegible] the Boston Municipal Band will have the pleasure of listening to the new "Boston American March and Two Step," composed by P. F. Damm of No. 35 Olney street, West Watertown.

Mr. Damm believes this is one of his best compositions and, in dedicating it as he has, he feels that he has made a happy [illegible] To-night will be its first public [illegible]

The march is a swinging, rythmic composition that stirs the blood and sets the [illegible] in accord with the measure. [illegible] composition is quickened to [illegible] time it makes splendid music for dancing.

Mr. Damm has had much experience in the field of musical composition, his creations running from single pieces to arrangement and orchestration of light opera.

SCHOOL BOARD AND TAXPAYERS FIGHT

Lincoln, R. I., July 21.—The result of the special town meeting of the Lincoln taxpayers resulted in a drawn battle, with honors divided between the members of the school committee who are seeking to have better school facilities and those taxpayers who are opposed to the proposition. The meeting was one of the stormiest in the history of the town.

The committee asked for $7,500 to remodel the Albion and Prospect Hill school [illegible]. When the resolution appropriating [illegible] $4,000 for the Albion school came up for consideration there was general opposition and the resolution was defeated. The resolution appropriating $3,000 for the Prospect Hill school house was carried by a large vote.

TOUR TEACHERS SEE SIGHTS OF OLD WORLD.

Winners of Boston American Contests To-day in London, Paris, Brussels.

ALL REPORTED WELL AND INTENSELY HAPPY

A[illegible] of the city school teachers who were winners in [illegible] recent contests of the BOSTON AMERICAN are in Europe, [illegible] London [illegible] the last party of sightseers [illegible] at the metropolis of the world.

To-day the teachers who are in the Grand Tour party are in Brussels, the capital of Belgium, one of the gayest cities of the Continent and intensely interesting. The Grand Tourists arrived in Brussels last night from Antwerp.

A carriage drive has been arranged for to-day, in which the main streets of the city, the park, the Column of Congress, the Chamber of Deputies, the Museum of Paintings and the famous Wiertz Museum will be visited. The Museum of Antiquities, one of the most interesting features of the famous old city, will be inspected also, as well as the Palace of Justice, the Grand square with the Hotel de Ville, one of the finest buildings in all Belgium, with its wonderful lacework spire, the Cathedral of St. Gudule, the Botanical Gardens and the martyrs' monument.

All Well and Happy.

To-night the teachers of this party will undoubtedly be happy but tired out for the day's sightseeing of Brussels is in a day means the most interesting panorama in real life imaginable, but [illegible] hours hard work while it lasts. Everything in Brussels is well worth seeing, and the teachers have been looking forward to their visit there with great expectancy.

The party is well, as [illegible] dispatches from Brussels, Paris and London state. Those who were feeling run down after their year's work at teaching and the trying and excitement of the great election contest in which they were winners are now completely restored and as strong as the strongest of the party. Their friends in New England need have no worry on this score.

It is work and play with the teachers of all three tours. They know that they are having the chance of a lifetime in that great opportunity to see Europe without one cent of expense to themselves and everything arranged for them.

That is one great feature of these tours which the New England teachers are taking as the guests of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN. Their expenses are all defrayed and they have a perfect programme and itinerary made out for them. There is nothing for them to do but see the sights of the old world and to enjoy themselves.

Others in Paris To-Day.

Ordinary tourists are not so well situated for they have to make all the plans about going from city to city in strange lands where they have sometimes very hard times indeed to see anything for the fact that they do not know where to go to get the best opportunities for getting around.

The European tour party is in beautiful Paris to-day. They arrived there yesterday, according to cable messages, and will be in the gayest city in the world until Thursday morning, when they will be whirled through the fastnesses of the Alps to Geneva.

To-day and to-morrow the teachers of the European tour will see Paris from carriages which are furnished them. All of the great points of interest in splendid Paris are to be visited. The teachers are on tiptoe with excitement for Paris means everything to them. They are to visit the Palace of the Invalids, the tomb of Napoleon I, the Palace, Gardens and Parks of Versailles, St. Cloud, Sevres and its wonderful porcelain factories, the [illegible] of the Trocadero, the Palace of the Louvre and the world-famous Cathedral of Notre Dame.

On the third day of the stay in Paris the teachers will be left to their own devices to go shopping or sightseeing where and when they will. There will be no formal program for this day and they are planning to have split [illegible] times in little congenial parties.

See Sights of London.

To-day the teachers of the Shakespearian Tour are getting their first delighted impressions of London. They are going to church where they wish and after service [illegible] will be at liberty to spend the rest of the day as they select. They are all in the best of health, the ocean voyage on the [illegible] having been of the greatest physical benefit possible. They expect to put in three hard days while in London and do not intend to have anything of especial interest or significance escape them. They will leave London for Paris next Friday.

HIRED EPILEPTIC AS ASYLUM ATTENDANT

Worcester, July 21.—[illegible] Johannis, or Johannon, who is [illegible] in [illegible] from the Monson Epileptic Hospital and who was killed on the [illegible] was employed for four days [illegible] at the Worcester Insane Asylum, [illegible] Dr. [illegible] Barlow says [illegible] from [illegible] in Boston May 1 [illegible] the [illegible] that Johannis [illegible] the Monson Hospital [illegible] the hospital agreed [illegible] tion [illegible] had been employed [illegible] was kept [illegible] week. It is believed [illegible] attendant [illegible] Monson [illegible] gled, was [illegible] Palmer.

POLICE GET AFTER AUTO SPEEDERS

Worcester, July 21.—Chief of Police William J. [illegible] Stone [illegible] the law [illegible] regulating the [illegible] within the [illegible] enforced, and he has [illegible] patrolmen to arrest all violators of the twelve-mile an hour limit. Chief Stone says that lately there [illegible] violators of the law within [illegible] limits. He [illegible] the police force with a printed [illegible] explaining the law and has requested that they study the contents.

Millions Will Read It, and It May Restore 15-Year-Old Dawn Fisher of Los Angeles to Mary Merrill, Schoolmate

Writing a letter to her dearest chum and publishing it in the Hearst Sunday newspapers, knowing that it will be seen in them if anywhere, Mary Merrill of Los Angeles, is taking this way to find where fifteen-year-old Dawn Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Fisher of No. 625 San Julian street, Los Angeles, is.

Both of the girls, who were schoolmates, have been lovers of the stage for months and both were full of ambition to become actresses. Their every spare moment together was spent in whispering to each other of the glorious times ahead when they should become stars behind the footlights.

On May 3, Dawn, who had started for school with her dog Tray, disappeared. Her father has had the police of every large city in the United States on the search for his beautiful little daughter, but in vain.

"Hurry Up and Come Home."

But Mary Merrill, more practical, has written the following letter to Dawn Fisher and to-day all of the Hearst papers in the country are publishing it:

"Dear Dot: Knowing that you read the Hearst papers, I thought it would be fun to write you a letter through them. S[illegible] and I are still taking lessons (dramatic). We have great fun. We are going to Long Beach next week to play. I wish you were to go with us.

"I was at your home the other day and asked your mamma what you were going to do when you came back from your trip. She said she was going to give you dramatic lessons. I asked her if you would go with us. She said your father and R[illegible] wanted you to have the best teachers. So hurry up and come home and begin with us.

"Winnie said to tell you 'Hello.' She tried to see Peter Snooks when we were at your house. Now, Dot, be sure and write me when you will be back.
MARY M."

"Something Keeping Her."

Mary says: "That letter will go all over the country and be read by millions of people. Dot, for that is Dawn's nickname, may see it. If she doesn't, maybe some one who has seen her will read it and help us get her to come home. I know she wants to come home, but something is keeping her. She doesn't care for boys, but loves the stage."

Dawn's father thinks that she has attached herself to some theatrical company that is traveling. Mary is somewhat inclined to think the same thing, but she fears that her chum is being compelled to stay away and not allowed to write to her or her parents.

WILSON DENOUNCES FILTH OF STATE MEAT PLANTS.

The Secretary of Agriculture Urges General Crusade on the Establishments Outside the Pale of Federal Law

Washington, July 21.—Secretary Wilson, who is bidding for a Government tag on all packing and butchering houses, denounces what [illegible] private concerns vigorously. He said to-day:

"If the people of this country want to be assured that the meat that goes into their homes from those establishments doing a purely State and local business is clean and wholesome, they should enter upon a crusade for a general cleaning up. I am powerless, myself, to act. Quite recently I went through some of those houses not embraced within the federal law, and found them in a nasty, filthy condition, and in some cases using diseased animals. It is my one regret that the federal law does not reach them, but I earnestly hope the State and city officials will look after them as rigorously as we propose to look after the others.

"The Chicago plants engaged in interstate commerce show already a great improvement," continued Secretary Wilson. "Some of those have always been in a fairly good condition, and all of them will soon be in very good condition. The stamp of the government inspection has always been full protection as far as it went. It will be full and complete protection in the future.

"Of the condition of the plants doing a purely local business and not engaged in interstate commerce the less said the better. Over these, of course, the department has absolutely no jurisdiction. I do not care even to discuss them. Certainly I would never venture to eat any of their meats."

DEATH PUZZLE FOR COURT TO SOLVE.

Mystery Surrounding Killing of Rich Widow's Chauffeur for Superior Judges.

MRS. SUTTON CALLED TO TESTIFY AT INQUEST

North Andover, July 21.—The probing into the mystery which shrouds the death of Reginald Stafford, chauffeur for an aged millionaire widow, will be further advanced by the Supreme Court in September. This is the decision of Trial Justice Frye, after the close of the inquest, held in the police court, at which Mrs. Mary Hasbrook Sutton, the rich employer of the unfortunate young automobile expert, was called upon to testify.

Her appearance gave the case a sensational turn. At the first hearing she was not summoned, and it was hoped by the dead man's relatives, who claim he was murdered, that her testimony would give them the clue which would unearth incriminating evidence.

Young Stafford was shot in the home of Mrs. Sutton, who is the widow of General Eben Sutton, by Edward Ruby, her butler. The members of the Sutton household defend Ruby, saying that the chauffeur was found hiding under a sofa at midnight and was mistaken for a burglar.

Advanced Murder Theory.

Trial Justice Frye discharged Ruby after the preliminary hearing and complimented him upon his vigilance. But the chauffeur's mother and brothers insisted that the unfortunate young man was not mistaken for a marauder and that a close investigation by authorities would result in sensational developments. Their statements led District Attorney W. Scott Peters to look into the case. Ruby had left the Sutton home and there were many rumors as to his whereabouts, but when the inquest was held he reappeared to testify. Orlando, another butler, Mrs. John H. Scoville, Mrs. Sutton's daughter, also testified, as well as five servants. What District Attorney Peters will do is a question of absorbing interest to all connected with the tragedy in the home of the wealthy widow. He questioned witnesses at the inquest and said:

"I will go over all the evidence and take such steps as I deem warranted."

To-day's surprises, however, came when District Attorney Peters came in on the morning train, went to the police court and held consultation with Judge Frye. Then the inquest was continued, in secret as before.

CARDINAL GIBBONS TELLS CURE FOR PUBLIC EVILS

Prelate Pleads for Higher Standards of Family Life as Only Preventive of Corporation Crimes.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, July 21.—In an interview to-day Cardinal Gibbons, who is resting in the Shinnecock Hills on Long Island with Bishop Foley of Detroit, was asked: "What is the remedy for the social and civic unhealthfulness that is giving occupation now to so many muckrakers?"

"That is comprehensive," he replied. "I would rather attempt to answer a dozen specific questions, but I think I may answer this by saying that when the sanctity of the marriage tie and the obligation of family relations are more fully realized and religious training in the family becomes more general, we may look for better conditions.

"Dissect these questions as we may, we are forced back again and again to the same conclusion. Moral and religious training in the family is essential, and just as it is neglected do these evils increase.

The Chief Civic Evils

"By civic evils we refer to corporate greed, financial immorality and official infidelity, as in the case of the insurance crimes, and the group of crimes broadly classified as 'graft.' I do not know enough of the facts in the packing house scandals to include them in this generalization, but generally speaking this class of evils is due to a lack of conscience as applied to corporate acts.

"A man will excuse much in his corporation which his conscience would condemn in himself.

"Corporate conscience is negative. It minimizes responsibility and multiplies and magnifies excuses.

"A rudimentary moral sense will keep a man from stealing his neighbor's goods, but the moral sense must be educated to see moral wrong—sin and crime—in the unconscionable acts of a corporation.

"There has been of late a great awakening of what is called the public conscience. This has given rise to much broad, liberal discussion of prevalent abuses and their causes, fixing the responsibility and often disclosing criminality and is doing much to remedy those abuses and bring business morality back to the point of safety. This is, at least, my hope. I believe I can see a decided tendency in that direction.

"Public discussion brings understanding and men who have been blind to the wrongs of corporate crimes have had their eyes opened. They now see much that they could not see before.

"This is business morality. Social morality depends upon something more. The family, which is the foundation of society, is the source to which we must look for its purification. The great crimes and scandals which are now exciting so much comment can be traced directly to a lack of sanctity in the family relations. Until the sanctity of family ties is more generally recognized, I see little hope for improvement.

Foundation Must Be Made Sure

"The principal obligation of the family is the religious education of the young, the importance of which is apparent. With it everything may be accomplished. Without it, we may have great awakenings, we may have a general revival of public conscience, but relapses will come again because the foundation is lacking.

"Most of the putridity of private character, as disclosed in the revelations of courts and the press, grows out of family relations with false standards and without religion and not from a lack of family relations.

"Returning to the civic side of the question it may be asked why, if I see such close relations between the morality of business and religious training in the family, I did not join the policyholders' committee in its efforts to do away with the scandalous conditions that prevail in these companies?

"I was reluctant to decline the place offered me on that committee, but I believe that the questions involved are very intimately associated with great and vital matters of finance. With such I am not sufficiently familiar to enable me to judge fairly should doubt arise, and I felt that my best course was to decline, which I have done. My resignation has been received by the committee and reluctantly accepted.

"The whole matter is in good hands now, and I trust and believe will be worked out wisely."

DYING WOMAN 2 WEEKS IN PARK.

Through N. Y. Police Neglect She Was Left Without Help Until at Death's Door.

DIES ON WAY TO THE BELLEVUE HOSPITAL

New York, July 21.—By the death to-day of a forlorn woman while she was being taken to Bellevue Hospital from Madison square a case of cruel neglect on the part of the police and the charitable societies has been revealed, according to Louis Kauffman of No. 344 West Twenty-second street. He declares that the woman, while in the last stages of consumption, has been allowed to occupy for two weeks a bench in Madison square, from which she was too weak to move.

Mr. Kauffman first noticed the woman a week ago last Tuesday. She was on the bench when he passed in the morning, and was still there late at night. The following days she was always on the bench. Once he saw an aged woman feeding her milk.

To-day the woman appeared to be dying and Mr. Kauffman spoke to her. She told him she had remained in the park for two weeks, as she had no place to go.

Mr. Kauffman at once sought a policeman, but he said he could do nothing, and sent him to a police station. At the station house the sergeant in charge said it was out of his line, as that station was for the regulation of traffic only. The officer notified the Tenderloin station, but nothing came of it.

Mr. Kauffman then tried the United Charities only to be told it was a private institution, with the advice that he try Bellevue. He telephoned that hospital and an ambulance was sent, but the woman died before she reached the institution.

CATCH ONE BURGLAR; OTHER DASHES AWAY

Alna, Me., July 21.—Two men were discovered last night in the act of blowing the safe in the postoffice and general store of S. L. Weeks, and one of them was captured after a chase of a quarter of a mile. The men were about the village the day before taking orders for an article of merchandise.

Mrs. A. B. Erskine, who lives across the street from the store, discovered a light in the postoffice. She awakened her husband and two other men who live in the house. One of the men fired a revolver shot into the postoffice. The burglars ran, one getting away.

DEATH CLOSES WILD CAREER OF PRINCESS CHIMAY.

Beautiful American, Whose Escapades Startled World, Is Reported Dead in Paris.

WED NOBLEMAN, THEN ELOPED WITH A GYPSY.

Starred in Parisian Opera That Led Police to Drive Her From City.

SQUANDERED MILLION; DECLARED BANKRUPT

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—The night edition of the News prints a dispatch from its Paris correspondent stating that the Princess de Chimay, formerly Clara Ward of Detroit, is dead in the French capital. Details as to where she died or the cause of her death cannot be secured.

With the death of Princess de Chimay, one of the most remarkable cases in the history of recent years comes to an end. Although only 35 years old the Princess' life was so tumultous that in the last five years she aged perceptibly. She squandered thousands of francs on beauty doctors and once nearly ruined her face by submitting to have a permanent blush tattooed on each cheek. In the last few months she has failed steadily.

Daughter of Millionaire.

She was the daughter of Captain Eber Ward, a Michigan lumber millionaire, and was one of fourteen children. In her school girl days she was declared to be the prettiest child in Detroit.

In 1889, following a term in a British boarding school, she was introduced to society and met her first husband, Prince Joseph de Caraman Chimay, a member of the Belgian House of Representatives. They were married in Paris May 20, 1890, and there Clara began to figure in society. Clara had a fortune of two million in her own right, and spent it in a most lavish manner. She was greatly admired by King Leopold of Belgium, who was a frequent visitor at the Chimay house and enjoyed basking in the smiles of the American beauty.

The home life of the couple was happy for several years, and two children were born.

Elopes With Gypsy Fiddler.

Then came the affair with the Gypsy fiddler Rigo, with whom the Princess became infatuated, and she fled with him to London. All Europe and American society echoed with the scandal. This was in 1897.

To a reporter who asked her how she could have left her cultured husband for the ignorant Rigo, she replied:

"Prince Chimay was a gentleman, and although I liked him well enough I never loved him. He was of such an icy nature that I felt I could not live with him and be happy."

Rigo and the Princess travelled throughout Europe and they finally took up their residence in the house of Rigo's family in Hungary.

The Prince got a divorce and the custody of the children, who are now with him at his palace, near Brussels. The Princess, although officially deprived of her title, still used it. Her funds were low since the courts had awarded alimony to the Prince out of the remains of her fortune. She once again shocked society by going on the stage with Rigo.

Leaves Gypsy for Porter.

The couple travelled over England and the Continent, and it was three years ago that she met her latest gallant, Ricciardi, a railroad porter. She and Rigo were leaving a train at a station near Mount Vesuvius in Italy. There she saw the porter eating his lunch. She asked him to carry the luggage to a hotel. Rigo tipped him. Two days later she fled with the porter to Paris. Since then she has lived with him on an allowance granted her by one of her American uncles in Paris.

After the angry Prince had obtained a divorce in 1897, the Princess tried to make a hit in the operatic world in an opera written for her by Auber. The police of Paris suppressed the opera, it being too much even for Paris.

Down on her luck she adopted the ruse in Paris of adopting the name Mme. Riquet, the name of her husband's family being De Riquet de Caraman. She lost her great beauty and was driven out of Paris and went to Cairo.

ARRESTS TO BE MADE FOR VIOLATION OF 8-HOUR LAW.

Washington, July 21.—Prosecutions for alleged violations of the eight hour law will be started by the Department of Justice within the next few days.

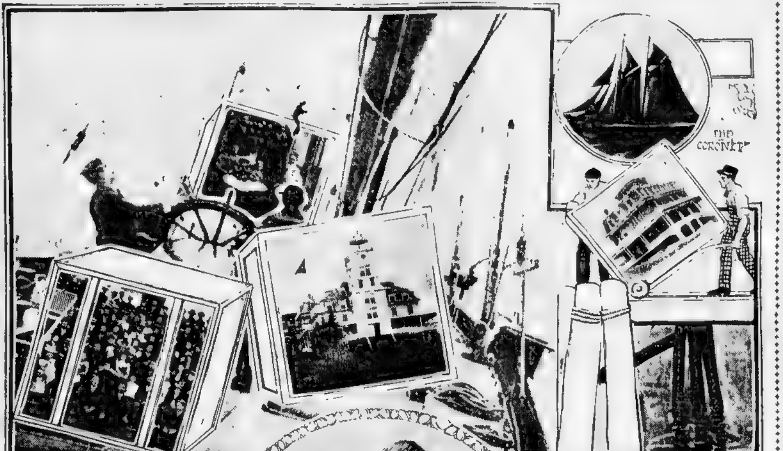
Previous to the issuance of the order by the President that government inspectors shall report violations of this law information had been given to the Department by the Bureau of Labor sufficient to justify the issuance of warrants in several instances. In fact there were so many of these cases that Commissioner Neill of the Bureau of Labor, and who is in charge of the investigation of the American Federation of Labor complaints, had to cast about for some effective means of getting reports on all and thus thought of having regular government inspectors do the work.

Where the axe will fall first will not be disclosed at the Department of Justice. It may be announced, however, that the department will select a case for the first prosecution which will serve as a potent example to other contractors. It is understood that the first arrest will be in a large city, where much attention will inevitably be attracted to the case.

Sing Praises On Shiloh Before Long Voyage;

HOLY GHOSTERS FOR PALESTINE

HOW "ELIJAH" PLANS TO MOVE SHILOH TO CITY WHERE JONAH [illegible] STARTED ON VOYAGE



The picture on the upper crate aboard the yacht "Coronet" is that of the family of Sandford, the Holy Ghost prophet, to the left of the two lower crates is seen a group of faithful followers of the prophet in the picture on the right appears the main building of this strange religious society, and just below is a remarkably good photo of the leader himself, whose pilgrimage to the land of the Turk, in the event of massacres, may lead to international complications; on the dock, about to be wheeled aboard the "ark," like Noah's of old, is a crate bearing a likeness of the Hospital of Shiloh and just above is seen the "Coronet," one of Sandford's three ships to sail across the seas.

Maine Folks Prepared to Bid a Last Farewell to "Elijah" Who Longs for Battle With Satan in Far Away Holy Lands

Shiloh, Me., July 21.—The shouts of religious ecstacy which resounded from the walls of Shiloh tonight were taken by townspeople as confirmation of the statement that the Rev. Frank W. Sandford and all his Holy Ghost and Us Society were about to sail upon a pilgrimage to Jaffa, the Palestine port where the Biblical Jonah began his voyage.

While the praying, rejoicing and fasting was going on shipyard men were putting the finishing touches on the flotilla of three vessels which are to carry the pilgrims across the main. When information from Prophet Sandford was sought he scornfully said, like Elijah Dowie, that all newspaper men were imps of the Devil and he would tell them nothing.

"Moses" C. J. Holland, one of his apostles, said tonight:

Await Divine Command.

"I know nothing of any such plans. Mr. Sandford is guided by God's will and if he should receive Divine command to establish headquarters at Jaffa or any other [illegible] he won't comply with [illegible]."

But Sandford, who is called "Elijah" by his followers, is believed to be plotting the pilgrimage and material evidence to support the view is found in the Wanderer, his big yacht, the Coronet, another fine craft, and a new 500-ton brigantine now at Rockland and under the command of Captain A. K. Perry, who is a Sandfordite. The new vessel used to be a lumber freighter and she is bigger than [illegible] the Atlantic and back twice. The Coronet [illegible] The Sandfordites say she was lured ashore by Satan.

All these boats are being rigged for an extended voyage, and the residents of Durham [illegible] over the prospect of Sandford and his sect leaving their vicinity forever.

Voyage to Holy Lands

[illegible] the colony is [illegible] which is on a tongue of land running into the Mediterranean Sea and one of the oldest ports in the world. It is governed by Turks and there is much speculation as to whether Sandford got permission from the Turkish government to plant a colony there [illegible] to Jerusalem. Members of the Holy Ghost and Us Society strenuously objected to the plan of going to Jaffa when it was rumored that that was to be the destination of the long sea voyage for which the squadron is being fitted out. They said that the Turks had massacred Armenians because they were Christians and that the Holy Ghosters might all be slaughtered, too.

But when "Elijah" Sandford directs a thing, it is always done by his people. The penalty of disobedience, he tells them, is everlasting death. It is understood that Sandford's plan is to convert all inhabitants of Biblical lands and establish the New Jerusalem. His family is now quartered at Jaffa. His decision to leave Maine, where he has been subjected to [illegible] and other [illegible] is believed to be due to fear that the coming Legislature may enact laws which will put an end to [illegible] alleged to have driven [illegible] insane.

Get Fabulous Sums.

It is believed that the exodus will come when the season of prayer and fasting, which began at Shiloh nearly two weeks ago, comes to an end. Fabulous sums of money are said to have been received at Shiloh since the fast was called. The new vessel, which is called the "Rebecca Crowell," will carry "Elijah" himself on the voyage. Shiloh is not to be abandoned. It will be "removed" from Durham sand hills to the Holy Land.

Maine statesmen say that if Sandford tries to repeat Shiloh proceedings in the domain of the Sultan of Turkey he will get into serious trouble, and that if he appeals to the United States as an American citizen this country may become involved in an international trouble. They predict "Elijah" will not build the new Shiloh beyond the gun range of Uncle Sam's warships.

SOUGHT BY POLICE, BOY HAS A GOOD TIME IN BOSTON.

Portsmouth, N. H., Merchant's Son Extends Visit Here Without Notifying Parents, Who Feared He Had Been Lost

While the police of four cities were searching high and low for him, E. Lenox Hopkins, the son of H. C. Hopkins, a prominent dry goods merchant of Portsmouth, N. H., was calmly enjoying the sights in Boston as only a healthy boy can.

Young Hopkins, who is a third-year student in the Portsmouth High School, went to Lynn Monday evening to study practical electricity at the works of the General Electric Company. He left his boarding place Wednesday evening, saying that he was going to Wonderland Park. On his way there he met a friend who prevailed upon him to spend a few days with him seeing the sights of Boston. Not thinking of the anxiety that he would cause his parents Hopkins accepted.

When he failed to make his appearance at the breakfast table the next morning word was sent to his father, who immediately came to Lynn. Since that time the police of Lynn, Boston, Revere and the metropolitan service have been searching for him. Happening to see an account of his disappearance in one of the papers, young Hopkins immediately gave himself up.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF PROVIDENCE GIRL IN WEST.

Providence, R. I., July 21.—Considerable shock has been caused here by the news from Denver, Col., that Miss Cleo Spruin, of this city, was one of two chorus girls whose recent death in a private sanitarium in Denver had resulted in a warrant being sworn out for the proprietor of the sanitarium. It was not even known by Miss Spruin's parents that she was on the stage or in Denver.

Mother Has Doctor Held.

She was supposed to be visiting a sister in Boston, having previously been visiting another sister, Mrs. Wiliam Trombly, of New York. Mrs. Spruin received word from Mrs. Trombly that Miss Spruin had died in Denver and secured the warrant against the sanatorium proprietor.

Death From "Poison."

The other girl was Miss Etheline Brown of New York. Both were chorus girls in the Augustin Daly Opera Company as it was styled. According to the Denver dispatch they were in the sanitarium kept by Dr. E. M. Brandt for three weeks before they died. The cause of death was given out as typhoid fever resulting from ptomaine poisoning by potted ham. Dr. Brandt left Denver soon after the death of the two girls.

Miss Spuin was twenty-three years old and came to Providence a year ago with her parents.

ADMIRAL BRADFORD TO RETIRE TO-DAY

Washington, July 21.—Rear Admiral Bradford, commanding the fifth division of cruisers of the Atlantic fleet, which has been cruising with midshipmen from the Naval Academy abroad, will haul down his flag from the flagship Minneapolis tomorrow, and be placed on the retired list, having reached the age limit of 62 years.

ACCUSED FORGER CAPTURED AFTER EXCITING RUN.

Lynn Man, Charged With Passing Worthless Paper, Tells Police That Poverty Drove Him to Risk Liberty for Funds

After an exciting chase through the crowded business sections of Lynn, William Carroll, twenty-eight years of age, living at No. 44 Brownville avenue, Lynn, was arrested last night on a charge of forgery.

James Brown, a clerk in the provision store of Frank Richardson, one of the merchants victimized, who led in the pursuit, overtook Carroll near the Union station in Central square and turned him over to Officer Russell, who was bringing up the rear. The police say Carroll confessed and asked that he be allowed to repay the amounts that he had received.

He is charged with forging the name of G. W. Dearborn, a prominent contractor in this city, to two checks drawn on the Lynn National Bank for $5 and $4. The first check was passed upon Benjamin Musofsky of No. 72 Pearl street and the second on Frank Richardson of No. 403 Essex street.

Carroll was taken to the police station but was later released in $300 bonds. He is well known in East Lynn, where he was employed in a shoe factory. He is married and has one child. Lack of work and the necessity of caring for his family are the reasons given by him for his forgery.

KIMONA ABLAZE, GIRL BADLY BURNED

While trying to extinguish a fire in the lace curtains, which had been caused by the wind blowing them against the lighted gas, Miss Hattie Forbs, a lodger at No. 1658 Washington street, was badly burned last night about the hands and arms.

Miss Forbs was lying on a couch in her rom when the curtain caught fire. While attempting to pull them from the poles her kimona became ablaze. Grabbing a blanket from the bed, she hastily wraped it about her, not, however, before she was severely burned. She was treated at her home.

POSTPONE FETE FOR CONSUMPTIVES FOURTH TIME.

Rain Again Interferes With Plans of Young Ladies' Charitable Association—To Be Held To-morrow Night

For the fourth time this season the lawn party given by the Young Ladies' Charitable Association in aid of the Free Home for Consumptives, No. 428 Quincy street, Dorchester, has been postponed. Unless the weather again interferes with the plans made the party will be held tomorrow evening. "Watch the posters on the cars," the association announces.

Rain on previous dates set has damaged the decorations to a great extent, so that with the loss entailed by the organization in having to pay for the refreshments, the Home has suffered financially. The only hope of the association now is that there will be a large attendance Monday evening. Already over 600 tickets have been sold.

In spite of the rains, the beautiful grounds and orchards of the estate will be transformed into a fairyland. Hundreds of lanterns of every description, illuminated and [illegible] and artistically decorated lamps, in the glare of colored calciums, will present a dazzling aerial splendor.

The Mayor and members of the city government, Legislature and press will be entertained in the Administration Building by Miss Elizabeth A. Power, president of the home.

For her there will be a bower of roses, the gift of Miss Mary Amory.

The announcement of a Spiritualist that the strange rappings tell of a murder done long ago has stirred all Newport as never before.

SHOT HIMSELF AS WIFE PLEADS TO "MAKE-UP."

Haverhill, July 21.—Pearl Edgar Noble shot himself late this afternoon because his wife insisted upon her right to correct his nephew. Noble is well known in this city. At his home on Pilling street this [illegible] Noble [illegible] when his wife disciplined his nephew. Later, when Mrs. Noble entreated him to "make up" and forget their tiff, he answered, "Yes, I'll make up for good." Whereupon he drew a revolver from his pocket and fired at his heart. The bullet tore a hole through his body. He is dying at the Hale Hospital.

BRINGS NEW STYLES FROM OLD WORLD

Having practically concluded a six weeks tour through the great fashion centres of the Old World, during which he had made an exhaustive study of ladies' wearing apparel, R. E. Lidstone of this city is about to return. He is expected back on August 2. Mr. Lidstone is merchandise manager and buyer for L. Starr & Co., the Winter street women's finery house. The result of his trip will be evident at the early Fall opening of this concern, as he brings with him many beautiful gowns, as well as countless patterns and ideas.

FISHER HELD FOR ROBBING PHYSICIAN

Denouncing his accuser with having invented a robbery story, Frank Fisher, of No. 1034 Washington street, was held in the Municipal Court yesterday in $2,000 for the grand jury on a charge of having robbed Dr. Luther O. Whitman, of No. 118 Mount Vernon street of a gold watch and fob and fifty cents in money.

Dr. Whitman told the court that after invading his apartments and robbing him last Thursday evening, Fisher demanded that the doctor meet him at the Touraine next day and hand him over $50 under penalty of future violence. He kept the appointment and Fisher was arrested. Fisher stoutly declared his innocence.

Mr. O'Reilly [illegible] called attention to the fact that Marshall P. Clark, formerly an assistant district attorney, was in court without explaining the reason of his presence. The counsel for the accused said it was well known Mr. Clark was [illegible] by John Jacob Astor.

John Jacob Astor Interested.

Mrs. Corwin is known to have told many persons that most of her jewels were [illegible] from John Jacob Astor.

Mrs. Corwin has not seen Mr. Astor for some time. She occupied a cottage on the [illegible] at Newport the season before last, when Mr. Astor frequently took her riding in his automobile. But before the season was over she was asked to surrender [illegible]

During his argument Mr. O'Reilly read a statement prepared by Mrs. McVetty covering the events preceding the "Loss" of the [illegible]. Mrs. McVetty says:

At Farewell Party.

"On Thursday, July 12, Mrs. Corwin called on me at 7:30 P. M. and with Mr. King and Nettie Burns we went to Burns's [illegible] for dinner. An hour later Mrs. [illegible] to my home, No. 253 [illegible] street, and lay on the [illegible] we dressed for the farewell party [illegible] 10 o'clock. Champagne Afterwards.

We [illegible] champagne and [illegible] told the chauffeur Mrs. Corwin would not need the cab again and he drove away. I then went upstairs to my room, where Mrs. Corwin and I lay down together."

Mrs. McVetty has no recollection of anything that happened after lying down, after the party, until about 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

Attorney O'Reilly, representing Mrs. McVetty and King, refused to proceed with the [illegible], informing Magistrate [illegible] of the [illegible] that a short affidavit [illegible] prisoner was illegal when the complainant was present in court.

Magistrate Mayo held both King and Mrs. McVetty for further examination Monday [illegible] bail of each at $5,000 [illegible] to furnish this bail [illegible] to the Tombs.

HOODLUMS FIGHT; WRECK POOL ROOM

Half a dozen half-drunken hoodlums started a rough house last night in Russian Joe Buzewich's pool room at No. 328 West Broadway and precipitated a good-sized riot in which clothes were torn and faces badly disfigured, but nobody was hurt seriously enough to call for treatment in a hospital.

By common impulse the rioters adjourned from the pool room to the street, where hostilities were continued until somebody sent in a call for the police. As the patrol wagon dashed down the street the fighters fled, and the only thing to remind the police that a fierce battle had been fought in and outside Russian Joe's place was a disreputable assortment of battered derbies and fake panamas, broken furniture, splintered cues and a few plate glass windows with cues sticking in them.

WON'T TAKE BACK STRIKING PORTERS

In no event will the thirty negro porters who, yesterday, went on a strike at the City Hospital be given back their former positions, is the declaration last night of Hiram Mackay, steward at the hospital.

The men had been receiving $1 a day and one meal for their services, and they asked for a raise of fifty cents a day, but were refused, and, yesterday morning, they quit in a body.

Late last night, five new men were hired to fill the places of the strikers and Mackay declares that before Monday more than enough men will have been [illegible]

Berlin, July 22.—The official report of the government concerning the result of the war against the native rebels in German Southwest Africa contains appalling details of the campaign of extermination which has been carried on by the German commander there.

QUEEN READS LIPS OF MRS. LONGWORTH

Congressman's Wife Receives Hint That Alexandra's Deafness Makes Her Sensitive.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—The American correspondent has learned that the audience granted by Queen Alexandra to Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth was entirely private [illegible] Only the Hon. Charlotte Knollys, always called "Chatty" by the Queen, and Lady Alice Stanley were present.

The Queen received the visitors in her boudoir, and what delighted Her Majesty particularly about the President's daughter was her distinct speech.

The Queen is far deafer than she was even a few years ago, and Miss Knollys had hinted beforehand to Mrs. Longworth to move her lips carefully when talking without raising her voice too much.

Shouting annoys the Queen intensely, as she is very sensitive about her affliction.

The Queen asked innumerable questions about America, and especially about the daily life of the President.

All sorts of photographs and souvenirs never shown to [illegible] visitors were brought out for Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Longworth.

Altogether the audience, which became a very informal tea party, lasted over an hour and a half.

Rushing Across the Belgian Line Found to Contain $1,500 Worth of Cigars.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, July 21.—Smuggling by automobile has been attempted on the Belgian frontier, but has failed through the clever shooting of a French customs officer.

An automobile coming from Belgium rushed through the little frontier village of Guinonpoint, disregarding the order to stop from the customs officials. Two officers pursued the machine on bicycles, and one of them succeeded in puncturing the tires with shots from his revolver.

The crippled car had to stop, but before the officers could reach it the occupants had escaped. Its contraband consisted of $1,500 worth of tobacco and cigars, which the officials confiscated, together with the 24 horsepower automobile, valued at $1,200.

Kaid Maclean, the commander of the Sultan's bodyguards, is also ill. He is suffering [illegible] fever.

WORLD-WIDE GRIEF MARKS MOURNING FOR LADY CURZON

AMERICAN WIFE OF BRITISH VICEROY WHOSE DEATH IS MOURNED BY MANY NATIONS

India, England and America Join in Condolences of 'Great White Lady' Who Won Honors as Vicereine.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—Grief over the death of Lady Curzon is growing and it is said at the American Embassy here that she is probably the only American woman whose demise caused world-wide mourning.

The United States, England and India share the grief. America was the land of her birth, England the home of her adoption and India the vast empire where she [illegible] honors.

"I never knew how great a woman Mary [illegible]," said her mother, "until I saw her riding on an elephant at the Durbar."

Won Native Hearts

The Durbar was the greatest festival ever given by India to honor its foreign rulers, and during the stupendous fete, in which the wealth of oriental display made it seem enchantment, Lady Curzon, wife of the Viceroy, won the native heart.

The Indian princes have the longest lineage and the greatest wealth of any rulers in the world, and they are the proudest and most suspicious. But they yielded, as if touched by magic, to the grace, beauty and adaptability of the fair American who [illegible] their Queen. The great moguls of the [illegible] have all sent telegrams of condolence to Lord Curzon. Their myriad subjects have bowed their heads because "the Great White Lady" is no more.

Lady Curzon held honors in the British Empire that have gone to no other American and have been attained by few that were British born. But her rare tact allayed jealousy and she gained a social popularity no less than her royal glory. It helped her husband to the loftiest heights.

No English woman who was ever Vicereine in India gained such homage from her subjects and one maharaja said when told she was the daughter of a very rich but private citizen:

"I know now what is meant by sovereign American."

G. B. SHAW ESSAYS THE BALLOON CURE

Goes Up in the Air Two Miles and Astonishes Society With Starched Shirt.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—George Bernard Shaw has taken the latest fashionable "cure"—the balloon cure. The aerial treatment for nerves, which Aeronaut Spencer says is the most rapid cure ever invented, was tried by the British Ibsen in company with a party of players from the Court Theatre.

The balloon made an ascent of nearly two miles and descended at Cobham, in Surrey.

Mr. Shaw caused a mild sensation the previous evening at the fashionable Bath Club, where a society swimming contest was held. For the first time probably in his life the "Shadow of Shakespeare" wore a "boiled shirt." Hitherto he has always worn soft fronted shirts, denouncing starch as "white mud."

HAIR MARKET BOOMS.

Limoges, July 21.—The annual Hair Fair has just taken place, and a notable feature of the event was the greatly increased price fetched by the goods. Peasant girls are beginning to show an increasing reluctance to part with their locks, and hair dealers say if they continue at the present rate in a few years it will become necessary to form companies which will hire women to [illegible] hair for the market.

CONFERENCE OF NATIONS AT RIO.

Third Gathering of Representatives of American Republics Opens To-morrow.

MANY PROBLEMS FOR DELEGATES TO SOLVE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Rio Janeiro, July 21.—The Third International American Conference, which will be called to order here Monday, is destined, in the opinion of publicists, to have a most important bearing on the future of the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

The programme is equal in importance to that which was laid before any of the preceding gatherings. Injected into this programme, after it had been practically completed at a preliminary meeting of an international committee held in Washington last Winter, was one [illegible] that is perhaps likely to give rise to more controversy and excite more feeling and is generally of greater importance than any other article.

Force in Collection of Debts.

This concerns the International Drago Doctrine itself an outgrowth of [illegible] famous dictum, involving the right of a nation to use force in the collection from other nations of public debts.

Reorganization of the Bureau of American Republics so as to greatly enlarge the usefulness of that institution is the very first article of the programme. It is proposed to erect a magnificent [illegible] in Washington for its accommodation, to open a commercial museum [illegible] with, and, a suggestion based largely upon Latin American suspicion, to limit the life of the bureau to a ten-year period.

Naturalization Problem.

The conference is to endeavor to limit the period—it is suggested to two years—within which a naturalized citizen may remain in the country of his nativity without forfeiting his naturalization.

The delegates from the United States to the conference are:

William I. Buchanan of Buffalo, chairman; Tulio Larrinaga, commissioner from Porto Rico to the United States Congress; Professor L. S. Rowe of the University of Pennsylvania; Van Leer Polk of Tennessee; Professor Paul S. Reinsch of the University of Wisconsin; Andrew J. Montague, former governor of Virginia. Charles R. Dean, secretary.

'BORDEREAU' DREYFUS MYTH.

Casimir-Perier Still Further Adds to Discomfiture of Captain's Persecutors.

MERCIER SILENT UNDER NATION'S INDIGNATION

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, July 21.—Something akin to "poetic justice" marks the end of the new revision of the Dreyfus case. Those who backed Dreyfus's persecutor and took his assurance respecting the victims, are now turning upon him furiously, and what is worse contemptuously, for the further proofs which, as he always alleged, he had in his possession. This indignation has been caused by the terrible exposures of the plot, made in the speeches of M. Moras, the Procurator General Baudouin, and M. Mornard.

As General Mercier always declared that he could produce [illegible] conclusive proofs never submitted [illegible] to the judges, but held in reserve by himself, he is now asked by his former supporters to publish them.

Because "He Has None."

But the General is silent. All he does is to reaffirm [illegible] to the [illegible] the [illegible] honor of his colleagues in the [illegible] and to protest against the violent [illegible] of MM. Moras, Baudouin and Mornard. As the Libre Parole, the General's valiant ally in the persecution says, bluntly, remarks that the General possibly does not, since his proofs, for the sufficient reason that he has none, that his proofs are as "unreal as the contents of [illegible]."

General Mercier's challenge that he should be confronted with MM. Casimir-Perier and Charles Dupuy has been answered. The Gil Blas published a deposition by M. Casimir-Perier declaring that the famous bordereau said to have been annotated by Emperor William was only a myth.

No "Historic Night."

M. Casimir-Perier declares that his resignation of the presidency of the French Republic had nothing to do with the Dreyfus affair, that the "historic night" referred to by General Mercier never existed, and that he would recall the "tragic moments" of which General Mercier has spoken if they existed. He affirms that at the end of December he only knew about the Dreyfus affair what General Mercier had told him, and that before January he saw Count Munster, the German Ambassador, who urged him to declare that the German embassy was not implicated in the affair.

A PEACE SIGNED IN CENTRAL AMERICA.

Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras Agree Upon Conclusion of Hostilities.

UNITED STATES AND MEXICO GIVEN THANKS

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

San Jose Guatemala, July 21.—A treaty of peace between Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras was signed yesterday on board the United States cruiser Marblehead, on the high seas off the Guatemalan coast. The peace commissioners of Guatemala were landed later. The commissioners of Salvador and Honduras were landed at Acajutla early to-day. The members of the American legations will land at the respective points where they are accredited.

There was a strenuous discussion and some difficulty in reaching mutually acceptable conditions. The Mexican minister, Senor Gamboa, was active in assisting to bring about an agreement. The commissioners adopted resolutions thanking the President of the United States and Mexico for their intervention. Guatemala's territory is now free from invaders.

Revolution Began in May.

The Central American war, which bade fair to involve four or more republics in addition to the two originally concerned, Salvador and Guatemala, began in May with the departure of expeditions from Salvador to assist a Guatemalan revolution under the leadership of General Toledo. The peace articles are:

1.—Peace established, withdrawal of armies within three days; disarmament in eight days.

2.—Exchange of prisoners; the release of political prisoners; general amnesty recommended.

3.—Vigilance of emigrants in order to prevent abuse of asylum.

Arbitration Established.

4.—To negotiate treaty of friendship commerce and navigation within two months.

5.—Any difficulty over treaty and all future concrete complaints between the three countries shall be submitted to arbitration by the President of the United States and the President of Mexico.

6.—This treaty made with the moral sanction of the mediating nations and others assisting at the conference namely Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

12 SLAIN, 35 HURT; FIGHT AT LISBON.

Soldiers Seeking Rescue of Two Prisoners Open Fire on Police Station.

MILITARY AUTHORITIES PUT END TO BATTLE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Lisbon, July 22.—In a battle last night between the men of the Fourth Royal Portuguese Infantry Regiment and the municipal police of Lisbon twelve soldiers and police were killed and thirty five wounded. The engagement resulted from the arrest by the police of two infantrymen of the Fourth Regiment. The arrests were made in the street, and the policemen, instead of turning their prisoners over to the military authorities, locked them up in the central police station.

When word reached the military barracks of what had occurred, the regiment to which the men belonged turned out and double quicked to the police station, carrying rifles and cartridge belts. When release of the soldiers was refused they opened fire on the police station, while the police responded with revolvers.

Unable to obtain the surrender of their comrades by this means of attack the soldiers attempted to rush the police station. They battered at the doors, but the locks held. While thus exposed to the revolver fire from the station house windows, many soldiers were killed, and wounded.

Finding their efforts futile, the attacking forces sent for artillery to bombard the police station. In the meantime a continuous rifle fire was kept up.

The military authorities were notified and sent two regiments of infantry and a squadron of cavalry who restored order.

EDWARD'S SALE OF ETCHINGS DENOUNCED.

England Humiliated Because Windsor Castle Treasures Go to America.

ACTION IS CALLED BAD EXAMPLE TO YOUNG MEN

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—While the fact that King Edward had sold a number of valuable etchings from the Windsor Castle galleries to an American purchaser was cabled to the New York American two months ago, so loyal are the London papers that not one of them has commented on the strange transaction.

But Reynolds's newspaper, a radical weekly, has now caught up with the news, and expresses its indignation over the transaction in the following unsparing fashion:

"The King has lately been responsible for a transaction that his most ardent admirers will find it difficult to excuse. When a young man, heir to an ancient estate, lives so extravagantly that he has to sell family heirlooms, his action is regarded as disgraceful. When these heirlooms are art treasures, which are sent to a foreign country, the youth is universally execrated, and such conduct is so strongly objected to that in some lands there is a law to prevent the heirlooms being sent abroad.

"Now King Edward cannot plead youth as an excuse. One would think his income enough even for an extravagant man. As heir to the greatest name and estate in England, some people not altogether unreasonably expect him to set an example for his aristocracy.

"With all this responsibility, with no excuse, either of youth or insufficient income, the King of Great Britain and Emperor of India has sold some of the art treasures from Windsor Castle. To make the humiliation for England the more complete, a large number of them have been bought by an American millionaire, and have crossed the Atlantic never to return.

"The sale of these beautiful prints would be more easily excused if their owner had no love for the beautiful. But the gentleman responsible for this sale has ever shown a keen appreciation for beauty. The malicious might even suggest that the whole transaction had been caused by his admiration for the beauties of the present rather than of the past."

NOBLE LADIES EDITORS OF 'THRONE.'

British High Society Paper Edited by Duchesses and Countesses.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—Society, with a large and patrician S, now has a weekly publication of its own. It is called The Throne and is a most ornate publication, with Princesses, Duchesses and Countesses as editors.

The paper has over thirty editors. In Society with a capital S it was quite impossible to have only one editor, so all the contributors have been made editors, and the heart rendings have been avoided. Among these distinguished journalists are Princess Christian, the Duchess of Somerset, Lady Victoria Manners, Susan, Countess of Malmesbury, Dowager Countess of Dudley, Dowager Countess of Cottenham, Countess of Lettor[illegible], Lady Archibald Campbell, Viscountess G[illegible], Lady Montagu of Beaulieu, Lady A[illegible], Lady Helen Forbes, Lady Augusta [illegible], Hon. Lady Bellingham, Hon. Mrs. Anstruther, Hon. Syb[illegible] Leigh, Lady Palmer, Lady Susan York, the Ranee of Sarawak, Lady Broome, Princess Henry of Pless, la Princess de Messagne, the Marchese di Consentine and a dozen other persons of less distinguished titles.

The vulgar public was considerately given an opportunity of seeing the first number, which was sold at the newspaper stands for a shilling. The following numbers, however, are not available except to yearly subscribers at fifteen dollars, each per year. It is currently reported that even the subscribers will be regarded with a social microscope before their names will be finally permitted to remain on the subscription lists. The new publication typographically is a handsome affair, but with such a staff of editors the letter press is surprisingly disappointing. The secrets of courts and the wonderful stories that the advance notices of the publication led the public to believe would appear were conspicuous by their absence.

It is a curious circumstance that though the name of Princess Christian was included in the list of editors, her name is missing from the first number. It is believed that the King has put his foot down on the Princess' incursion into journalism.

SPAIN AND AMERICA WIN IN NEW TREATY

Advantages for Both Countries in Most Important Commercial Agreement.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Madrid, July 21.—The new commercial treaty between the United States and Spain has been signed. The document is considered to be most advantageous to both sides, overcoming a number of the increases in the Spanish tariff which became operative July 1, and giving Spain reciprocal advantages.

The press welcomes the agreement as entirely satisfactory to Spain, and as at the same time furnishing evidence of the friendly intercourse between the two governments. The treaty is expected to be the basis for similar understandings between the United States and other powers.

Only Germany has secured a commercial arrangement overcoming the new Spanish tariff, and France and Switzerland are now pressing for similar agreements, in the meantime denouncing the old treaties owing to Spain's hesitation to encourage French and Swiss commerce.

MAY COME TO SALEM ON THEIR HONEYMOON

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—Austen Chamberlain, son of Joseph Chamberlain, and Miss Ivy Muriel, daughter of Colonel Dundas, were married to-day at St. Margaret's, in the presence of a large assemblage of the fashionables of London. Mrs. Chamberlain, stepmother of the groom, was present, accompanied by Miss Chamberlain and Miss Endicott, but Joseph Chamberlain could not attend. Prominent in the assembly were leading politicians of both parties, including former Premier Arthur J. Balfour and Herbert Asquith.

Big Social Event.

The marriage was one of the events of the social season and great crowds of people gathered about Westminster to witness the entry of the notable guests and the wedding party.

Mrs. Chamberlain, the stepmother of Austen Chamberlain, was Miss Mary Endicott, daughter of the famous Endicott family of the Witch City. She is expected in Salem soon, and it is probable, according to cable dispatches from London to-day, that her stepson and his bride will follow her across the water. Salem and Boston society are a-flutter with anticipation of the prospect of entertaining such distinguished guests from England.

The couple whose marriage took place to-day is a notable one, even for London. Young Mr. Chamberlain has made a decided mark for himself in English politics. He is a member of Parliament and a former chancellor of the exchequer.

"Beauty of the Army."

He recently made a voyage to Africa for his health. In Algiers he met Miss Dundas. She is the daughter of Colonel H. L. Dundas, late of the East Yorkshire Regiment and now chief staff officer at Gibraltar. She is a tall, fair-complexioned girl of the finest English type and is known as "the Beauty of the Army." She was shopping in Algiers in company with a friend, Mrs. [illegible], [illegible] young Chamberlain was acquainted [illegible] happened to enter the shop where the two ladies were. An introduction followed. It was "love at first sight." The rising young statesman, who had hitherto shown no indication toward marriage, wooed Miss Dundas persistently.

The marriage resulting to-day from this courtship is aptly styled by the London set as a true love match and a union of brains and beauty.

KING AND QUEEN GIVE FINAL COURT

Several American Women Attend Function That Closes London Season.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, July 21.—King Edward and Queen Alexandria last evening held at Buckingham Palace the fourth and final court, marking the close of the London season. Although the attendance was not so large as at former courts, there were 800 guests and the function lacked nothing in brilliance of effect. In addition to the members of the royal family resident in the palace, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, who have been absent from recent courts, were present. The Americans presented in the diplomatic circle were Oscar S. Straus and Mrs. Straus of New York and Henry White, American ambassador at Rome, and in the general circle Mrs. William Clark and Miss Clark of New Jersey, Mrs. Mure Steel of California, Miss Muriel Robbins of New York and Miss Edith Levis, an American resident in London. King Edward is expected to go to Marienbad early in August.

APPENDICITIS NOW LAID TO PARASITES

Prof. Blanchard Insists That Disease Is Due to Horrible Little Trygocephal.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, July 21.—An entirely new theory regarding appendicitis is put forward by Professor Blanchard, a famous French physician, and indorsed by Professor Metchnikoff of the Pasteur Institute.

Professor Blanchard says that an operation for appendicitis, except when caused by swallowing some hard substance, is absolutely unnecessary. The most frequent cause of the disease is intestinal parasites, the most dangerous being the trygocephal, which sets up the painful symptoms indicating appendicitis.

Forced or otherwise vegetables, according to the Blanchard theory, have a great deal to do with appendicitis. Professor Blanchard adds: "Appendicitis, when not the consequence of the accidental swallowing of some hard substance, is undoubtedly caused by the parasites to be found in cabbages, turnips, cauliflowers and carrots, that have been forced by manures or watered by contaminated [illegible]."

Thymol is recommended by the Professor as a killer of the appendicitis worm.

TWIN WON PEERAGE ON SMALL MARGIN

Earl of Durham Had Trifle the Better of It Over Brother.

London, July 21.—The Earl of Durham, who has just celebrated his birthday in common with his twin brother, gained his peerage by a margin of minutes. The younger twin, the Hon. Frederick Lambton, resembles the Earl very much in appearance, voice and manner.

Another instance of the elder of twins succeeding to a peerage is the Earl of Malmesbury, whose heir presumptive is his twin brother, the Hon. Alexander Harris.

Agrarian Interests Propose to Bar Out Products of Packers.

POWERFUL REICHSTAG SUPPORT IS EXPECTED

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Berlin, July 21.—A serious movement directed against American meat and food is being pushed by agrarian interests with the likelihood of commanding powerful support in the Reichstag when the [illegible] comes up in the Autumn. It was started by so-called agricultural chambers composed of landlords and farmers, and resulted in the Prussian Diet in June adopting a resolution recommending the government pass a law excluding absolutely all preserved meat not accompanied by the glands and all other parts of the carcass.

It was proposed that lard be altogether excluded. It was obvious to the [illegible] that the importation [illegible] of other parts of the [illegible] was impossible [illegible] the American meat [illegible] in view.

Similar or [illegible] resolutions were passed by the [illegible] of Bavaria, Saxony, Wurttemberg and other German States.

Citizens Give Officials of the Giant Fleet Welcome to the City in a Brilliant Banquet at Turk's Head Inn

Rockport, July 21.—Admiral Evans and [illegible] of his fleet of battleships now [illegible] the harbor were given a banquet tonight by Rockport citizens at Turk's Head [illegible] "stag party," to watch the female [illegible] of the summer colony society were [illegible] apparently the women are [illegible] slighted but they were perfectly [illegible] at being invited to attend the ball following the banquet, at which they danced from 10 to 12 o'clock.

The banquet and dance was the society event of the summer season at this place, and its coming has been waited with great interest by the people of several towns, and those who have flocked here from all over New England. The decision of those in charge not to invite women to the banquet, however, was the most cruel blow to the ambitions of those of that sex, for they missed one of the most elaborate [illegible] that has ever been served in this place.

Big Popular Subscription.

Rockport people alone were strictly responsible for this banquet. Their money paid for it and their brains devised the bill of fare. The expense was met by popular subscription and the necessary money was raised in a surprisingly short time. Papers were circulated through the town, but none were allowed to [illegible] outside.

The banquet began at seven o'clock and lasted until eight. Congressman Ernest W. Roberts was the toastmaster and of course "Fighting Bob" Evans was the guest of honor. The speechmaking which marked the banquet and the after-dinner stories which followed lasted until nearly ten o'clock. Those who took part in this, aside from the many officers, were Admiral Evans, Congressman Charles Q. Tirrell, General W. F. Draper, Speaker of the House of Representatives John N. Cole, [illegible] Port George H. Lyman, Congressman William S. McNary and Charles H. [illegible]. The speeches were of the jolly sort and kept the whole gathering in a similar feeling.

Officers as Social Heroes.

After this came the order to admit the ladies, and dancing followed. It closed what was the biggest affair of its kind ever held here.

The officers who were present and who were much sought as dancing partners were:

Rear Admiral R. D. Evans, Captain R. F. Tilley, Captain E. C. Pendleton, Captain E. D. Taussig, Captain J. E. Pillsbury, Captain G. Blocklinger, Captain N. E. Niles, Captain H. Winslow, Captain F. P. Corey, SUSPECT POISONING IN WESTFIELD MAN'S DEATH.

Stomach of Charles T. Smith, Found Dying Near His Home, Said to Have Been Sent to Springfield for an Analysis

Westfield, July 21.—Deep mystery surrounds the death of Charles T. Smith, who was found dying a little way from his house on East Silver street. It was thought at first he was suffering from kidney trouble, but, on investigation, Medical Examiner James performed an autopsy. It was announced today that the stomach had been sent to Springfield for analysis, giving rise to a poison theory in connection with the case.

Smith was formerly employed on the Boston & Albany railroad. He had to give that up on account of ill health and secured work in the [illegible] shop of the Pope Company here. He was a man of sober habits. He lived quietly with his wife and mother-in-law.

Wednesday night he went home but, according to neighborhood talk, was refused admittance. Why he was refused is one of the mysterious things connected with the case.

The next afternoon two strange livery outfits were noticed hitched on Silver street [illegible] Smith house.

[illegible] Friday morning a neighbor [illegible] this neighbor was so dis[illegible] started [illegible] He found Smith [illegible] railroad tracks [illegible] back of his [illegible] regaining consciousness.

LIGHTNING STRIKES CAMPER

Warren, Ohio, July 21.—Henry Schall, aged fifteen, member of a camping party [illegible] was stunned and slightly injured by a bolt of lightning.

EDISON LIGHT FIGURES SHOW GLARING DISCRIMINATION

Consumers Say It Is No Wonder Lobbyist Wardwell Objected to Publicity.

Although Lobbyist "Jake" Wardwell protested in writing, the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners have made public figures showing that some Boston electric light consumers pay six times as much as others for their light.

Much material for the investigation of extortionate charges for light by the electric company in Boston, being conducted by the District Attorney, came out through the report filed yesterday with the Clerk of the House of Representatives, in belated response to the request made by the Legislature at the demand of Representative James H. Mellen of Worcester.

The report, which contains scores of pages of names and figures, more than 1,000 cases in all, shows that the contention of Mr. Mellen and others that there were wide divergencies in the prices charged different consumers was correct. The company admits to the Gas Commission that its prices vary from .0015 to .01 per sixteen candle-power lamp hour. It does not explain in any manner that would satisfy the layman, at least, how there can be such a difference in price upon any fair basis.

Protested Against Publicity.

With the report is filed a copy of all the correspondence that passed between the Commission and the Edison Company when the House was asking for the figures. An especially interesting part is a letter written by J. Otis Wardwell, better known as "Jake" Wardwell, attorney for the Edison Company and a well-known State House lobbyist, in which he urged the commissioners not to make public the figures "on [illegible] that they should not come into the [illegible]."

Whether [illegible] most of Mr. Wardwell's [illegible] to do with [illegible] [illegible] that it [illegible] the figures asked for is not stated. It will be remembered that the board did not report the figures, and that General Schaff, the minority member of the commission, made a report in which he informed the legislature that the figures were in the board's hands and that he believed they should be made public.

Some Sample Cases.

The mass of figures embraced in the report was hurried into the hands of the State printer almost as soon as it was received, that being near the hour for closing. Something of an idea of the contents of the tables may be gathered from the following cases taken from the 1,500 in the list. These readings were from January 8 to February 6 of the present year:

	Kilowatt Hours.	Net Bill for Light.
Pattee & Co., No. 169 Tremont street	2[illegible]	$3.27
Miss S. M. Hayes, No. 154 Tremont street	20	2.72
Singer Mfg. Co., No. 160 Tremont street	257	35.80
English Tea Room Co., No. 160 Tremont street	259	29.33
G. Wilde Smith, No. 158 Tremont street	920	77.81
[illegible], No. 157 Tremont street	900	89.85
Marceau, No. 160 Tremont street	300	44.15
W. L. Douglas Shoe Co., No. 63 Washington street	540	54.54
A. H. Howe & Co., No. 170 Tremont street	718	69.86

Automatic Vaudeville Co., No. 634 Washington street	4,713	230.88
Boston Dental Lab. Co., No. 171 Tremont street	134	23.89
Henry L. Hulbert, No. 621 Commonwealth avenue	82	14.76

Gross Discrimination.

"I don't wonder that Wardwell did not wish the figures made public. I think that it's a case for the District Attorney."

Mr. I. White, proprietor of the three stores of the Traveler Shoe Company, was wroth when he saw the report of the company showing that while he was charged $81.85 for 578 kilowatt hours, alleged to have been used in his store at No. 590 Washington street, in one month, the Douglas [illegible] at No. 635 Washington street, which used 540 kilowatt hours, thirty-eight less than the Traveler, paid [illegible] $31 less. In comparison [illegible] & Co., of No. 170 Tremont [illegible] Traveler store was a worse [illegible] company paying but [illegible] kilowatt hours, or $11.99 [illegible] Traveler store, while using 140 more kilowatt hours.

"I will gladly go before District-Attorney Moran if he will take the matter up," said Mr. White to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter. "They have had to [illegible] for me recently but I still believe I am paying too much for my light. It is [illegible] understanding that a store which uses less light should get it at a cheaper rate.

ADDICKS' CASH GONE; PLOT TO OUST HIM

Washington, D. C., July 21.—It seems probable that J. Edward Addicks will be finally eliminated from Delaware politics at the coming convention of the Republicans of that State. The two factions, the "Union" and the "Regular" organizations, have united in a call for a harmony State convention on September 4th.

It is planned to prevent Addicks from participating in the convention. The joint call takes from the hands of the various county and district committees the matter of assigning the number of delegates from the several counties and thus unhorses Addicks, who is chairman of the "Union" committee in one county.

Influential Republicans in the State say that if the party can only get rid of Addicks harmony can be restored. It is pretty generally understood that the "gas man's" money is gone and, if that is true, it ought to be easy to put him back in the ranks.

BELIEVE OHIO ICE MEN ARE INDICTED

[illegible] The grand jury [illegible] session for two weeks investigating an alleged combine of [illegible] and dealers, has adjourned for the summer, but before leaving the court house returned to the court [illegible] sealed indictments that it is believed represent the results of its delving into the affairs of the ice men. [illegible] were expected by [illegible] and even by the ice men themselves. [illegible] of attorneys present to hear the report and take immediate action in their behalf.

ELOPES WITH N. Y. MAN.

Laramie, Wyo., July 21.—The parents of Miss Mammie Konva, the nineteen-year-old girl who disappeared from her home Sunday, have been informed by her that she was married in Denver to J. J. Ryan, who until Saturday was cashier of the Union Pacific Hotel here. Ryan's home is in New York.

70 IMPERILLED BY DEADLY WIRE.

Snaps Ahead of New York Car and Coils About It, Spitting Electric Fire.

MARVELOUS ESCAPE OF PASSENGERS IN PANIC

New York, July 21.—Seventy passengers faced death in one of its most terrible forms tonight when an electric feed wire snapped a block ahead of a crosstown car and coiled about it like a huge writhing, hissing serpent, spitting fire that curled in tricolored flames. The panic that followed was appalling. That no one was killed was well nigh miraculous.

The car, an open one, was on its way from Greenpoint to Erie Basin. Every seat was filled and passengers were standing up. There were forty [illegible] women and children. The feed wire broke at Adams and Pearl streets and snapped backward to the car.

Motorman Joseph Zabrowski, who saw the break and the darting wire, had the presence of mind to shut off the power and grind the brake just as the wire struck the car, knocking off his hat and barely missing his head.

Sparks Blinded Passengers.

It wound around and around the car as a sailor might have coiled a rope, while sparks and flashes of light blinded the terrified passengers.

The imprisoned ones had but one thought, to escape from the electric death that menaced them.

In a moment they were engaged in a terrific struggle to reach the street and not touch the deadly wire. Men forgot chivalry, forgot to aid women, forgot everything save their desire to escape from the circle of fire that held the car in its embrace. They dodged under the wire. Some rolled off. Others fell off. Many were trampled upon.

The spectators in the street, who rapidly grew in numbers until a vast mob blocked the thoroughfare, looked on in helpless horror. They dared not approach to aid for fear of the death the others sought to flee.

Half a Dozen Unconscious.

Policemen Elwood and Murphy—"mile a minute Murphy," who gained fame by speeding behind a locomotive on a bicycle—took their courage in their hands. They used their night sticks to push the hissing wire up and over the roof of the car until it reached its hold and flopped over one side, still spitting fire. Balls of fire appeared on the trolley and cross wires at the street corners. Then more than 100 persons put their shoulders to the car and backed it out of harm's way.

When this was done half a dozen persons were found lying unconscious in the street. More than a score of others, more or less hurt, had limped away to their homes. All will recover.

CHARGE FAVORITISM IN AWARD OF CITY CONTRACT.

Refusal to Consider Bid Will Cost Providence $28,000, Says Company Whose Offer to Light Streets Was Ignored

Providence, July 21.—A sensational charge that the lighting committee of the city council showed favoritism in awarding the recent contract for street gas lighting, is made by the American Street Lighting Company of Baltimore, which asserts that the committee's refusal to consider its bid will cost the city $28,000.

The city had a contract with the Welsbach Company, which would have expired next January, but the latter, being anxious to secure a renewal, offered a reduced rate if the city would make the renewal at this time. The Baltimore firm claimed the right to bid against the Welsbach people, which was refused, and the contract with the latter was renewed without advertising for estimates.

The company openly denounces the method by which the contract was given to its competitor, declaring that corruption of a low order was responsible for the deal.

WANTS TO RETURN PIGEON TO OWNER

T. W. O'Connor, of No. 39 Lynde street, asks the BOSTON AMERICAN to help him find the owner of a registered brown carrier pigeon which he has had on his hands since six o'clock last Friday evening.

Mr. O'Connor was standing on the West Boston Bridge when he saw the pigeon, evidently exhausted, drop from a great height into the Charles River. Hiring a rowboat, he pulled to the aid of the bird in distress and rescued it from drowning.

Now the brown carrier pigeon is at the O'Connor home, "eating its head off," says Mr. O'Connor. Unless its owner comes and takes it away it is likely to die of indigestion.

TENNEYITES LOST FIRST GAME IN MOUND CITY; PFEFFER PITCHED WELL

Special to the Sunday American.

St. Louis, July 21.—Boston could not solve Brown's curves and the opening frolic went to the Cardinals, 5 to 1. At times the Tenneyites had the red striped hose twirler going some, but at the critical stages Brown hung the "nothing doing" sign out and forced Boston into submission.

Pfeffer twirled a sterling game for the Beaneaters and deserved much better treatment than the score shows. Two hits registered by the enemy were nought else but bad bounces which escaped the clutches of Bridwell and Strobel. The two fielding breaks scored against Tenney and Dolan came at a most unfortunate stage and were responsible for three Cardinal tallies.

Tenney's Great Play.

Barring the one error, the Beaneaters' manager showed wonderful form. He covered miles of ground around the initial corner, saving some of his teammates errors, leaping high in the air for bad throws.

Boston was blanked in the first and second. In the third, with one down, Pfeffer lammed out a beauty to right bleachers which netted him two bags. Bridwell followed with one over second, scoring Pfeffer, but went out trying to stretch into a two bagger on Burch's perfect return to Bennett. Tenney duplicated Pfeffer's hit to the opposite garden but died on the middle station, Brain fanning.

Things looked bright for Boston in the fourth, but Dolan and O'Neill fell down after Bates had singled and went to second on a sacrifice.

Bates started trouble for the locals in the sixth. Brain died easy. Bates was hit and swiped second. Howard and Dolan, however, were unequal to the occasion and ended the session on boosts.

Last Hope Gone.

Marshall shut off the last Boston hope in the final session by tossing out Howard, who tried to make second on his single to right. Burch's double and two outs scored one for St. Louis in the first. The same Cardinal's base hit, a sacrifice and a wild pitch sent another home in the third. Safe raps by Noonan and J. Marshall, a hit by a pitched ball and successive miscues by Dolan and Tenney sent three Cardinals across in the seventh.

O'Neill proved a good caretaker of the middle corner and nailed all attempts to steal that station by fast, sure throws.

Young and Beebe are the probable twirlers for to-morrow. Score.

REDS, 2; QUAKERS, 1.

Cincinnati, O., July 21.—Fraser and Sparks were the central figures in a well played extra inning game here this afternoon. The Reds won out in the tenth inning on Indian Jude's single to centre, which scored Schlei, who had previously singled.

Good inside manoeuvering helped the Reds to a run in the third. Schlei singled and Fraser sacrificed. Schlei then stole third and scored on Huggins's fly to Thomas. The Phillies didn't tie the score until the seventh. Here Titus tripled to right centre and scored when Courtney flied to Siegel. Score

PITTSBURG, 8; NEW YORK, 2.

Special to the Sunday American.

Pittsburg, Pa., July 21.—Pittsburg took the opening game of the series from the New York Champions to-day by the score of 8 to 2. Taylor was hammered to the woods, only lasting five innings, and Ames, who succeeded him, fared no better. Lynch pitched good ball for Pittsburg, and was given fine support. The score:

BROOKLYN, 6; CHICAGO, 3.

Chicago, July 21.—Bunching their hits in the seventh and ninth innings, and aided by errors of Tinker and Evers, enabled the Brooklyn Nationals to defeat the Chicagos to-day. Although the leaders in the pennant race outbatted the Trolley Dodgers, sharp fielding on the part of the Brooklynites kept the home team's score down. Score

TEDESCO DOG SHOW BOOKED FOR AUG. 13

The Tedesco Kennel Club, an off-shoot of the Tedesco Country Club, whose club house and club grounds, are located at Swampscott, Mass., will hold their inaugural Bench Show on August 13th and 14th, 1906.

The officers of the club are: John Shepard, President, (the noted horse-man), William Gordon Means, Secretary and Treasurer, who with Charles P. Searle, William Bunting, George S. Burton, William H. Rothwell, Frank E. Peabody, constitute the Bench Show Committee.

Tom B. Middlebrooke has been engaged to superintend the show. The affair will be held under canvas on the Club Grounds. Many valuable special prizes have been already pledged and more will be forthcoming. The judges selected are amongst the most experienced in the country, and will without a doubt command a large entry in their respective breeds.

The superintendent's office is No. 60 Market street, Room 7, where premium list, entry blanks and other information can be obtained.

FIERCE GAME ON COMMON.

The Union A. C. of Jamaica Plain defeated the strong Eaton A. C. of the West End at Boston Common by a score of 17 to 14 in the eighth inning, after a hotly disputed game, the Eaton A. JOHNSON HERE TO HELP THE BOSTONS.

Grand Mogul of the American League Will Go West with Collins's Team.

SAYS CLUB IS MAKING EFFORTS TO STRENGTHEN

Ban Johnson, the grand mogul of the American League, arrived in the Hub early yesterday on his mission in aid of the local team, but he had little to give out after having a conference with Vice President Charles Taylor and Captain Jimmy Collins.

It was expected that when Johnson arrived on the scene that something would drop in the way of radical changes or suspensions, but nothing of the kind developed and hardly will.

Mr. Johnson, when seen at the Parker House, said: "I am here merely to find out what is the matter with the team and why it is not doing better and if it is within my power to do what I can towards restoring any [illegible] stakes. Captain Collins's [illegible] will remain as they have [illegible]

"[illegible] decidedly unfortunate [illegible] injury to his knee, and a [illegible] is a very discouraging [illegible] I asked Collins why he didn't get out on the coaching lines if he could get into a uniform, but he replied that the fans would think it possible [illegible] him to get in the game if he was [illegible]

"After my talk with General Taylor I am convinced that strenuous efforts are being made to get new material. The club has agents all over the country scouting for [illegible] players and strings are out for [illegible]

But two boats showed up in the Sonderklasse. The Windram Kid won out by one minute over the Bondrel.

At the yacht club there was a band concert and collation served to the many visitors. It was 6 o'clock before the boats began to get back to the float. The tide was dead low and the breeze dead, making it necessary to have the entire fleet towed back to the yacht club.

NEW PICTURE OF CHARLES (CHICK) STAHL.

Two Prime Sluggers Are Preparing for a Fierce Bout

Joe Thomas of California and Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence Are to Clash at Chelsea.

The next big bout on the local card is scheduled a week from Tuesday night at the Lincoln A. C., when two of the leading middleweights in the country meet in the main bout of fifteen rounds. The men are Tommy Sullivan of Lawrence and Joe Thomas of California and they have signed articles to weigh in at 150 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Thomas has made a big record in the West in his short career in the ring and has received the strongest recommendation from ring fo[illegible] on the coast. His recent victories have been over George Peterson, George Herberts and Jack Clancy and only a w[illegible] ago he gave Joe Grim, the "human punching bag," one of the worst drubbings he ever received.

Thomas [illegible] puncher and has won most [illegible] by the K. O. route. He fights in hurricane style and yet is possessed of all the necessary equipment to make a success in the ring.

His fighting in Philadelphia has set the Quaker fans on fire and he has all the engagements he can fill in that burg.

He was originally an Easterner, hailing from Beverly, but went West and developed a rugged constitution that fitted him for the strenuous biff game.

Thomas is expected in the Hub to-day and will go immediately to Mike Devenney's place at Highland Lake to condition himself for the hard encounter.

With Thomas will come Al Kaufman, the California heavyweight, who is training with him for a match which will come later with Fred Bradley.

Local fans know the calibre of Tommy Sullivan and his bouts with Fred Douglas will be remembered for their fierceness and hard hitting which lasted till Douglas was put to the bad before the bouts were half over.

The Lowell boy has carefully prepared for this match, as he wants to get after some of the big game. He is sure to bring down from Lawrence a big delegation who will back him to the limit.

Another bout on the same evening which is attracting much attention is the semi-final affair of eight rounds between Colley McGowan, the amateur champion and Willie Rhys. Both are residents of South Boston and intense rivalry exists between them and their followers. It is safe to say that most of the Peninsula District will be depopulated in order to witness the match.

SANFORD WINS CT. GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Stamford, Ct., July 21.—Dupscomb Sanford of the Wee Burn Club, Stamford, this afternoon won the Connecticut championship by defeating Dr. Carl Martin of Greenwich, two up and one to play, in a thirty-six hole match. The match was sensationally exciting, first Sanford then Martin then Sanford leading again, in the see-saw game.

Sprote and Beach of the Brooklawn Club beat White and aPrmelee, New Haven Country Club, in the finals of the foursomes. W. B. Ely, New Haven, won the handicap tournament and Ralph Carroll, Fairfield, won the consolation championship from R. L. Jackson, Arawana.

THREE GAMES WITH NAPS, THEN PILGRIMS START ON SECOND WESTERN TRIP

Three days more at the Huntington Avenue grounds and the Boston Americans get underway for their second Western trip and will be gone for three weeks.

For the remaining days Lajoie's Indians will be entertained and the crippled band from the Forest City will have some hard sledding before them while they are guests of the Hub.

The first game scheduled for yesterday had to be postponed because of wet grounds but the series will be opened to-morrow afternoon. It was fortunate for the Naps that they could squeeze in two days of rest after the strenuous encounters with the Highlanders and three of the best men on the team disabled, and it will be a makeshift team which Lajoie will present with changes at first base, centre field and third base.

The management has extended an invitation to the Vacation School boys and tickets have been distributed to about 5,000 of the youngsters who will fill up the centre field bleachers.

The pitching probabilities will be Bill Dinneen and Bill Bernhard and a duel between should result.

There will be no double header on this trip of the Indians as the postponed game [illegible] will come on the next [illegible] of the team according to the existing rules.

The Lost Chance.

BY MORTON BIRGE.

It surely was a Pilgrim cinch, the Naps were down and out,
The Larrupers were sick and sore, to play them was a sin,
But, curses on the hoodoo streak, the [illegible] the Naps were all too weak,
And Boston lost [illegible] had to win.

The Bostons chortled loud in glee. There's Bradley's broken wrist;
The Beans Buelow catching team is likewise to the bad;
Then Bay, the fleet—hurrah for Bay! his ankle's twisted sore to-day,
And Stovall's wrenched a leg or two, it's really very sad.

"So, will we play? You bet we will," the willing Bostons cried.
They knew they had a living show against a crippled team,
But Mister Hoodoo comes to bat and knocks the bunch of Boston flat,
And once again the Pilgrims woke and found it was a dream.

The Injuns were so awful weak they could not even play
A near-team like the Bostons, yes, it was a horrid shame.
Against a crippled team we might have put up something of a fight,
But now we've lost another chance to—maybe, win a game.

FOSS'S SLOOP YACHT SAGAMORE SOLD; SO IS SETSU.

Hollis Burgess has sold the sloop yacht Sagamore, owned by Eugene N. Foss of Jamaica Plain, Mass., to Howard D. Briggs and Alfred K. Potter of Providence, R. I. The Sagamore is a very handsome Lawley built cruising sloop, originally built for Thomas W. Lawson of Boston.

He has also sold the sloop Setsu, owned by Samuel W. Levis and Fritz B. Talbot of Brookline, Mass., to W. A. Greene of Cambridge, Mass. The Setsu will be used at Northeast Harbor, Me., and will be raced against the Opitsah V., which has recently gone to Islesboro, Me.

He has also sold the sloop Moslem, owned by John Tyler of Brookline, Mass., to Joseph de F. Junkin of Philadelphia, and the sloop Nibelung, owned by Augustus P. Loring of Boston, to R. D. Weston-Smith of Boston.

He has also chartered the steam yacht Wind Goose, owned by Herbert H. White of Brookline, Mass., to the Boston Yacht Club, to be used as the Judges' boat during the annual cruise of the club to Five Islands, Me.

SO LONG II. WON MOTOR BOAT RACE

Hotel Frontenac, Frontenac, N. Y., July 21.—The final heat of the fourteen-mile handicap race for motor boats of thirty-foot water line was won to-day by the So Long II., owned by George Hasbrouck of New York, winner of both heats yesterday, actual time thirty-six minutes forty four seconds. Kilmer's Vingt-et-un II., famous for capturing the A. P. B. A. gold challenge cup, took second place, followed in by Too Easy, owned by W. S. Kilmer of Binghamton, and Canard, owned by J. H. Morgan of New York.

The free for all twenty-one mile race went to the Too Easy, with Canard second, these two only starting out of ten entries.

The Kilmer entry was disabled by a collision with the Got to Go, owned by W. D. Hayden of New York, smashing her forward bulkhead. She was towed into safety by the steam yacht Jean.

The So Long did not enter on account of her engine breaking down.

MIKE SCHRECK WILL MEET BURNS ON THURSDAY NEXT.

After much tribulation, Mike Schreck and Tommy Burns will clash at Seattle next Thursday for twenty rounds, thereby bringing to a head the much vexed question as to which is rightfully entitled to be called champion, near-champion, runner-up, or whatever is the correct term for the rather anomalous position of eminence that Burns has occupied ever since he whipped Marvin Hart.

On paper, the men look to be evenly matched and the fight promises to be one of the best contests from every point of view that has been pulled off between the heavyweights in some little time. Both men are of the same type, short, and heavy set, fast and clever and carrying a punch in either wing. Schreck has, or is supposed to have the shade in the hitting department, while Burns is probably a little the shiftier man of the two; all of which taken into consideration makes it a mighty tough proposition to pick the winner thereof with any degree of probability. It will be a pretty fracas, though, that's a cinch.

HEAVYWEIGHTS ARE HOT AFTER BERGER

CHICAGO, July 23.—Local heavyweights are hot on the trail of Sam Berger, the Californian who defeated Jack O'Brien at Philadelphia on Monday night. The first to come to the front is Fred Cooley. Ira Johnson, who looks after the affairs of the big German, to-day posted $200 with Lawrence J. Coffey, sporting editor of the Chicago American, to bind a match with the Westerner.

Scarcely had Cooley's manager posted the forfeit, when Billy Hogan, manager for Mike Schreck, handed over a check for $500, also to bind a match with Berger. Hugo Kelly, Jack Root, Young Mahoney and Dave Barry are also after the new champion.

Berger just now is a great card. Fight clubs from all over the country are wiring him asking him to fight, but Berger, like other men of his profession, is thinking seriously of taking to the stage. Offers from [illegible] of theatrical companies are already at hand.

TROTTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF HARNESS HORSES CYCLING RACES AT REVERE AGAIN POSTPONED ATHLETICS FINE ENTRY FOR ST. AUGUSTINE GAMES YACHTING

JOHN M'GRAW, GIANTS' MANAGER, IS A NATURAL LEADER AMONG MEN

They call Lajoie Napoleon because that is his name. If the term were bestowed on a modern ball player to signify ability the recipient would be John J. McGraw, for he is more like the great Corsican general than any of his competitors.

A despot in [illegible] he, personally, invites no [illegible]. [illegible] that imagines he is close to McGraw, but he is bound to discover sooner or later, it was merely a slight friendship. The advice of an old philosopher was "Treat every friend as though you expected him some day to become an enemy." This seems a long way from the Golden Rule, but this old scholar was a big leaguer and said a bunch of wise things.

The original Napoleon was born in Corsica, in 1769; this one got his first peek at the sun little more than 100 years later in Truxton, N. Y. Both gave evidence of their future career when youngsters. Bonaparte used to play with a small brass sabre. McGraw worked as "butcher boy" and always wanted to be captain.

The Frenchman had something on Mac in the matter of age, for he was only twenty-six when he invaded Italy with a couple of hundred thousand soldiers. Mac was only playing third base for Baltimore then, but Napoleon could not have "gooped" him in fielding or at the bat.

Where McGraw Shines Best.

As the seasons went by both lads kept very busy around the bases. At the battles of Lodi and Arcole, Bonaparte grabbed the banner and went to the front with bullets thicker than mosquitoes in the Hackensack meadows. But didn't McGraw hit harder and make more runs and bail out more umpires? Sure!

Getting down to the real jammy goods. It was in the capacity of leader that the two Naps threw the radium. "Bony" sprinkled his and will have more space in history, to be sure. But Mac is alive and every newspaper office has fifty cuts of his phiz. "Bony" was the rattlesnake rumble in his day, because he knew what to do on the spur of the moment and knew a heap more than his men. Same with Mac.

BIG TENNIS WEEK ON LONGWOOD COURTS.

The courts of the Longwood Cricket Club at Brookline will be the scene of the most notable tennis played this year in the east, beginning tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The annual National Championships, always the first big tennis matches, after an unusually dull season on this side of the water, probably will revive a portion of the interest in the once popular game.

There will be three noticeable absentees this year. Beals Wright on account of the amputation of his index finger and lack of condition will be unable to appear. Holcomb Ward finding his business too pressing to permit his absence longer has positively decided that he will be unable to get to this city. Collins, the Westerner, has gone back home too tired out by his experience abroad to find further enjoyment in the game this year.

The most prominent man, therefore, to be on hand will be Larned, already winner of two challenge cups at Longwood and present holder of the fourth cup. Little, captain of the American team which went abroad, Dewhurst and Behr, who did so well at Seabright, have all sent entries. From New York will come LeRoy, Pell, Torrence, Andreson, and Watson, all of whose playing is too well known to need further comment.

The doubles will surely be keenly contested and the winners will play the western champions at Newport in August and also meet Ward and Wright, the national title holders at Newport.

Jockey Miller Punished For Doing Rough Riding

Brighton Beach Race Track, N. Y., July 21.—Jockey Miller was severely punished by the stewards today for his rough riding. He was fined $100 and set down for two days. This is an unusual [illegible], but it shows that the stewards evidently have considered Miller's past offences. Miller rode Gold Coin in the fifth race, and, after rushing through the stretch, won by a narrow margin. He crowded Shaw, on Voladay, who finished second. The stewards then disqualified Miller's mount and gave the race to Voladay.

Water Pearl was withdrawn from the Neptune Stakes this afternoon. Mr. Paget did not want to take any more mud chances with the big horse for a stake that would net only $4,000 to the winner. This left Ballot to meet a lot of poor horses, but the talent did not fancy his chances and he went back in the betting from 4 to 5 to 8 to 5. Ballot's courage won.

Dishabille won the Islip handicap. She was favorite and carried the smart money. Tokalon was second. With an equally good ride Tokalon should have beaten Dishabille, but Redell was fumbling with his reins all through the stretch.

Athens won the opening dash. He liked the mud but had his work cut out to beat Mortiboy, but ran an improved race and finished strong. Mortiboy was a 100 to 1 shot.

The steeplechase artists backed Flying Virginian from 15 to 1 to 8 to 1 and of course Flying Virginian brought home the money. Phantom, who receded in the betting, got a weak looking ride and was second. Robinhood and King's Daughter raced head and head to the stretch in the sixth, followed by Sir Russell and First Premium.

In the run home Kings Daughter drew away and won easily by four lengths from Sir Russell.

The Results.

FIRST RACE—Selling, two-year-old, five and one-half furlongs. Athens, 99 (J. J. Walsh), 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, won; Mortiboy, 107 (Beckman), 60 to 1 and 20 to 1, second; Elecpitan, 102 (L. BIG JIM JEFFRIES UMPIRING A BASEBALL GAME.

JIM JEFFRIES, the champion heavyweight pugilist, forgot his alfalfa long enough to umpire a ball game in Los Angeles a few days ago, and was caught by the photographer while filling the office. The game was one of the championship series, and the score of 4 to 2 shows that it was a close struggle, but the absence of any kicking or umpire basting by the players was a conspicuous feature.

In the picture Jeffries is seen at his station at first base ready to give his decision on the runner and his chances with the ball. It is noticeable that big Jim is not very intently watching the runner, as he stepped on the base, but rather looking for the throw, preferring to spring one of his famous ducks if the pellet went wild.

The fans were mild in their joshing which every umpire has to stand. He stood off first base attired in a boiled shirt and linen collar. His trousers were pressed just right and his shoes highly polished. The big fellow gave his decisions promptly and without the slightest hesitation.

NEW SCORING SYSTEM IS A BIG SUCCESS

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Quebec, July 21.—A system to determine the logical and proper winner of an automobile tour or contest, call it what you may, has at last been determined, and is now in use in connection with the A. A. A. annual tour, embracing the contests for the Glidden and Deming trophies. It is a standard which, when properly operated, should prove thoroughly effective, and one which will set at rest all claims of favoritism, and gives the public an opportunity to see how close and effective is the competition.

While it is true that the system is capable of greater possibilities than have yet been shown, and can be improved upon with advantage, it is such a radical step in advance of what has gone before that the tourists are satisfied to see it carried to the finish on this tour, and to later experiment and develop. Heretofore in all contests of this nature the system, or lack of system, of scoring has been so crude as to be ridiculous; not the experience of a year ago, when a winner was evolved on virtually an unknown basis, system or standard. This year, however, there can be none of that.

Older Men Pleased.

The older men at the game are pleased and delighted, contending that this is just what is called for. It is a fact that the schedule for each day is the same for high or low powered cars, which can be argued as being unfair. That may properly be considered as one of the few weaknesses of the same. Still, in future contests that difficulty can be overcome by classifying the cars and making schedules for each class on a certain well-defined basis.

In such a contest as this, which has been fought on American soil, is now in progress in foreign lands and will be concluded in the mountains of New Hampshire, it is unreasonable to expect all persons to be satisfied—and they are not. There are some few who like not the system of checking, who object to the character of the roads, and in a general way decry the tour as a whole and the efforts of the committee in particular. These, however, are the tenderfeet, the men who seek nothing save pleasure, who believe that a contest of this nature should be carried out on boulevard roads, away from the life and road strenuous. Still such work as that does not test the cars or men in such a thorough practical manner as does the route and conditions laid out in the tour of this year. Their place is not in a contest which results in a survival of the fittest. They should be given a little club run of their own, where they can enjoy all the comforts and none of the discomfits of home and pleasure.

Operators Are Enthusiastic.

As a rule the operators are thoroughly enthusiastic over the run. They freely admit that it is the hardest they have ever tackled, but as one man who has competed in every national tour in this country said: "This is the work that tells, work that produces drivers, work that demonstrates the true ability of a machine, and work which cannot help but be beneficial to the manufacturer. A thorough motor is one constructed with the ability to go any and everywhere from Canada to the Pacific under all sorts and conditions of road and weather. No test of machines has ever been so exacting as this. To have completed in this year's tour is a mark of distinction just as it was on and since the Pittsburg run, and win or lose the machines which finish the trip will be entitled to all praise. They will have performed wonders in the interest of the industry. They will have done that which three years ago would have been impossible. Further, there will be no question as regards the practicability and efficiency of the motor car, either for pleasure or commercial purposes."

This idea is shared by all. The work of the cars up to this point has been really remarkable. It has been beyond expectation. The tour has developed men, and at times thrown them upon their own resources to devise ways and means of bringing their machines to a certain point on a certain schedule. Exacting as has been the tour as a whole, the men in the Glidden contest have been forced on more than one occasion to display their ingenuity and dexterity. No work has been permitted on the Glidden tour, save what could be done on schedule running time. When in control the cars have virtually been under lock and key, and no man has been permitted to touch the same. This means that the time consumed in repairs, adjustments, etc., must be taken from the running time between checking stations.

For instance, if a man has twenty-four miles to go in two hours, and after leaving a station, spends one hour more or less in adjusting or repairing the machine, he has the difference in time to travel to the next station; failure to do so entails penalization of a point for every minute lost.

This condition has brought to the front some particularly fast work; for instance Barman replaced a bent axle in twenty-one minutes; Walker replaced a broken starting crank in sixteen minutes; Holden repaired three punctures in a total of forty-five minutes; Burke repaired two punctures in twenty-five minutes, and so on all down the line. Never was such fast work recorded in a contest.

Car Stopped When Anything Happens.

The moment anything happens to a car it is stopped, and instantly every man aboard jumps out and goes to work, not in an indiscriminate manner, but with foresight and intelligence, displaying what may be termed team work. Each man seems to have a particular duty to perform, and does it immediately so that two men are never seen endeavoring to do one and the same thing on any car at the same moment. The exigencies of the run make valuable every second of time, and none are thrown away or let pass unimproved.

This certainly is a tribute to the operators. The showing of the cars made up to date is the best testimonial of American product that can be offered.

FARLEY HARVEY 7, FILENE 4

Filene went down to defeat at the hands of Farley-Harvey, to the tune of 7 to 4, on the Dunbar avenue grounds, Dorchester, yesterday afternoon. The pitching of Howell, who struck out ten men, and the work of McCue at short were the features for Filene. Donahue, Welch and Hickey also played a great game for Farley Harvey. The score:

GILCHRISTS CLAIM GAME.

In the Drygoods League the Gilchrist Co. and the Shepard, Norwell Co. teams were to play at Franklin Field yesterday but the Shepard, Norwell team did not put in appearance and the manager of the Gilchrist team claimed the contest, 9 to 0. The Gilchrist team played a practice game with the Norfolks of Dorchester and won out in six innings by the score of 6 to 2.

WATER PEARL AND ORAN MEET AGAIN IN BRIGHTON JUNIOR STAKES SATURDAY

BY J. S. A. MACDONALD.

New York, July 21.—The two-year-old championship is still an open affair, but on next Saturday will be contested at Brighton Beach the old-time and important juvenile fixture known as the Brighton Junior Stakes, of $15,000, at the full six furlongs, an event, sharp judges of racing form agree, which will be one of the best tests afforded so far this year. It will be remembered Sysonby in his two-year-old form gave the world an astonishing display of his speed and capacity in the Brighton Junior, and like as not the winner of the renewal at hand will go on to further fame and assured premiership at Saratoga, as did the "King of the Turf" in his time.

Water Pearl vs. Oran.

Once again Sydney Paget's giant chestnut colt Water Pearl, and Oran, the swift-running son of Ossary in the string of the Ormondale stable, meet up in the Brighton Junior under full stake weights. In the Great Trial of $20,000 Oran ran Water Pearl into the ground in a stretch duel, the latter quitting absolutely.

This manner of race running found a complete reversal when the two colts met in the second half of the Double Event on the final day at Sheepshead Bay, where Water Pearl put it on the Ossary horse. It is now one race apiece, and the coming Brighton Junior should serve as the rubber.

At this time the majority of handicappers and race players are prepared to concede these two youngsters the best so far developed this year. For instance, so authoritative a source as is Trainer John W. Rodgers of the Whitney stable declares Water Pearl to be a certain winner of the $50,000 Futurity next September, and that fixture is the cap and climax of every breeder's two-year-old racing ambitions. Also it is the most crucial trysting of the young race horses of all the year.

A Bad Horse Never Won Futurity.

A bad horse never won a Futurity, while he or she generally stands out above the season's crop. On racing form, Water Pearl and Oran are the logical contenders for the championship so far as New Yorkers have seen, but just at this moment a pair of Richmonds appear in the field.

Many horsemen coming in from the northern circuit for the spell at Saratoga say "Barney" Schreiber of St. Louis, Mo., has the kingpin colt of the year in Jack Atkins. Men who have observed his form up through the Canadian circuit say he will surely beat Water Pearl when the distance for juveniles lengthens to six and one-half and seven furlongs, while he was able to pack substantial imposts, such as 124 or 126 pounds, with greater facility than can Oran, who is inclined to be a bit whispy. Then Schreiber himself says Horace E., who did so well in California for him last Winter, is just as fast and game as Jack Atkins. Schreiber, it will be remembered, sold Horace E. to the Rainers of Cleveland, O., for $25,000 two months ago.

"Bud" May, developer of High Ball, the last American Derby winner, is handling Horace E., and with the Futurity in mind the California colt is getting an easy Summer up among the sulphur springs and crisp mountain air at Saratoga.

Water Pearl Looks Like Winner.

So, all in all, the first honors among American two-year-olds of this year seem to rest with Water Pearl, Oran, Horace E. and Jack Atkins. The Brighton Junior will settle the question of superiority between Water Pearl and Oran. Then the winner must hook up with the better of the other two. In addition to Water Pearl and Oran such clever youngsters as Paumonok, Golf Ball, Peter Pan, Ballot, Superman, Yankee Gun and Charles Edward are in the lists. Horace E. and Jack Atkins will not show with the colors up until the heyday of the Saratoga season. For my part, Water Pearl is the winner right now. A soft track will beat him, for, like all the sons of Watercress, he must hear his hoofs pattering on a dry, hard cushion before he can extend his stride.

As a matter of fact, about the best line on the calibre of a racehorse is found in the relative position he or she occupies in the earnings list. If this be the gauge, then Water Pearl is the absolute champion. This colt has earned for his stable just $46,460 so far, which makes him the largest winning horse of any age or sex on the American turf in 1906. He will probably reach the $100,000 mark before the snow flakes fall in the late Autumn.

New York is wild over Water Pearl. Unlike most of the Watercress family, he is not a bay or a brown, but a flashing chestnut of magnificent body part and leonine head and neck. He is so big one might pass him for a three-year-old. He is a real "picture horse" for a pleasing sight he makes on parade to the post with thousands and thousands of admirers hand-clapping and applauding the "Giant." Here in the table below is seen at a glance just what the most prominent two-year-olds of the season have been doing up to date:

JORDAN MARSH TEAM WON.

On the Locust street grounds yesterday afternoon the Jordan Marsh Co.'s baseball team completely outclassed the J. R. Ainsley nine in a fairly interesting game, winning 8 to 1.

"Joe" O'Neil, the old Roslindale and New Bedford twirler, was on the firing line for Jordan Marsh and his all around playing was the bright particular feature of the game. The score:

BIG CROWDS SEES LAST DAY'S SPORT

By Edward E. Cogswell.

Salem, N. H., July 21.—This was "get away day" at Rockingham Park, and with 7,500 persons present it can be said that the inaugural meeting closed in a blaze of glory.

In many ways it was a most remarkable race meeting. Not only was it conducted without betting, but throughout the twenty-one days there was not a disturbing feature. The crowds were eminently respectable, and as orderly as the most fastidious could have wished.

There is no question that in educating the New England public in the ethics of racing the meeting has accomplished wonders. At different times members of the New Hampshire Legislature have visited the track, watched the manner in which the races were conducted, and gained an idea of the kind of people that patronize the sport.

Then, too, the twelve apostles have frequently paid visits and from little words they have occasionally dropped it is plain that possibly the dangers to the morals of the public in racing horses does not have the danger they thought before the opening of the meeting.

Exeter Handicap Feature Race.

For the windup the management had arranged a star programme, including seven races. The feature event was the Exeter Handicap of $1,500. In figuring on the probable winner the majority of horsemen awarded the honors to Grapple, from John A. Drake's stable.

While the judgment of the talent may have been correct, yet the misfortune of racing likely robbed Grapple of the victory. In taking the first turn Crimmins on Tongorder rushed across to the pole so quickly as to crowd Grapple into the fence, nearly knocking him to his knees, causing him to lose about two lengths before Sperling could get him going to his speed again.

Having gained this advantage Crimmins took no chances the balance of the route, but maintained a lead of some two lengths till well in the homestretch, and then sat down to ride Tongorder with whip and voice to reach the winning post first.

It was well that he did so for Grapple gained rapidly and was only a neck behind at the finish. Immediately Sperling went to the stewards and claimed the foul that was so evident to all. After some consultation the claim was disallowed.

It was understood that the reason for the stewards' actions was on account of the Grapple being the property of Mr. Drake, one of the biggest investors in the Rockingham Park, and as there was no betting it would not harm anybody to allow the [illegible] as the horses finished. Had it been [illegible] that did the fouling [illegible] a very different decision would have been given.

Mr. Drake himself, said he expected at the time Tongorder would be disqualified for what had been done by the jockey. It would have been in line with the luck he had had the past few weeks. Not only has he lost a valuable horse since the opening of the Salem meeting, but in other ways Dame Fortune had apparently seen fit to slight him. Knowing this [illegible] racing people were pleased that the stewards permitted the foul to pass unnoticed.

Momentum Won First Race.

In the first race Momentum had the speed of the party. Clark took him to the front at the raise of the barrier, and at all stages held Tanager safe, winning by a length with the latter three lengths to the good for second position.

The Boston turfman, George L. Richard, carried off the laurels in the second race with his big black gelding, Armington. Wiley rode him a well-rated race, laying back to the right moment, and then rushing him into the lead. Redstart was second, a half-length back.

It was counted that Slickaway had the best of the argument in the third race, but was evidently not up to a race, having been indulged for some time past. He led the way to the final eighth, when Chandler took command with Society Bud. Nellie Burn came fast at the end and nipped Slickaway for place by a nose in the final jump.

In the fifth race little Garner added another victory to his extended list for the meeting. Going up the backstretch, he opened up a gap with Afric Jewel, and was over two lengths in advance of Subtle when the winning post was passed.

A Guess in the Sixth.

It was a guess in the sixth race for maiden two-year-olds. Once the flag was dropped there was no doubt of the best in the party, as the further they went the more was the space between Pohgenie Belle and the field behind her. A quarter from home she was five lengths, but Clark eased her up the last hundred yards, which cut the distance at the finish to a couple of lengths.

The final event was for hunters, gentlemen riders to do the honors. Mr. Baker was kept busy at the post keeping Annie Russell between the rails of the track. Finally the chestnut filly succeeded in throwing her rider and running to the upper end of the six-furlong chute. Starter Cassidy then let the race go with the other two starters. It was only a snap for Mr. Higginson to win with Kumshaw over Ferocious, ridden by Mr. Bird. The result gave the former his maiden victory of the meting, and the first winning brackets for Kumshaw.

At the conclusion of the race the Harry E. Stiles 8th Regiment Band paraded the lawn in front of the grandstand and around between the clubhouse playing "Auld Lang Syne," while the spectators cheered in the excitement of the moment. Arthur, the messenger boy for the telegraph operators and press stand, rushed over and raised the number "23" on the post in the infield, and the crowd departed for the trains for the last time till 1907. The results.

At New Bedford—Fall River, 19, New Bedford 13.

Special to the Sunday American.

Lawrence, Mass., July 21.—The local team regained the lead in the pennant race by taking both games of a double-header here this afternoon from Lowell. Witherup, former[ly] of the Boston Nationals, was opposed to Barberich in the first game and it was all Lawrence. The locals landed on Witherup in the seventh and won the game. Murphy, formerly with New Bedford and Reynolds, a Nashua boy, played their first games with Lawrence and made good.

The second game found Maroney, also an ex-Boston National man, opposed to Leith and the latter after apparently losing the game by an error in the fifth batted in the winning run in the ninth amid the greatest excitement. Score:

LYNN, 5; MANCHESTER, 1.

Lynn, July 21.—Clever pitching by Smith gave Lynn a victory over Manchester, 5 to 1, this afternoon at Ocean Park. His smashing drive in the second, sending in two runs, placed the game on ice, and the visitors were unable to connect with his damp sphere. O'Toole, who pitched for Manchester, made three wild throws, which helped Lynn to score. Howard, a utility fielder in absence of Captain Bannon, made good. The score:

WORCESTER 3, HAVERHILL 1

Worcester, July 21.—Worcester defeated Haverhill on Boulevard Park this afternoon in a close and interesting contest by the score of 3 to 1. Both twirlers were effective, Shine allowing four singles and Haslem two singles and a double. A shower that came up during the game made the field a bit slow, thus accounting for the errors. The features of the game were contributed by Shortstops Ahern and Meagher. The score.

WAGNER AND STONE BEST HITTERS TO DATE

Wagner of Pittsburg and Stone of St. Louis are the prize pummellers in the National and American Leagues. The batting averages show some shocking form reversals.

In the old league, Mike Donlin gained a percentage of .361 in twenty-six games. Young Donovan, the Quaker backstop in fourteen contests, has shown unlooked-for persistency as a bingle maker. His mark of .370 puts him at [illegible]. But the real leader is Wagner. The [illegible] Pittsburg all around gem has steadily assaulted opposing pitchers, but [illegible] average of .335 is a bit below the Wagner standard.

Steinfeldt, Chicago's gift from Cincinnati; Johnny Kling, the Cubs' daily backstop, Ward, who [illegible] the Quakers, and Harry Lumley [illegible] Brooklyn follow the Pirate. Leach of Pittsburg, Sheckard, Schulte and Chance of Chicago, Burgh, the former Poughkeepsie player, now with St. Louis, and Arthur Devlin are the only others in the .300 ranks.

No National Leaguer has shown long swatting powers equal to those of Harry Lumley. The Indian hero has peppered out a total [illegible] three bases, two more than Wagner who presses the Giant hardest.

Husk Chance, the aggressive Cub leader, has crossed the home plate more times than any man in the old organization. His record of fifty-three runs puts him ahead of Wagner by a single tally.

In the American League twenty-four men, against fourteen in the National, have earned places in the .300 division of batsmen. Kid Elberfeld's .388 is the high mark, but he was injured after thirty-nine games. George Stone, the St. Louis outfielder, is only four points below Elberfeld's average. Stone has been in the game all season. Lajoie has been hitting safely at a rate which will put him within easy reach of the top. His average of .366 is a big advance over that of two weeks ago. The Clevelander is followed in the list by Altizer, the Washington surpriser. He has hit for .357, a point ahead of Clarke of Cleveland.

Hal Chase has helped the Yankees by his batting efforts, which are reflected by his average of .342. Hemphill, St. Louis; Seybold, Athletics; Cobb, Detroit; Dygert, Philadelphia; Davis, Philadelphia; Rossman, Cleveland; McGuire, New York; Bemis, Cleveland; Wakefield, Washington, Grimshaw and Stahl, Boston; Turner, Cleveland; Murphy, Philadelphia; Williams, New York; Bay and Flick, Cleveland; Anderson, Washington, and Keeler of the Yankees make up the front rank of the American League batsmen. Crawford of Detroit and Wallace of St. Louis are just below the .300 notch.

Harry Davis of the Athletics has been the champion long-distance hitter of the league. He has a total of 103 bases in sixty-eight games, thirty more bases than Lumley's big mark in the old league. His record of fifty-five runs tops all others. Young Niles of St. Louis, who has batted for only .223, leads baserunners with twenty-one steals.

Some remarkable batting has been shown by youngsters in both leagues. The American League's big list of .300 batsmen is swelled by the work of young players like Altizer, Clarke, Chase, Cobb, Rossman, Wakefield and Grimshaw.

Veteran sluggers have dropped into lowly places. One of the hardest falls is that of Cy Seymour, the National League batting champion. Seymour has an average of .271. Jake Beckley, who is always found in the elite, has flopped back to .254. Smooth of St. Louis, Tenney of Boston, McGann and a few others usually in the upper half of the list are unable to break into the hitting habit.

Collins of Boston, Hickman of Washington, Parent of Boston, George Davis of Chicago and Stahl, the Washington manager, who is below .200, have been big batting disappointments in the American circuit.

Averages are the form charts of baseball, even if the figures do not always put the mark of greatness on the deserving players. The leaders in both big leagues are men who have always shown the merit necessary to fit them for the honor places.

Lajoie's great batting has turned many close games to Cleveland. Harry Davis's extra base drives have made it possible for Connie Mack to keep the Athletics in the fight for the top.

STRAITWAY, A BEAUTY.

One of the handsomest horses in New England is the black pacing stallion Straitway, by Bingen, 2.06, dam by Arion, 2.07¾. This horse is five years old and weighs 1,030 pounds, is black as a crow, goes with only quarter boots, and has been a mile over Readville track in 2.13¼. He was bought at the Old Glory sale in New York in 1902, and is owned jointly by Mr. Fred W. Budd of St. Stephen, N. B., and Mr. George Strand of Readville, Mass.

SHOT PUT FEATURE AT ST. AUGUSTINE BIG GAMES.

For eleven years the St. Augustine Parish field day has been to outdoor track athletics what the Boston Athletic Association meet is to indoor athletics. Many world's records have been broken and the world's greatest exponents in each specialty of track and field athletics have won laurels at this meet, a renewal of which will take place next Saturday afternoon at Harbor View, formerly [illegible] Locust street grounds, Dorchester [illegible].

[illegible] Paul Pilgrim [illegible] New York Athletic Club, who [illegible] world's quarter [illegible] recent Olympic [illegible] Dennis Horgan, [illegible] champion, who for [illegible] never been defeated [illegible] contest, and Bill Coe [illegible] record of 49 feet [illegible] the 16 pound [illegible] in the two [illegible] pound [illegible] out to [illegible] the latter [illegible] arrangement to put him in this event as he felt sure of [illegible].

Coe on the other hand is a far different athlete than he was when Horgan defeated him a half dozen years ago, and his work recently has been better than Horgan's. Coe has the confidence in his ability to defeat anybody at shot putting and says Horgan will have to do better than fifty feet to win. These two men are away ahead of [illegible] events. A comparison between the other men, who have won laurels in this specialty and Horgan and Coe can be seen in comparing Stephenson [illegible] which won the event [illegible] event and which was less than 44 feet and these men who can put close to fifty feet.

ALL-ROUND CHAMP TO SHOW.

Richard Sheridan, a brother of Martin, who holds the record for all around athletic performance, is a man of magnificent physique, standing six feet four inches and weighing 210 pounds. He will compete in the discus and throwing the 56-pound weight and putting the 28-pound shot, Irish style, with follow.

A relay race, each man to run a quarter of a mile, has been added to the program. An all-collegiate team, composed of Parsons of Yale, Young of Harvard and other crack college athletes, who are summering at Camp Ossipee, N. H., are eager to run any team in the country, and strong teams will be [illegible] to meet them. These men will also run in the open events. Melvin Sheppard, holder of the world's indoor records at 1.54 2-5 for the half mile and 4.22 for the mile, is in his best form, and has been entered with Sullivan and Bonhag for the distance events from 880 yards to two miles by the Irish Athletic Club.

The pick of New England's athletes have already been entered, and are not likely to let the New Yorkers have things their own way, and undoubtedly, as heretofore at these events, some local athlete will surprise himself and athletic critics by suddenly jumping into fame by defeating a world's [illegible].

BAY STATE A. A. PLANS COMPLETE FOR ANNUAL TOUR VANDERBILT PAGE OF AUTO NEWS Edited by J. C. Kerrison LICENSES MANY MOTORISTS REGISTERED THIS WEEK NOTES

BOTH OF THESE AUTOISTS HAVE CLEAN SCORES

Kirkham, Because of Accident to Car, Drops From the List of Honor.

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Quebec, Que., July 21—One by one the honor men are being eliminated from the honor list in the Glidden tour and the contest is narrowing down. Each day, however, of late it seems one man or another drop down. Kirkham was the victim of to-day. Who will be the next is a great question.

A trifling thing may at a moment's notice cause an irreparable damage so far as clean scores are concerned. This is being fully realized as the tour progresses. There is an evident desire for care and caution on the part of the nineteen remaining honor men. They have abandoned speed and substituted a more careful, conservative handling of their machines.

The rate of speed which was developed in the early stages, when good roads were at hand, has been abandoned since entering upon the sandy and hill roads of the province of Quebec. It is now a case of steady, continual pounding of the roads, and there are few persons who finished the day's run to-[illegible] who admit to have been on the cushions of the cars for any five consecutive moments during the days.

A Hard Day's Run.

This was indeed a hard day's run, although to be true the schedule was an easy one and gave the contestants ample latitude to make repairs.

This was instanced in the case of Kirkham in the little Maxwell who first put in a new axle and saved his time. Then he was forced to put on a new pair of front springs, and, with all this, lost but twelve points on the entire run. This, however, is enough to keep him from attaining the desired possession of the Glidden trophy.

Nineteen Cars Now Tied.

There are now nineteen cars tied for that honor. Who will be the eventual winner is hard to predict. There are no prophets at hand. All of the cars with clean scores made excellent performances to-day, none showing to better advantage than another.

Van Sicklen in the Apperson, had cause to attach new spring clips to his car, but that was the only mishap, other than the trouble recorded against the honor men. Several of these with points increased their disadvantage. In the Deming the conditions so far as winning is concerned remains the same. It was only by the cleverest of generalship that Kelsey, in the Maxwell, retained his status in the tie, he breaking both springs and finishing with solid blocks of wood acting as springs.

Coleman, Post and Cassatt are still tied with Kelsey for first honors here. Although the previous work on the run had raised [illegible] with axles and springs to-day's work was by far the most exacting, likewise the most tiresome. The reception accorded the visitors was in keeping with what has gone before.

The tourists will remain in Quebec until Tuesday morning, the local motorists having made special arrangements for their entertainment. The standing to date follows:

VERMONT HAS A FINE AUTOMOBILE RECORD.

A Vermont statistician writing under the nom de plume "Automobilist," contributes the following to a Barre, Vt., paper:

"During the year 1905 there were over 700 automobiles registered in Vermont, besides several hundred that came here from other States, yet how many deaths were caused by automobiles? None, unless you except the two occupants of an automobile that were killed in Bennington by being run into by a train at a railroad crossing. Here is an interesting table:

Killed by railroads	39
Killed by horse vehicles	17
Killed by falling down stairs	6
Killed by burns	12
Killed by machinery	12
Killed by firearms	14
Killed by lumbering	8
Killed by mistake in medicine	10
Killed by quarrying	8
Killed by bicycle	1
Killed by lightning	4
Killed by street cars	2
Killed by drowning	30
Killed by automobile	none

"Unless you reckon the two occupants of the automobile in the Bennington accident, these figures certainly show the safety of the automobile as compared with the horse vehicle, or anything, except the bicycle. Not a single death of a pedestrian was due to the automobile. The record outside of our State is equally favorable."

Phonograph Jobbers Will Return to the Hub To-day

Four Bostonians, representing the four leading phonograph jobbers of New England, have spent the past week in a Reo touring car covering the territory between here and New York city and attending the annual convention of phonograph jobbers of the United States being held this week at New York city.

The Boston party consisted of Charles Andrews, manager of the phonograph department of the Boston Cycle and Supply Company; Mr. Reed of Reed and Reed, Mr. William Deal of the phonograph department of the Iver Johnson Sporting [illegible] Company and [illegible] St. Andrews of the [illegible] Sporting [illegible] Company.

While in New York the party stopped at the Waldorf-Astoria as the guests of the Edison Phonograph Company, and each day [illegible] were made into New Jersey, [illegible] and Atlantic City by means of [illegible].

The return trip to Boston will be made [illegible] party expecting to arrive in [illegible] Monday evening. They [illegible] as in good condition, and [illegible] in good shape, with no [illegible] beyond two punctures.

NOTHING WRONG WITH CARBURETOR

Mark Twain was visiting a physician friend of his not long ago who wished to engage a new chauffeur. The first applicant for the position was a big, strapping six footer, with great broad shoulders, who looked strong enough to pick up a touring car and carry it. The doctor admired his splendid physique, but doubted if the man possessed much mechanical ability. "Have you had much experience running automobiles?" he inquired. "Sure," was the straightforward answer. "Well," ventured the allopath, "as far as your physical condition is concerned you certainly look strong enough to take good care of a car if you can run it. What is the first thing you do when you find that your carburetor is out of order?" "Well, I tell ye doctor," replied the applicant, "I honestly don't never have no trouble with it. It never gits out of order. I ain't been sick one day for the last two year."

ASPHALT ROADS TO REPLACE MACADAM

F. [illegible] Hutchinson, Road Commissioner of New Jersey, intends to make some experiments with asphalt instead of macadam, and if the experiments are successful the roads of that State in the future will be practically dustless. The roads built of this material will not be like the smooth-surfaced city streets, but will resemble the macadam roads, as they will have small [illegible] for their principal material, [illegible] bound solidly together [illegible]. This will present a hard [illegible] there will be no wearing [illegible]. Mr. Hutchinson [illegible] will not be any more expensive [illegible] than the macadam, and that it [illegible] wear twice as long.

R. E. Olds Says There Will Be a 4-Cylinder Reo Next Year

Pioneer of the Automobile Industry Discusses Next Season's Plans.

By Alex Schwalbach

Lansing, Mich., July 21—This fine old town and capital city of Michigan might well, without any attempt to play on words, be called by the new name Olds, so prominently identified with the town is that name. Two of the biggest automobile industries in the country, the Reo Motor Car Company, of which R. E. Olds is president, and the Olds Motor Works are located here, the former making the Reo, which name it will be noticed is compounded from the initials of Mr. Olds, the later concern making the Oldsmobile, a trade name [illegible].

Ransom E. Olds, the president of the Reo Motor Car Company, says he built his first runabout in 1887 and that it was designed to bridge over, if possible, the gap between the old tire and the [illegible] carriages, which were not so popular with the public and the early automobile designers. Mr. Olds recognized that neither of these types as then constructed had any permanent future, especially the steam carriage of fire-tube construction, which he truly regarded as only temporary stop-gaps in the industry. His sole idea in bringing out the Olds runabout at that time was to popularize the cylinder fired gasolene automobile, which he regarded [illegible] at the time to produce in [illegible] large quantities at a low price [illegible] power [illegible] later on.

In 1901 and 1902 Mr. Olds said he began to produce gasolene runabouts in big quantities because he realized this was the only way to make them at a low and popular price, and many people in Detroit, where he was then located, wondered what in the world he was going to do with the big factory he built for that purpose. Furthermore he said that nearly everybody lost money at the start in building big cars, and hence it was his idea to start with the little fellows.

Mr. Olds said that he had always been the great American apostle of single and double cylinder cars, that he had faith in them still, notwithstanding which he proposed next year to build a four-cylinder car costing $2,500, so as to give his agents a full line of cars. Asked why, after he had left the Olds Motor Works and burned his bridges behind him, he had not made a radical departure in construction, he said he believed then and still believes in the two-cylinder car as he builds it, because it furnishes to the public 100 cents on the dollar.

Four Cylinders the Limit.

Mr. Olds said he regarded the four-cylinder motor as the limit in practical construction, and that he had no use whatever for the present reigning fad of six-cylinder construction and that he thought it was better to give the public what they really needed and not what they thought they wanted.

Concerning prices, Mr. Olds said there would be no difficulty whatever for some years to come in maintaining them on cars of standard reputation; that the only danger in that line lay in cut prices by fly-by-night concerns. The automobile business, Mr. Olds said, was multiplying so rapidly that where it would eventually lead to no man could prophecy, unless it assumed all the proportions of the horse and carriage trade, but which was too stupendous to contemplate at present.

He had no desire whatever, he said, to encourage any more capital to go into the business, but his company had retired all its preferred stock and was still paying monthly dividends on its common stock. The business itself was a legitimate one for all makers who turn out a good product and had a wonderful future before it, said the man, who has always been an optimist, and whose bank account shows the result of his optimism.

The motor business wagon would surely come, thought Mr. Olds, after the desire and demand for pleasure carriages had been more thoroughly satisfied, so that the makers could turn their attention to this side of the industry. But the popular priced motor wagon would be the one to produce. It must be plain and of simple construction and be sold for less than one-half the present prices.

Mr. Olds said the motto of his concern "Deeds Not Words," and that in less [illegible] eight months, etc. It was organized they had shipped the first carload of [illegible] its [illegible] factory.

[illegible] the present year they had built [illegible] cars, which placed on a road one [illegible] of a mile apart would [illegible] miles [illegible] per day [illegible] building [illegible] orders for over [illegible].

Reo's Testing Track.

A third of a mile testing track lies alongside of the factory on the banks of the Grand River, and as everything in the town of Lansing is either owned Olds or owned by Olds or [illegible] Works, [illegible] suggested to Mr. Olds that this [illegible] the Reo [illegible]. In connection with this [illegible] it might be said that Mr. Olds is president of the new [illegible] National Bank [illegible] recently organized with a capital of $[illegible], financiering being one of the [illegible] of Mr. Olds when he is not actively engaged in other things. [illegible] the other big motor industries of the West [illegible] Reo factory is [illegible]. The new buildings are of two-story brick construction covering a space [illegible] feet with a floor surface of 260,000 square feet.

One of the peculiar things about the Reo cars is their popularity everywhere, especially at home, their sample room at the factory being filled with customers, whose pockets bulge with yellow backs, waiting for [illegible] fittings on the new cars just purchased to take them home on the road. So, eventually, one might expect to see in Lansing the long iron hitching posts and rods which line the main street for buggy and team use done away with altogether.

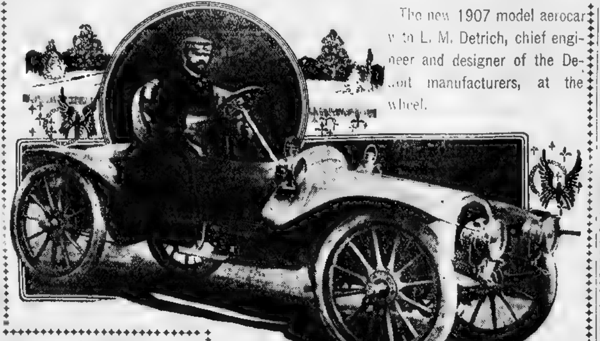
LOCOMOBILES ARE IN BIG DEMAND

Thomas A. Sperry of Sperry & Hutchinson, originators of the trading stamp, has recently purchased a 30 H. P. Locomobile, which makes the third gasolene car of this make which Mr. Sperry has owned.

Mr. Alonzo McConihe of Troy, N. Y., has just purchased his fourth Locomobile, a 30-35 touring car.

M. M. Riglander, New York, has also recently purchased a Locomobile of the same power, which makes his third Locomobile. Other recent buyers of those well known car are S. M. Clement, Buffalo, N. Y., President Marine National Bank; Jesse B. Cornwall, Bridgeport, Ct.; E. C. Burnham, Bridgeport, Ct., of the firm of Eaton, Cote & Burnham; F. G. P. Barnes, New Haven, Ct., his fourth Locomobile gasolene car; D. E. Waters, Grand Rapids, Michigan, President Grand Rapids National Bank; T. Jefferson Coolidge, Boston; S. S. De Lano, St. Louis, Mo.; E. Manny Hodgman, St. Louis, Mo.; Geo. A. Wahlgreen, Denver, Colo., proprietor Motor Field and others.

FIRST 1907 MODEL AUTO SHOWN THIS YEAR.



The new 1907 model aerocar with L. M. Detrich, chief engineer and designer of the Detroit manufacturers, at the wheel.

One of the first of the 1907 models to appear on the market is the Aerocar gentleman's roadster, which is catalogued as a twenty horsepower runabout model "F."

It is the latest creation of L. M. Detrich, the chief engineer and designer of the Aerocar Co., the noted designer of the celebrated Mercedes factory in Germany. He is one of the best known and most able engineers in the industry. In the photograph he is seated in the car.

This new runabout is new in every respect. In appearance it is an artistic development of the present idea of a modern high speed gentleman's runabout. Its form and colors are selected and blended to satisfy the most refined taste. The operation of it is as simple and soft as can be achieved at the present state of the art. The upholstering of the seats and the form of same affords a most commodious and luxurious ease of riding in combination with specially designed springs, and the sensation of riding in this car, which is the only silent air-cooled car in the market, is exhilarating.

Being started on the high gear it is driven with a permanent high advance spark on the throttle only, and will give range from eight to fifty or sixty miles, according to road conditions, by just touching the throttle lever. Quick fluctuations in the speed of the car can be made by simply operating the clutch pedal which, being thrown in the first notch, will release the clutch and retard the spark, thereby preventing the engine from racing and at the same time maintaining a full charge of gas in the cylinders, making it impossible to be stalled by changing gears on a hill. The right-hand pedal operates the transmission brake only, and is used as an emergency brake in combination with the left-hand pedal. The gear shifting lever is a side lever on the inside of the high side doors, which effectually protect the driver from draught or dust.

The shape of body and hood combined with the mud guards offer a minimum of wind resistance so far achieved in stock cars. The peculiar shape of the rear end of the body also produces air currents which hold down the dust behind the car.

The capacity of twenty-four and a half gallons to the tank is furthermore of importance for a touring runabout, and [illegible] lately [illegible].

This runabout being in a class by itself, and in its appearance, design and performance inferior to none of the high-powered runabouts in the market, is offered at a price which is not prohibitive as is mostly the case with cars of this type.

This runabout can be called the only silent and fast air-cooled runabout of the high-class type in the market.

READY FOR THE TOUR TO THE MOUNTAINS

Bay State Automobile Association Completes All Its Plans.

START NEXT THURSDAY FOR BRETTON WOODS

All the details for the summer tour of the Bay State Automobile Association to Bretton Woods, starting July 26 and return, have been completed by the committee.

E. A. Gilmore, chairman of runs and touring, and W. J. Morgan, general representative of the tour, have been over the route via Portland, and found the roads in splendid condition, being much improved over last year, especially in the White Mountain district.

Arrangements were made at the various stopping points for accommodations of the members of the tour.

On the day of the run from Bretton Woods to Portland the party will be met by the committee of the Auto Club of Maine, who have voted to have their run committee, with as many other members as possible, join the tour at Bay of Naples Inn, where lunch will be served. The Maine club has also arranged to entertain the visiting tourists with a sail down the beautiful Casco Bay and a genuine old-fashioned clambake will be indulged in on one of the islands.

Here Are the Entries.

The entries received are:

A. R. Bangs	Mme. E. M. Des Rochers

The main purpose of the Bay State Automobile Association Tour is to meet and welcome the A. A. A. Glidden tourists at Bretton Woods at the conclusion of their 1,000 mile tour. The tour after leaving Boston will be in charge of the Bay State Automobile Association and the latter's Runs and Tours Committee.

The New York touring party will leave the metropolis at 10 o'clock on the morning of July 24 from the New York Motor Club's headquarters, Hotel Cumberland, Fifty-fourth street and Broadway, and will tour to Boston, stopping at Hartford, Ct., the night of the 24th, arriving at Boston at the Bay State Club headquarters on the evening of the 25th, making headquarters at Hotel Somerset.

Bay State Takes Charge.

On the morning of the 26th the Bay State Automobile Association will take charge and the tour will proceed to Newcastle, where the balance of the day will be spent in games, etc., with lunch at the Farragut House. Then the itinerary is:

July 22—Newcastle to Bretton Woods (110 [illegible]) [illegible] N. H. [illegible]—Bretton Woods on the [illegible] North, lunch [illegible] wish to climb [illegible] road will [illegible].

USE CARE IN FILLING ACETYLENE LAMPS

In filling acetylene lamps care should be taken to see that the carbide basket is not more than half to three-quarters filled, as the slaking process causes a considerable increase in volume, and unless this precaution is taken there is danger of overstraining the retaining vessel. Another point which should not be neglected is that of thoroughly cleaning the contact surfaces when the generator is reassembled after filling, as even a small particle of carbide left in the joint may be sufficient to cause a serious leak, if not a miniature conflagration.

LIMOUSINES MUST NOT SPEED HIGH

Parisian carriage builders, who make all the bodies for cars in that city, have been warning automobilists that cars with heavy bodies, such as limousines, must not be driven as fast as machines fitted with open coach work. To travel faster than thirty-five miles an hour with such a car is to court disaster, according to these authorities, and the danger is greatly increased, when, as has come to be a habit, the chauffeur has piled spare tires and trunks on the roof.

Big Piano Bargains Anti-Piano Trust Sale

The best people in Boston attend our sacrifice sales. Some of the best economical buyers are the wives and daughters of rich Boston merchants who are sent by their husbands whose business ability and long experience have taught them values in Pianos. Remember, our sacrifice No Profit tag goes on to the finest make of Pianos. All makers are represented on our floors.

Don't think because we name the same make of Piano day after day and week after week that we have no other kinds. We have in our stock scores of Pianos the names of which New England people are not familiar. We always name the leading Boston and New England makes, those having the high standard of workmanship with which we Bostonians are so well acquainted. Any week you are liable to get a swell bargain in any of the following makes: Wellington, Chicago—Sommer, Omaha, Neb.—Whitney, Chicago—Smith & Barnes, Chicago—Rogers Bros., Chicago—Marshall & Wendell, New York—Kranich & Bach, New York—Kingsbury, Chicago—Woodbury, Leominster—Geo. Steck, New York—Jacob Bros., New York. People familiar with these makes will know that they are excellent pianos in every respect. They are sold at a less price than New England makes only because Boston is not acquainted with their true worth.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO PIANO DEALERS! No pianos will be sold to dealers or makers for a less price than marked for public sale. Each piano is marked a selling price to cover expenses, and in no case can a maker or dealer get a lower price than an individual. This applies to a dealer's or manufacturer's own make or any other make.

WRITE TO-DAY FOR FULL BARGAIN LIST We have dozens of fine Pianos not in the above list, left over from special sales, etc. Some Pianos for Bungalows, Beach or Country Houses almost given away.

SMITH COLLEGE
DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
August 17, 1906.

Chas. M. Stieff,
Baltimore.

Dear Sir:-

After thorough trial of your pianos and after comparison with other pianos of the highest grade, Smith College has this summer placed an order for ten Stieff Upright Pianos for use in the practice and teaching rooms of the Department of Music.

You may consider this a tribute to the excellence of tone and action of the Piano, to its durability, and to the reputation of your house for uprightness in its dealings.

Sincerely yours,
H. D. Sleeper
Director of Music.

Why Is It?

Why is it that men buy from us once, and then become our regular customers? Why is it that our mail order business increases steadily month after month, in spite of the keenest kind of competition?

There are three reasons: First, the excellent quality of all the goods we sell. Second, our low prices and generous treatment. Third, our prompt shipments.

Here's a fair example of the latter: Any order mailed us from Portland, Me., not later than 8 P. M., is delivered before noon the next day. "That's going some," but we guarantee it.

Goods to other points are shipped just as promptly. If you are not already one of our customers, give us a trial this week. We send a bottle of choice wine FREE with every order, large or small.

Worth While

It's worth your while to try "OLD 56." Nowhere else can you get a whiskey of this quality for $3.00 a gallon. Whiskey like this usually sells for from $4.00 to $5.00. Bottle of wine free with every order.

HEARST SWEEP IN NEW YORK CONTINUES.

Tired of Bossism of Fassett and Stanchfield, Chemung County Turning to Him.

FAVORS INDEPENDENCE LEADER FOR GOVERNOR

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Elmira, N. Y., July 21.—Every indication points to the success of William Randolph Hearst for Governor in Chemung county. The Independence League movement is very strong here, and the enrollment is large and gaining strength every day. The Democratic party lacks organization, and the old members are leaving it every day and joining the Independence League.

From the present outlook their coming county convention will indorse the league's nomination. Enrolled in the league are large numbers of prominent Republicans, who have become thoroughly disgusted with the "bossism" of J. Sloat Fassett, and the "system" and are working for the league and independence. The working man, both organized and unorganized, are a very prominent factor in this county, and there is a very strong following in the rural districts that will grow and develop strength from now until election day.

People Are Aroused.

Chemung county has a reputation for "bossism" and corruption in politics, but the people have waked up to the idea that they have had enough of Boss Fassett and Boss Stanchfield, and they propose to do their own voting in the future. The Independence League will have a full county, senatorial and congressional ticket in the field. This district is Congressman Fassett's, and he will have to do harder work than he ever did before if he expects to take up his residence in Washington again when his present term expires. From the present indications it does not look to be a very hard proposition to defeat Mr. Fassett in this district. He is not popular with the voters.

Republicans Breaking Away.

He has held his power through the "system," and he lives in a district that has an overwhelming Republican majority, but this Republican majority is going to vote with the Independence League this year.

There is a bitter fight on in this county against Assemblyman Moreland. The laboring men are united against him, and his chances of returning to the Assembly grow less every day. The league has several good men for members of Assembly, among whom are Colonel Joseph P. Eastis, H. L. Gardner, Lewis W. Mosher and Friend Miller.

HILL SAYS HEARST WILL BE NAMED BY THE STATE CONVENTION

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 21.—Much surprise has been created in local political circles by some information brought to this city by a recent visitor to Watertown. This informant says that John N. Carlisle made a recent trip to New York, stopping at Albany on the way. Mr. Carlisle, it is said, called on Senator Hill and urged him to support the Carlisle candidacy for Governor. Mr. Hill is reported to have said to Mr. Carlisle:

"Don't waste your time. Hearst will be nominated by the Democratic State convention."

ONLY A MIRACLE CAN STOP MOVE FOR HEARST SAYS SHEEHAN

Rochester, N. Y., June 21.—William F. Sheehan, law partner of Alton B. Parker, has spent much time in the Western part of the state recently. While in this section he was asked what the plans of the Ryan-Belmont Democracy contemplated. Mr. Sheehan replied:

"We are doing nothing. Only a miracle can prevent Hearst's nomination by the Democratic state convention."

STRANGERS FOR 15 YEARS, SISTERS REUNITED.

Pittsfield, July 21.—Separated at the death of their mother fifteen years ago, and in vain seeking each other during all these years, Miss Viola Mandeville, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mandeville of Pittsfield, and Mrs. Edwin S. G. Fisher of South Braintree are soon to have a joyful reunion.

When Miss Mandeville was five years old the death of her mother broke up the family. When Miss Mandeville was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Mandeville, who are devout French Catholics, they changed her name from Laura Belle Burke to her present name. Her sister, who is twenty-two years of age, two years older than Miss Mandeville, was adopted by a Protestant family, Mr. and Mrs. Hale, and her name was changed from Ella Burke to Ella Hale. Two months ago she was married to Edwin S. G. Fisher of Boston. They now live in South Braintree. Another sister died at the age of fifteen. A brother was adopted by another family whose present whereabouts are unknown. It has been reported that he resided for a time with a family of Shakers.

A few months ago Mrs. Wilson, who resides in this city, sought out Miss Mandeville and informed her of her sister's whereabouts. Miss Mandeville immediately wrote to the selectmen of Pelham, where she was born, and they confirmed the story as related by Mrs. Wilson. The sister was located in South Braintree.

Miss Mandeville was given many advantages by her foster parents, including six and a half years' education in a convent. She will spend the Summer and Fall in Boston and South Braintree, and will go South for the Winter.

THEATRE MANAGER QUITS WORCESTER

Worcester, July 21.—Charles W. Fonda, who has been managing theatres for S. Z. Poli, has severed his connection with the vaudeville manager and will return to Springfield to enter the employ of George A. Whitney, for whom he formerly worked. J. C. Criddle, manager of Poli's Springfield house, is to take charge of the Worcester theatre at once.

RECORD TRIP MADE BY FRENCH LINER

New York, July 21.—La Provence, the crack French liner, steamed into New York last evening, making the voyage from Havre in 5 days, 22 hours, 10 minutes, beating her own previous best time by 5 hours and 35 minutes.

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE IS LABOR'S HOPE, SAYS APPEAL

New York Union Leaders Urge Workingmen to United Action—Branch Being Organized in Bay State.

New York, July 21.—A. J. Boulton, Register of Kings County; M. A. Fitzgerald, ex-president New York State Letter Carriers' Association; Michael Brayer, ex-president of the Central Federated Union, and president of the Cloth Examiners' and Spongers' Union; William A. Coakley, president Lithographers' Apprentices' and Feeders' Association; George H. McVey, treasurer of L-442, Hardwood Finishers of New York city, and Assemblyman Maurice F. Smith of the Musicians' Union to-day joined in a signed appeal to the union laboring men of the State to support the Independence League, and to assist actively in the formation of the Independence League organization in every county in the State.

This proclamation is of particular interest in Massachusetts, where an Independence League is now being organized.

The appeal follows:

An Appeal to Organized Labor.

Independence in POLITICS means independence in WORK. Workingmen should support the Independence League.

Fellow workingmen:

The undersigned members of trades unions seek to obtain your sympathy and your co-operation in the success of the Independence League—a political party recently established in the State of New York.

The league, as its name shows, is an organization striving to free the State of SELFISH, MONOPOLISTIC CONTROL.

The aim of the Independence League is to make the thinking INDIVIDUAL voter paramount in the politics of the State.

The aim of the Independence League is to give political power to a majority of the MEN in the State and to take that power away from those who control a majority of the DOLLARS in the State.

Of all classes of voters, labor union men are most interested in the success of a truly independent political movement.

The Independence League, as it happens, has at its head and as its moving spirit William Randolph Hearst. But it is not by any means the party of an individual. Mr. Hearst for the time represents the revolt of millions of people against the control of laws and of public officials by corporations and their hired men in politics and in the law.

The prominence of W. R. Hearst in the Independence League has for labor union men an especial significance.

Hearst and Union Labor.

Every union man knows the attitude of Mr. Hearst and his newspapers toward union labor. Everyone knows that he employs only union labor and at the highest rates. And everybody acquainted with the events of the past few years, and with union matters in newspaper offices, knows how consistently Mr. Hearst has worked for the betterment of wages and of hours at great personal expense.

The importance of the Independence League to Labor is very great, and it must be permanent, irrespective of any individual leader.

The union workingman depends for his success upon honest and efficient lawmakers controlled by the people and not by the corporations, and upon an impartial judiciary interested in the welfare of the majority and not in the selfish plans of the few.

The Independence League has been organized to bring about nominations that will protect the interests of those that have no special axes to grind, no special privileges to promote, no hankering for monopolies or the profits of monopolies.

Hitherto, in the State of New York, politics and political power have been in the hands of bosses, and both sets of bosses, Republican and Democratic, have been owned by corporations.

Corporation-Ruled Parties.

On both sides nominees were picked out to please the corporations from whom the bosses got their campaign funds before election and their private plunder after election.

The inhabitants of the State feel that a time has come to change this method of doing the public business.

And the organization of the Independence League represents the determination to put an end to boss rule, to corporation rule, and to the dominant power of ORGANIZED MONEY as opposed to ORGANIZED MANHOOD.

We call upon organized labor everywhere to consider the situation carefully and act energetically.

If you are convinced that politics has been governed by corporations you must work for the Independence League, which is pledged to end corporation rule.

If you are convinced that both the old parties have simply represented the same monopolistic influences under a different name, you must work for the success of the Independence League, which is pledged to no corporation, which represents an actual effort to make the VOTERS supreme in lawmaking, and on the bench.

Fight Evil of Corruption.

Every laboring man realizes the position of the ordinary voter to-day. He knows that the man in the street, the man who works for a living and gives good value for what he receives, has practically nothing to say about the laws.

He has seen the proof of absolute corruption in the insurance companies and in endless other exposures of similar kinds. He realizes that the money of the people is used to corrupt their representatives.

He knows that a change is necessary. He knows that the Independence League is pledged to work for this change.

He knows that every dishonest influence in the State, every monopoly, every corrupt corporation and selfish political boss is against the Independence League. He knows who are the friends of the Independence League. He knows that the enemies of union labor are enemies of that league.

This letter is not issued merely to convince intelligent union men that they should interest themselves in the success of the League. It is not intended merely to convince them that the Independence League is what it professes to be, a real movement of the people.

Depends on the Individual.

The idea is to persuade the Union workingman to interest HIMSELF INDIVIDUALLY in the success of the League. Every workingman of intelligence has an influence in his neighborhood. Every man has the capacity for making votes, following upon the creation of public sentiment.

The undersigned, believing fully in the good faith of the Independence League, feeling that its success is necessary to the public welfare, urge upon their fellow-workers everywhere to support the League, to take an interest in it, to become enrolled members of it, and to work for that better government which it promises to give the State.

(Signed)

A. J. BOULTON, Register of Kings County.
M. A. FITZGERALD, ex-President of the New York State Letter Carriers' Association.
MICHAEL BRAYER, ex-President of the Central Federated Union, and President of the Cloth Examiners' and Spongers' Union.
W. A. COAKLEY, President of Lithographers' Apprentices' and Feeders' Association.
G. H. McVEY, Treasurer of L-442 Hardwood Finishers of New York city.
ASSEMBLYMAN M. F. SMITH of the Musicians' Union.

PROFESSOR SAYS WOMAN STOLE SKELETON.

New Haven, July 21.—Mrs. Mary F. Strong, of Springfield, Mass., a souvenir faddist, who a few years ago occupied a cottage at Woodmont-on-the-Sound, has been sued by Dr. Hubert H. Aimes, professor of history in the College of the City of New York, and his sister, Mrs. Virginia R. McAlpine, of Gilroy, Cal., for $6,000, the plaintiffs alleging that Mrs. Strong took at least seventy-five different souvenirs from the Aimes home, one of which was a skeleton. Their home is at Oyster River, Woodmont.

It is alleged that Mrs. Strong took the articles away in baskets and practically stripped the old house of its many fine carvings and souvenirs. The Aimeses have been for five years trying to get service on Mrs. Strong in this State. A deputy sheriff found her on Bell Island, Norwalk.

In the list of the things mentioned are:

Wood carved lions' heads, one wood carved eagle, twenty wood carved cats' heads, five wood carved grape pendants, ten animal heads carved and two fancy brackets.

Mrs. Strong is the widow of Judson Strong, a leading real estate and insurance man of Springfield, who died last Winter. She is continuing the business.

WORLD CONGRESS WILL COMBAT CONSUMPTION.

An international congress on tuberculosis is to be held in New York November 14, 15 and 16. A large attendance of physicians and laymen from every State in the Union has already been promised, and because of the action of the State Department, which recently sent a special circular on the subject to every American representative abroad, it is expected that every European nation will send at least three delegates.

Before his departure for South America Elihu Root, Secretary of State, asked that the governments of Great Britain, France, Denmark and the Netherlands be informed by the American representatives in those countries of the great importance of the coming congress and be asked to support the invitation already sent to their respective colonial possessions to be represented in the congress.

At about the same time, a circular sent to every American diplomatic representative in Europe, embodying a former document sent out by the late Secretary Hay, informed them that: "The American government was in entire sympathy with the work of the proposed congress and would be pleased to learn that the government of —— took a like interest in its success by the acceptance of the committee's invitation and the appointment of three or more scientific gentlemen to represent it at this congress."

The principal purpose of the coming congress will be that of urging preventive legislation against tuberculosis, the adoption of municipal and governmental sanitariums, and discussion of all the questions involved in the struggle against the great scourge of the race.

MONK ON BEER POSTER STIRS PRIEST.

Pastor Administers Stern Rebuke to Brewers Who Put Indignity Upon Church.

OFFENDING PICTURE IS HIDDEN FROM VIEW

Taunton, July 21.—Because of the denunciation from the pulpit of St. Joseph's Catholic Church by the Rev. William H. Curley, posters advertising a popular brew of beer have been covered over by orders of the manufacturer. The posters bore the picture of a merry faced monk, in cowl and cloak, seated at a table on which stands a bottle of beer, holding a foaming tankard with one hand while with the other hand he rubs his protruding paunch. A beatific expression is on the face of the merry monk as he says: "It reached the spot!"

The most objectionable feature of the picture was the rosary, ever cherished and revered by Catholics, which hung in front and attached to which was a cross. Fr. Curley's attack on the posters was heated and he spoke to large congregations at the masses. He said the caricaturing of the clergy of the Catholic Church was a reflection that should not go unpunished. Such pictures had a tendency to bring the clergy into disrepute and hold them up to ridicule. It represented them as drinkers. He said the people had the remedy and that was not to buy the beer.

As soon as the brewers, whose establishment is outside the State, learned of the priest's denunciation a representative was sent to him to state that no offence was meant and it was not thought that the picture of the monk would be offensive. An apology was made and the posters were covered and hidden from public view.

PLAN A BEAR HUNT WITH ARMED MEN IN AUTO.

Brimfield, July 21.—Because Alice Filer, daughter of Humphrey Filer of West Brimfield, saw what she thinks was a big black bear, Charles E. Fuller of Palmer says he will get up a bear hunt and capture or kill bruin. His idea is to get several motor cars or automobiles together, and, with several men armed with guns, to take along some dogs and scour the country where the bear has been seen.

Humphrey Filer was at work in his hayfield when he sent his daughter to the house on an errand.

She was going through the fields when what she is sure was a big bear sat up on its haunches and said "woof" at her.

There was no further conversation. The bear went one way and she went another.

SUSPEND OFFICIALS ON CRUELTY CHARGE

Cincinnati, July 21.—The city Board of Public Service has suspended Superintendent James Allison and Assistant Superintendent Peter Costello of the House of Refuge, a municipal reformatory and charitable institution, pending investigation of charges made in the press and elsewhere of extreme cruelty to boys and girls, inmates of that institution.

SUE ANDREW FIELDS FOR $2,900,000

New York, July 21.—Andrew C. Fields, head custodian of the "yellow dog" fund of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, has been served through his attorney, Henry H. Veite, with complaints in two suits for the recovery of about $2,900,000.

Fields, who got a salary of $10,000 a year, is worth about $600,000, so even if the company gets judgment against him and he turns over every dollar of his personal wealth the policyholders of the Mutual will not recover more than one-fifth of the total sum.

CLEVELAND TO BE OLD HOME ORATOR

Tamworth, N. H., July 21.—It is expected that ex-President Grover Cleveland, who with his wife is spending the Summer on Stevenson Hill, near this town, will be the principal orator at the Tamworth Old Home Week celebration, although the programme in full has not yet been made public.

Mrs. Cleveland appears frequently at church and at other village social events. Mr. Cleveland passes most of his time along the banks of the streams in the vicinity.

MILLIONAIRES TO BATTLE IN COURT.

Rhode Island Capitalists Quarrel Over Rights to Water Power at Pawtucket.

INJUNCTION SOUGHT TO LIMIT SUPPLY

Pawtucket, R. I., July 21.—Sensational developments are promised as the outcome of the legal battle begun last week between millionaire manufacturers of this city. About one week ago Frank A. Sayles, twenty times a millionaire, and other rich manufacturers interested in the Pawtucket Gas Company and the Pawtucket Electric Company, filed a petition in the Supreme Court asking for a temporary injunction to restrain the firm of D. Goff & Sons from taking water in excess of a certain amount from the Pawtucket River. A hearing on the petition was set down for July 17, but on that day the attorneys for the petitioners were granted a postponement for one week.

Behind the water case there is another matter which Mr. Sayles and his friends want to bring before the court.

Recently a syndicate of capitalists, of which Mr. Sayles is one, purchased the majority of the stock of the Pawtucket Electric Company. Lyman B. Goff, D. L. Goff, his brother, and George H. Thornton, his brother-in-law, owned a minority part of the stock, and were on the board of directors. By reason of the death of a member of the board of directors, the latter three, comprising the firm of D. Goff & Sons, constitutes a majority of the board of directors. Owing to this condition of affairs the syndicate cannot obtain the management and control of the company. Court proceedings are to be instituted, it is said, to compel Messrs. Goff and Thornton to meet with the other members of the board to fill the vacancy.

D. Goff & Sons are large consumers of electricity and steam manufactured by the Pawtucket Electric Company, and to-day the syndicate was struck a telling blow by the announcement that D. Goff & Sons are having plans prepared for the erection of a large power plant for the manufacture of electricity and steam for consumption in their various plants. The proposed new powerhouse will be located on the river front in close proximity to their braid mill, and will have a capacity of 1,000 horse power.

WORCESTER MADE TELEPHONE CENTRE

Worcester, July 21.—This city has been made the chief centre of Central Massachusetts for the New England Telegraph and Telephone Company by an order passed from Boston headquarters this week, which places the Worcester office ahead of the Lowell office. F. R. Waring has been appointed district superintendent, with headquarters at Worcester, and J. H. Barry, who has been the chief central division official, is to remove his office from Lowell to Boston. In this division there are 50,000 subscribers. The Worcester exchange includes Worcester, Barre, Boylston, Charlton, East Douglas, Grafton, Jefferson, Leicester, Millville, Oxford, Princeton, Rutland, Shrewsbury, Uxbridge, Whitinsville and West Boylston.

RECONCILIATION AND DEATH

Bellefontaine, Ohio, July 21.—W. S. Harrison, one of the founders of the Ben Hur Order, died in a Dayton hospital from cancer. Although divorced many years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison were remarried a few weeks ago when his critical condition became known.
